* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice

Note.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to Local Governments and Administrations, . . . They relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each province on the [illegible] (or [illegible] mart) day of each fortnight

(The figures state prices in rupees per ten maunds)

NOTE.—The Indian price quotations are market, and not F. O. B., prices. The source of these quotations is the Prices Current published weekly by the Chambers of Commerce. The statistics for London are compiled from Reuter's telegrams.

* The reduced prices were fixed by the Royal Commission to millers commencing 17th September, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

Census of Coal Consumption in India during 1916.

Under orders of the Government of India, a special census was undertaken in 1917 by the Department of Statistics with regard to the consumption of coal in the various industrial establishments in India during 1916. Circular letters were issued to the owners or managing agents, etc., of all coal consuming factories, industrial establishments, etc., whose names and addresses were available, asking for statements of their actual consumption of coal in 1916. The circulars were responded to by all except a few small concerns, viz., certain brick and tile factories, a number of cotton gins and presses, and several oil mills.

The total quantity of coal consumed, arrived at from the returns thus received, amounts to 6,116,000 tons. Adding to this, 5,509,000 tons consumed by railways (according to figures furnished by the Railway Board) and 1,752,000 tons shipped as bunker coal (according to figures furnished by the Collectors of Customs), the total comes to 13,377,000 tons. The total quantity of coal produced in India in 1916 was 17,254,000 tons. The quantity imported from abroad was 34,000 tons and the quantity exported to foreign countries 882,000 tons. The quantity available for consumption, therefore, amounts to 16,406,000 tons, as against 13,377,000 tons, stated above, according to returns of consumption received. The balance (3,029,000 tons) may be debited to (1) consumption at collieries and wastage, (2) consumption in those industrial establishments which did not furnish returns, and (3) domestic consumption. The consumption at collieries and wastage amount to about 2,071,000 tons, estimated at 12 per cent of the total production from all mines (Act and Non-Act mines) in India. The Indian Mining Association are, however, of opinion that recently in consequence of the falling off in output, the wastage has been nearer 14 per cent than 12 per cent.

Detailed figures for the different classes of consumers are given below. Classes of industrial establishments, etc., consuming less than 50,000 tons each, have been included under "Others"

	Consumption in 1916	Percentage of the total production.
	Tons
1 Railways (including railway workshops)	(a) 5,509,000	31·9
2 Bunker coal	(b) 1,752,000	10·2

Total	13,377,000	77·5
Add—Net Exports	848,000	4·9
(c) Consumption at Collieries and wastage	2,071,000	12·0
(c) " on those industrial establishments which did not furnish returns. Domestic consumption.	958,000	5·6
Total (production)	17,254,000	100

(a) Figures for the official year 1916-17.
(b) Includes 628,000 tons per Government vessels and hired transports.
(c) Estimated.

It will be seen from the above table that 32 per cent (or about a third) of the total production of coal in India was consumed by railways, and 10 per cent was exported as bunker coal. The important industries, etc., consuming coal to a considerable extent were : jute mills, cotton mills, and iron and brass foundries (including engineering workshops), 5 per cent each, inland steamers, 3·4 per cent, and brick and tile factories (including potteries and cement works) 2·6 per cent.

Joint Stock Companies.

NOVEMBER, 1917.

Company flotation in war time is always interesting. There were 24 companies registered in November 1917 with an authorised capital of 447 lakhs. For the eight months, April to November 1917, there were 162 companies registered, as against 97 in the corresponding period of the previous year. The authorised capital of these 162 companies was R871 lakhs as against R962 lakhs for 97 companies floated in the same period of 1916. The largest flotation in November was that of Messrs. Tata Sons, Bombay (R225 lakhs) followed by nine Calcutta companies with an authorised capital varying from R75 lakhs to R10 lakhs. The number of companies registered in Bengal in November, 1917, was greater, with one exception, than in any other month since the New Act came into force in April, 1914. The exception was January, 1917, when 22 companies with an authorised capital of Rs. 226 lakhs were registered.

Director of Statistics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, JANUARY 29, 1918.

First WHEAT FORECAST, 1917-18.

This is the first forecast of the wheat crop, prepared in accordance with the new arrangements, regarding the dates, made under orders of the Government of India. The second forecast will issue on the 15th March, the third on the 30th May, and the final memorandum on the 10th August. In view of the importance of the wheat crop at the present time, three intermediate supplementary reports will also be published on or about the 18th February, the 4th April, and the 4th May.

The present forecast is based on reports received from provinces and states which comprise 98·5 per cent of the total wheat acreage of India. The statistics below cover all the important wheat growing areas except Kashmir. The figures set out in this report generally represent the area sown up to the beginning of January. Owing to the lateness of the sowing season, due to the heavy rain of September and October, sowings continued in some places up to that date.

The total area sown is estimated at 33,912,000 acres, as against 31,383,000 acres (the revised figure) in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 8 per cent. It should, however, be noted that this comparison is not strictly correct, since the date of the first forecast has been changed from 31st December to 31st January, and this forecast accordingly contains a more complete account of the sowings than was hitherto possible. The first forecast of last year related to conditions up to the beginning of December, while the present forecast relates, as stated above, to conditions up to the first week of the present month (January). As compared with the final area (32,940,000 acres) of last year, the present estimate shows an increase of 3 per cent, and is the highest on record.

General condition of the crop.—The present condition of the crop is reported to be good, thanks to the copious monsoon of 1917; but the Christmas rains * (always important for the wheat crop of Northern India) are urgently required in parts of the Central Provinces and Delhi. The heavy rain of September and October left ample moisture in the soil, as will be seen from the appended data of rainfall. The sowing season was very favourable, although excessive rain somewhat impeded sowing operations in almost all provinces.

The detailed figures for the provinces are :—

The provincial reports are summarised below :

Punjab (33·3 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown up to the end of December is estimated at 11,604,000 acres (1,303,000 acres being in Native States), as against 10,891,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 6 per cent. The monsoon broke early and gave abundant rain almost everywhere. It was abnormally active in August and September, and disappeared some ten days later than usual. There were a few isolated falls of rain in the beginning of October. During the rest of the month the weather was dry, except for a short interval at the end, when a severe storm caused heavy rainfall in the eastern half of the province. Climatic conditions were, therefore, very favourable for the sowing of winter crops, although in some places the excessive rains did not permit cultural operations at the usual time. Water in canals was sufficient and river floods were high. The abnormally vigorous moonsoon rainfall in August and September stimulated sowings on unirrigated † areas, which are in advance of the actuals of last year by 18 per cent. There was practically no rainfall in the province after the crop was sown, except some slight showers in the Rawalpindi division. Nor was any required, as the moisture left in the soil by the abundant rainfall in the preceding months was sufficient for the germination of the crop, which was on the whole good,

(a) Including Native States. (b) Revised figure.

* Correlations for the Punjab (rabi) wheat crop show that rainfall in December and January is of great importance, as are the cloud, temperature, and humidity in March.

† The unirrigated area under wheat is, on the average of the five years ending 1915-16, about 49 per cent of the total wheat area in the Punjab, 51 per cent in the United Provinces, and 72 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province.

The condition and prospects of the standing crop both on irrigated and unirrigated lands are good, but the low-lying lands, particularly in the sub-montane districts, received, owing to the heavy and long continued monsoon, much less preliminary cultivation than usual, and this factor may eventually affect the outturn. The canals are this winter giving an ample supply of water.

United Provinces (22·8 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 7,050,000 acres, as against 7,200,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year, or a decrease of 2 per cent. As compared with last year's actual area, however, the present estimate shows an increase of 4 per cent. There was heavy rain in September and the early part of October, which afforded ample moisture for sowing the winter crops. Operations were, however, interrupted by a heavy storm towards the end of October, which delayed sowings for about a fortnight beyond the usual date. In Bundelkhand conditions were unusually favourable, and a large area is reported to have been put under wheat. In the other divisions the difficulty in preparing a seed-bed somewhat militated against an appreciable extension of the area. Parts of the Agra and Muttra districts suffered from water-logging, and sowings were short in the areas affected. Some of the early sown fields which suffered from flooding had to be re-sown. November was rainless; there were showers in December, but for the most part they were too light to benefit the crop. Germination was good, and so far the crop promises well. This relates to the condition of the crop up to the 10th January.

Central Provinces and Berar (11·6 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 3,916,000 acres (389,000 acres being in Berar and 129,000 acres in the Native States of Khairagarh and Nandgaon), which is 6 per cent above the figure reported in the first forecast of last year. All the districts contributed towards the increase except Chhindwara, Wardha, Nagpur, Bhandara, and Buldana, but in the last named district sowings were incomplete at the date of report (15th January). The monsoon gave heavy rain throughout the provinces till the end of October, and then somewhat abruptly it stopped. In the heaviest wheat tracts the ground was too heavy for sowings in October. In many districts the land was hurriedly and indifferently prepared, and the ground was hardening rapidly while sowings were in progress. Germination was, on the whole, good, except in parts of Jubbulpore, Narsinghpur, Hoshangabad, Wardha, Nagpur and Yeotmal. In Saugor germination was poor, because the land dried too rapidly. In Wardha, Buldana, and Yeotmal cotton damaged by excessive rain was uprooted, and its place was taken by wheat. The condition of the crop is at present fair in Saugor, Chhindwara, Nagpur, Chanda, Balaghat, and Akola, and generally good in the remaining districts for the time of the year; but rain is urgently required for the crop, especially in the plateau districts.

Bombay and Sind (7·8 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The information is up to the 5th January and is incomplete as sowing continued in places at that date. The total estimated area so far sown in British districts and Native States is 2,609,000 acres (536,000 acres being in Native States including Baroda), as against 2,232,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 17 per cent. Favourable seasonal conditions and expectation of high prices everywhere stimulated cultivation. In Gujarat cultivation extended, especially in the south, with the favourable late rains, and the condition of the crop is so far satisfactory. In the Deccan an extended area has been sown with wheat which has replaced cotton and other crops spoilt by heavy rains. The crop is reported to be generally thriving. In the Karnatak also the condition of the crop is good. In Sind favourable inundation in canal-served areas and plentiful rains in hilly tracts extended cultivation, and the crop promises well.

Bihar and Orissa (4·2 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area so far sown is reported to be 1,210,000 acres, which is 4 per cent above the area reported in the first forecast of last year. In September and October heavy rain was received in most districts. In November there was no rain except in Orissa and in parts of the Santhal Parganas, Ranchi, and Palamau districts. In December light showers fell in parts of the province. Sowings were mostly normal. The weather conditions have been favourable so far for the growth of the crop, and the present condition of the crop is reported to be generally good.

North-West Frontier Province (3·3 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown up to the end of December is estimated at 1,182,000 acres, as against 1,016,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 16 per cent. The increase, which is shared by all the districts and agencies except Peshawar, is attributed to timely and copious rainfall at sowing time, the efforts of district and revenue officers to stimulate cultivation, and the special advances granted on privileged terms for the extension of wheat cultivation. The season has so far been favourable, and the prospects of the crop are at present normal.

Bengal (0·4 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area so far sown is estimated at 123,000 acres, as against 124,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year. In September the rainfall was about normal, but in October the fall was much in excess throughout the province, and sowings were in consequence late. Subsequent dry weather has somewhat improved the situation. The present outlook of the crop is reported as fair.

Delhi (0·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area sown is estimated at 55,000 acres as against 35,000 acres reported in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 57 per cent. The increase is attributed to sufficient and timely rains. The season is reported to be favourable, but rain is badly wanted.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·04 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 16,000 acres, which is 36 per cent below the area reported in the first forecast of last year. Owing to excessive rainfall, plague, and malaria sowings have been late. In some villages they are still in progress. The seedlings are reported to be doing well.

Central India (9·4 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 3,404,000 acres, as against 2,939,000 acres (the revised figure) in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 16 per cent. The condition of the crop is reported to be only fair in Bhopal but

	Acres	Acres
Gwalior	1,402,459	1,160,477

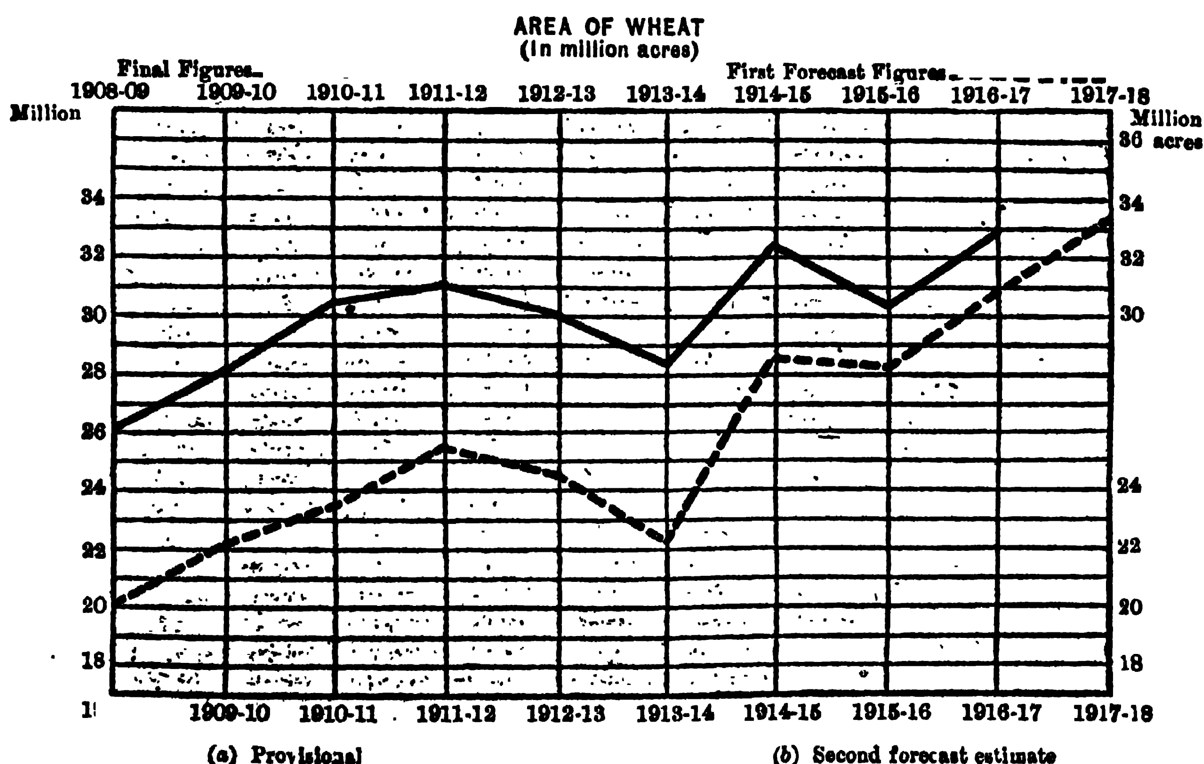
Southern States	193,380	167,503
Total	3,404,103	2,938,772



Rajputana (2·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 1,537,000 acres, as against 1,058,000 acres (the revised figure) in the first forecast of last year, or an increase of 45 per cent, attributed to favourable conditions at sowing time. The condition of the crop is reported to be good. Detailed figures for the States are as follows :—

Hyderabad (2·9 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 1,204,000 acres which is 20 per cent above the area reported in the first forecast of last year. Sowings generally commenced at the usual time. The condition of the crop is generally fair to good, and if the season continues favourable there is every hope of its being normal.

Mysore.—(0·01 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area sown is estimated at 2,000 acres, the same as reported in the first forecast of last year. The condition of the crop is generally reported to be good.

Chart.—The chart below shows the preliminary estimates of acreage and the final estimates for the last nine years for the whole of India.

From un-official sources it appears that the condition of the new winter wheat crop in the United States of America is satisfactory, and over 42,000,000 acres have been seeded. Droughty conditions prevail in the south-west, and as a consequence the crop there is not doing well. In Russia the sowing of winter crops is nearly completed, and the condition of the crop is satisfactory. In the Argentine the weather recently has not been favourable for the crop, frosts having caused damage in the southern regions. The crop in the northern regions is reported to be doing well, and the wheat is said to be of excellent quality. In Australia owing to recent rains harvesting is being delayed in New South Wales; elsewhere normal weather appears to prevail, and the harvest prospects are favourable. In Italy the seeding of the winter crop has been mostly done under favourable conditions; and in spite of the shortage of labour, the area sown is larger than that of last year.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Delhi, the 7th February, 1918.

No. 14.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 67 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1915, the Governor General in Council has, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council, made the following amendments in the rules authorising, at any meeting of the Indian Legislative Council, the discussion of the Annual Financial Statement of the Governor General in Council, which were published under the notification of the Government of India in the Legislative Department No. 23, dated 15th November, 1909 :—

Amendments in the Rules for the discussion of the Annual Financial Statement in the Indian Legislative Council,

1. For sub-rule (2) of rule 3, substitute the following, namely :—

" (2) On this day, after the Finance Member has stated any changes in the figures of the Financial Statement which circumstances may since have rendered necessary, and has made any explanations of that Statement which he may think fit, a general discussion of the Financial Statement shall take place.

" (3) At such discussion any Member shall be at liberty to offer any observations he may wish to make on the Statement as a whole, or on any question of principle involved, but no Member shall be permitted to move any resolution nor shall the Statement be submitted to the vote of the Council.

" (4) The Finance Member shall have a general right of reply at the end of the discussion.

" (5) It shall be open to the President, if he thinks fit, to prescribe a time limit for speeches."

2. After rule 3, insert the following rule :—

" 3A. (1) On such day after the general discussion of the Financial Statement, as may be appointed in this behalf by the Governor General, the second stage of the discussion of the Financial Statement shall commence.

(2) On this day any Member shall be at liberty to move any resolution entered in his name in the list of business relating to any alteration in taxation, any new loan, or any additional grant to Local Governments, proposed or mentioned in such Statement or explanatory memorandum; and the Council shall thereupon proceed to discuss each such resolution in the manner hereinafter prescribed."

3. In sub-rule (1) of rule 4, for the words " second stage " substitute the words " third stage."

4. To clause (c) of rule 6, add the words " or explanatory memorandum."

5. After rule 10, insert under the heading " Discussion of Resolutions " the following rule :—

" 10A. (1) A Member in whose name a resolution appears on the list of business shall, when called on, either—

(a) withdraw the resolution, in which case he shall confine himself to a mere statement to that effect ; or

(b) move the resolution, in which case he shall commence his speech by a formal motion in the terms appearing on the list of business.

(2) If the Member when called on is absent, the resolution standing in his name shall be considered to have been withdrawn."

6. For sub-rule (2) of rule 11, substitute the following, namely :—

" (2) No Member shall speak more than once to any motion except with the permission of the President for the purpose of making an explanation :

Provided that the mover may speak in reply and the Member in charge may submit any final observations which he may wish to make. "

7. In rule 12, omit the words " except with the permission of the President."

And for the proviso to the same rule substitute the following, namely :—

" Provided that the mover of a resolution, when moving the same, the Member in charge, when speaking for the first time, and, with the permission of the President, any other Member may speak for thirty minutes."

8. For rule 14, substitute the following, namely :—

" 14 (1) A Member who has moved a resolution shall not withdraw the same except by leave of the Council.

(2) No discussion shall be permitted on a motion for leave to withdraw except with the permission of the President."

9. For rule 16, substitute the following, namely :—

" 16. When any resolution involving several points has been discussed, it shall be in the discretion of the President to divide the resolution and put each or any point separately to the vote as he may think fit."

10. Renumber rule 20 as 20 (1), and omit the words " disallowed under rule 8 or ".

And to the same rule add the following sub-rule :—

" (2) When a resolution has been disallowed under rule 8, no resolution raising substantially the same question shall be moved during the same session."

11. To rule 21, add the following sub-rule :—

" (3) No discussion of the Budget shall be permitted nor shall it be submitted to the vote of the Council, but the President may make such observations in regard thereto as he may consider necessary."

12. Omit rules 22 and 23.

13. In rule 27, omit the words " or the Budget."

No. 15.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 67 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1915, the Governor General in Council has, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council, made the following amendments in the rules authorising, at any meeting of the Indian Legislative Council, the discussion of any matter of general public interest, which were published under the notification of the Government of India in the Legislative Department, No. 24, dated 15th November, 1909 : —

Amendments in the Rules for the discussion of Matters of General Public Interest in the Indian Legislative Council.

1. After rule 10, insert the following rule :—

"10A. (1) A Member in whose name a resolution appears on the list of business shall, when called on, either—

(a) withdraw the resolution, in which case he shall confine himself to a mere statement to that effect ; or

(b) move the resolution, in which case he shall commence his speech by a formal motion in the terms appearing on the list of business.

(2) If the Member when called on is absent, the resolution standing in his name shall be considered to have been withdrawn. "

2. For sub-rule (2) of rule 11, substitute the following, namely :—

" (2) No Member shall speak more than once to any motion except with the permission of the President for the purpose of making an explanation :

Provided that the mover may speak in reply and the Member in charge may submit any final observations which he may wish to make."

3. In the proviso to rule 12, after the words " Member in charge " insert the words " when speaking for the first time."

4. For rule 18, substitute the following, namely :—

" 18 (1) A Member who has moved a resolution or an amendment of a resolution shall not withdraw the same except by leave of the Council.

(2) No discussion shall be permitted on a motion for leave to withdraw except with the permission of the President. "

5. For rule 21, substitute the following, namely :—

"21. When any resolution involving several points has been discussed, it shall be in the discretion of the President to divide the resolution and put each or any point separately to the vote as he may think fit."

6. Renumber rule 25 as 25 (1), and omit the words " disallowed under rule 7 or ".

And to the same rule add the following sub-rule :—

" (2) When a resolution has been disallowed under rule 7, no resolution raising substantially the same question shall be moved during the same session."

MINT.

Delhi, the 6th February 191 .

No. 306-F.—The following Royal Proclamation establishing a branch of the Royal Mint at Bombay is published for general information :—

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE R.I.

WHEREAS under the Coinage Act, 1870, it is lawful for Us, with the advice of Our Privy Council, from time to time, by Proclamation to direct the establishment of any branch of Our Royal Mint in England in any British possession, and determine the extent to which such branch is to be deemed part of Our said Mint and the extent to which coins issued therefrom are to be current and to be a legal tender, and to be deemed to be issued from Our said Mint :

And whereas Our Governor-General of India in Council has applied for the establishment of a branch of Our Mint at Bombay :

And whereas Our Secretary of State for India in Council has resolved that if a branch Mint is established at Bombay there shall in each year be placed at the disposal of the Deputy Master of the branch Mint such sums out of the Revenues of India as may in the opinion of the Lords Commissioners of Our Treasury be required to cover all expenses connected with the maintenance of the branch Mint, on the understanding that any surplus shown by the certificate of the Comptroller and Auditor General in Our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to remain after the close of each year will be repaid to Our said Secretary of State.

We, therefore, in pursuance of the said Act and of all other powers enabling Us in that behalf, do hereby, with the advice of Our Privy Council, proclaim, direct, and ordain, as follows :—

1. A branch of the Mint (in this Proclamation referred to as the Bombay branch Mint), shall be established at or near Bombay, and shall be situate either in the buildings of the Indian Mint at Bombay or on such other site as the Governor-General of India in Council may approve.

2. Gold coins of the same denominations, designs, weights, and fineness as gold coins coined at the Mint may be coined at the Bombay branch Mint, and any gold coins so coined shall be subject to the allowance of the same remedy as gold coins coined at the Mint.

3. The Master of the Mint shall prepare and transmit dies for the gold coins to be coined at the Bombay branch Mint.

4. The gold coins coined in pursuance of this Proclamation at the Bombay branch Mint shall be deemed to have been issued from the Mint, and shall be current, and a legal tender in like manner and to the like extent as if they had been coined and issued in England.

5. Subject to the provisions of this Proclamation, the Bombay branch Mint shall, for the purpose of the coinage of gold coins, be deemed to be part of the Mint, and accordingly—

(a) The Deputy Master of the Bombay branch Mint shall comply with all directions he may receive from the Master of the Mint, whether as regards the expenditure to be incurred, or the returns to be made, or the transmission of specimen coins to England, or otherwise; and

(b) The said specimen coins shall be subject to the trial of the pyx under section twelve of the Coinage Act, 1870, so, however, that they shall be examined separately from the coins coined in England or at any other branch of the Mint; and

(c) The Deputy Master of the Bombay branch Mint and other officers and persons employed for the purpose of carrying on the business of the branch Mint may be appointed, promoted, suspended and removed, and their duties assigned and salaries awarded in accordance with the provisions of section fifteen of the Coinage Act, 1870.

6. The Governor-General of India in Council shall cause the store of gold bullion and coin at the Bombay branch Mint to be inspected half-yearly, and cause the persons inspecting it to make a report thereon to the Deputy Master of the Bombay branch Mint, stating the exact amount of coin and bullion inspected by them; and the report shall be transmitted by the Deputy Master to the Master of the Mint in London.

7. The Master of the Mint shall, in the execution of this Proclamation, act in accordance with any regulations made or directions given by the Lords Commissioners of Our Treasury.

8. In this Proclamation—

The expression "the Mint" means Our Royal Mint in England.

The expression "Deputy Master of the Bombay branch Mint" includes any person who lawfully exercises at the Bombay branch Mint the authority of Deputy Master.

9. The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the construction of this Proclamation as it applies to the construction of an Act of Parliament.

10. This Proclamation shall come into force in India on the expiration of six months from the date thereof, or if it is sooner promulgated in India, on the date on which it is so promulgated, and may be cited as the Bombay Mint Proclamation, 1917.

Given at Our Court at Buckingham Palace, this Twenty-first day of December, in the year of our Lord One thousand nine hundred and seventeen, and in the Eighth year of Our Reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to award a Bar to the Distinguished Service Order to :—

* * * * *

†Capt. (temp. Maj.) Henry St. George Stewart Scott, D.S.O., Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and determination when with 250 men he captured 373 of the enemy. He was twice held up by strong entrenched picquets, who were covering parties attempting to cross the river in pontoons, but he pushed on under heavy fire inflicting great loss on those crossing and prevented any further attempt at escape.

* * * * *

†The names marked † appeared in the London Gazette dated 17th Mar. 1917 without deeds.

* * * * *

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to confer the Military Cross on the undermentioned Officers * * * in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the Field :—

* * * * *

Capt. Ronald Playfair St. Vincent Bernard, Gurkha Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource. When all the officers of the attacking parties had become casualties he organised a strong point in the enemy's line under heavy shell and bomb fire. He set a splendid example to his men.

* * * * *

Capt. Francis Robert Farquhar, Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his squadron with great dash and obtained valuable information. He was subsequently wounded, but continued to direct the operations in hand.

* * * * *

‡2nd Lt. Alfred Marshall Langton Harrison, Gurkha Rif.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative when in command of an advanced party during night operations. He pushed forward with great dash under heavy fire, rushing two picquets with the bayonet and successfully bombing three pontoons full of the enemy.

* * * *

2nd Lt. Dennis George Whigham-Teasdale, I A.R.O.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He handled a machine gun with great skill, and thereby enabled the rear guard to withdraw at a critical time from a difficult situation.

* * * * * *

‡The names marked ‡ appeared in the London Gazette dated 17th March 1917 without deeds.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 6th February, 1918 :—

No. 1 OF 1918.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Forest Act, 1878 ; It is hereby enacted as follows :— VII of 1878.

Short title. 1. This Act may be called the Indian Forest (Amendment) Act, 191 .

Amendment of section 29, Act VII of 1878. 2. In clause (b) of section 29 of the Indian Forest Act, 1878 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), for the word "twenty" the word "thirty" shall be substituted. VII of 1878.

Insertion of new section 52A, Act VII of 1878. 3. After section 52 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Power to release property seized under section 52. "52A. Any Forest-officer of a rank not inferior to that of a Ranger who, or whose subordinate, has seized any tools, boats, carts or cattle under the provisions of section 52 may release the same on the execution by the owner thereof of a bond for the production of the property so released, if and when so required, before the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the offence on account of which the seizure has been made."

Amendment of section 63, Act VII of 1878. 4. In section 63 of the said Act after the words 'without unnecessary delay' the words "and subject to the provisions of this Act as to release on a bond" shall be inserted.

Insertion of new section 63A, Act VII of 1878. 5. After section 63 of the said Act, the following section shall be inserted, namely :—

Power to release on a bond a person arrested. "63A. Any Forest-officer of a rank not inferior to that of a Ranger who, or whose subordinate, has arrested any person under the provisions of section 63 may release such person on his executing a bond to appear, if and when so required, before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or before the officer in charge of the nearest police-station."

6. (1) Section 78 of the said Act shall be re-numbered section 78 (1), and in the same section for the words "shall assist any Forest-officer or Police-officer—

Amendment of section 78, Act VII of 1878.

(a) in extinguishing any fire occurring in such forest;

(b) in preventing any fire which may occur in the vicinity of such forest from spreading to such forest," the following words shall be substituted, namely:—

"shall forthwith take steps whether so required by any Forest-officer or Police-officer or not—

(a) to extinguish any forest fire in such forest of which he has knowledge or information;

(b) to prevent by any lawful means in his power any fire in the vicinity of such forest of which he has knowledge or information from spreading to such forest."

(2) To the same section the following sub-section shall be added, namely:—

"(2) Any person who, being bound so to do, without lawful excuse (the burden of proving which shall lie upon such person) fails—

(a) to furnish without unnecessary delay to the nearest Forest-officer or Police-officer any information required by sub-section (1);

(b) to take steps as required by sub-section (1) to extinguish any forest fire in a reserved or protected forest;

(c) to prevent as required by sub-section (1), any fire in the vicinity of such forest from spreading to such forest; or

(d) to assist any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid in preventing the commission in such forest of any forest-offence, or, when there is reason to believe that any such offence has been committed in such forest, in discovering and arresting the offender, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

7. In section 84 of the said Act,—

Amendment of section 84, Act VII of 1878

(1) for the words "in compliance with any rule under this Act" the words "in accordance with any provision of this Act or in compliance with any rule made thereunder" shall be substituted;

(2) for the word "instrument" wherever it occurs the words "bond or instrument" shall be substituted.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE existing law requires that a person arrested by a Forest-officer for a forest offence should, without unnecessary delay, be taken or sent before the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case or to the officer in charge of the nearest police-station This procedure has been found to entail hardship on the accused when minor offences have been committed and consequent arrests are made in places at a distance from a Magistrate's Court or from a police-station. One of the objects of the Bill is to mitigate the hardship so caused by conferring upon Forest-officers not below the rank of Forest Ranger the power to release an offender on his executing a bond to appear if and when so required, before a Magistrate or before the officer in charge of a police-station and also the power to release the tools, boats, carts and cattle seized in connection with a forest offence provided the owner executes a bond to produce them if and when called upon to do so.

Another object of the Bill is to make it incumbent upon privilege holders, their servants and village officers to extinguish and prevent forest fires on their own initiative instead of merely requiring them to render assistance to Police and Forest officers when such assistance is requisitioned At present when a fire occurs in a forest and no Forest or Police officer is present on the scene the privilege holders and others may neglect to take any steps to extinguish the fire or prevent it from spreading and there are no means of compelling them to exert themselves.

The Bill also extends the maximum period for which a protected forest may be closed by a Local Government, from 20 to 30 years, as owing to the damage done by persons holding grazing rights in such forests it is, in many cases, impossible to secure proper regeneration in a shorter period than 30 years

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 2nd February 1918.

Burma.—The week was rainless. Reaping of winter rice has been completed. Threshing and winnowing are proceeding in Upper Burma. Reaping of miscellaneous winter crops is practically finished. Cultivation of spring rice and other crops is progressing. Standing crops are good. Livestock are healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has fallen slightly to Rs. 94 per hundred baskets but is still below normal. The market for white rice is quiet at Rs. 247-8 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable but rain is wanted in Cachar and Nowgong. Harvesting of pulses and mustard, pressing of sugarcane, plucking of cotton, pruning of tea, transplantation of spring rice and ploughing for autumn and winter rice and jute are in progress. Outturn of pulses and mustard is fair, but that of sugarcane and cotton is fair to good. Prospects of other crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from two districts. Price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—The week was rainless. Threshing of winter paddy is still progressing in the western districts. Harvesting of sugarcane and early spring crops and preparatory tillage for the next autumn crops are proceeding. The prospects of standing spring crops are generally reported to be satisfactory, but some rain is needed. The average price of common rice for the province has risen by about 12 per cent. as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing of paddy continues. Pressing of sugarcane is in progress. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in four districts, fallen in four and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Except a slight fall around Agra there was no rain during the week. Weeding and irrigation of poppy and spring crops and pressing of sugarcane continue. Fields are being prepared for sugarcane and extra crops. Slight damage by frost is reported in Cawnpore and Fatehpur, otherwise condition of standing crops is good. Prospects are favourable. Very little cattle disease is reported. Fodder is dear in places. Markets are full. Prices are stationary with a tendency to rise.

Punjab.—The weather was dry. Rain is badly wanted everywhere for spring crops. Pressing of sugarcane continues. The yield is normal to good. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Toria is being harvested in parts of the west, the yield being normal. Stocks of food grains are generally sufficient. Cattle are healthy. Fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices are generally stationary but have fallen slightly in some districts. They range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in some south-eastern districts, where they range between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat—Rawalpindi 7¼, Lahore 8, Lyallpur 8¼ and Ferozepore 8¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—The week was rainless. Sowings are satisfactory and normal. Prospects of spring crops are good. Sugarcane is being pressed and gur made. The outturn is average. Wheat—Peshawar 7$\frac{1}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan 9$\frac{6}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—The prices are rising. There is nothing else noteworthy.

Kashmir.—No rain fell during the week. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal.

Rajputana.—The weather was cool. Standing crops are being irrigated. Autumn prospects and agricultural stock are fair. Prices are steady.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was practically nil. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been clear and cool with occasional clouds. Standing crops, particularly wheat, are suffering for want of rain but prospects are still fair or good. Prices of food grains generally show a tendency to rise, particularly in the Nagpur Division. Condition of agricultural stock is satisfactory.

Feudatory States :—Spring crops are generally in good condition.

Bombay.—Standing crops are good except in parts of Sind where they have been damaged by frost and insects. Autumn harvesting continues in parts of Deccan Cotton picking continues in Hyderabad, Thar and Parker, Nawabshah, West Khandesh, Dharwar and Kathiawar. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains have risen slightly in Carnatic and are generally steady elsewhere.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Autumn and early rice harvests have been completed. Spring crops are generally fair, though juar suffered from blight or excessive rain in parts of 13 districts. Late rice is fair and is being weeded and sown in parts. Cattle are healthy. Prices of grains are high and almost steady.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Reaping of rice and picking of coffee and harvesting of rice continue. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras. – The week was generally rainless except in the South. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding, with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are fairly steady with a slight tendency to rise.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

(FAMINE.)

Delhi, the 8th February 1918.

Fourteenth Report of the Board of Management of the Indian People's Famine Trust covering the calendar year 1917.

1. In addition to the annual meeting held on the 29th January 1917, a meeting of the Board was held on the 24th March 1917.

2. The report and the annual accounts for 1916 were passed at the annual meeting and a copy was forwarded to the Government of India in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture in accordance with rule 16 of the rules for the administration of the Trust.

3. At the meeting held on the 24th March it was decided to invest Rs.1,24,925 in the War Loan 1929-47 so as to secure Government Promissory Notes of the nominal value of Rs. 1,31,500, and to exercise the conversion rights bestowed by the investment to the fullest extent, by utilizing a portion of the existing holdings in 3½ per cent. paper for the purpose. The purchase was duly effected and Rs. 1,97,200 of the 3½ per cent. loan of 1900-01 were converted into Rs. 1,60,000 of the War Loan of 1929-47.

4. The interest realised during the year was utilised partly towards the investment referred to above, the balance being placed to the credit of the current account of the Trust.

5. A statement of the assets of the Trust and an abstract of the accounts are given in Schedules I and II annexed.

6. The miscellaneous receipts shown in Schedule II represent the annual subscription of Rs. 500 by the Raja of Athgarh for 1914-15.

7. The endowment fund stands at Rs. 28,10,000 as in last year.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

NOTICE IN REGARD TO APPOINTMENTS IN 1918.

It is the present intention of the Secretary of State for India in Council not to appoint any Europeans as Assistant Engineers in the Indian Public Works and State Railway Departments in 1918. Applications for appointments will, however, be accepted from Natives of India who are qualified under Regulation 5, and should be submitted not earlier than 1st February 1918 and not later than 31st March 1918. Candidates must have attained the age of 21 and not attained the age of 24 years on 1st July 1918, save as provided in Regulation 3.

INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT AND INDIAN STATE RAILWAYS.

REGULATIONS AS TO APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT ENGINEERS.

[The Secretary of State is unable to give any undertaking that the Regulations will remain unaltered in the future.]

1. Until further notice the Secretary of State for India in Council will, during each year, make a number of appointments of Assistant Engineers in the Public Works and State Railway Departments of the Government of India.

In making these appointments he will act with the advice of a Selection Committee, including at least one eminent representative of the Engineering profession.

2. Applications for the appointments must be made on a printed form to be obtained from the Secretary, Public Works Department, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W., and to be returned so as to reach him not earlier than 1st February,* and not later than 31st March in the year in which the applicant is a candidate.

3. A candidate must have attained the age of 21 and not attained the age of 24 years on the first day of July of the year in which he offers himself for appointment, except that a candidate not over 27 years of age on that date will be allowed to deduct from his actual age any period passed by him since 4th August 1914 in the Navy or Army or in any other employment which the Secretary of State may decide to recognise in the case of any candidate as equivalent to Naval or Military employment for the purpose of this Regulation: provided that a certificate or certificates will be required establishing in the opinion of the Secretary of State the period and satisfactory character of the candidate's Naval, Military, or other employment.

[N.B.—Natives of India must obtain a certificate of age and nationality in the form explained in Appendix II. As the production of this certificate is a necessary condition of appointment, intending candidates are advised to procure it without delay. The certificate should be forwarded to the India Office together with the candidate's form of application or at the earliest subsequent opportunity.]

4. Every candidate, except as provided in Regulation 5, must be a natural born subject of His Majesty of European descent, and at the time of his birth his father must have been a British subject, either natural-born or naturalised in the United Kingdom. The decision of the Secretary of State in Council whether a candidate satisfies this condition shall be final. A candidate must also be of good moral character and sound bodily health and, in the opinion of the Secretary of State for India in Council, in all respects suitable to hold an appointment in the Indian Public Works Department or State Railway Department.

5. Natives of India who, save as hereinafter provided, are British subjects, and are not qualified under Regulation 4, are eligible for appointment, and shall be selected to the extent of 10 per cent. of the total number of Assistant Engineers thus recruited, if otherwise duly qualified.

Provided that a ruler or subject of any State in India in respect of whom the Governor-General in Council has made a declaration under Section 96A of the Government of India Act, 1915, as amended by Section 3 of the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916, will be considered eligible.

* Applications from candidates not resident in the United Kingdom may be submitted before this date and, since the India Office cannot undertake to correspond with candidates except by letter, such applications should be submitted as early as possible.

6. Candidates must produce evidence that they have either (1) obtained one of the University degrees mentioned in Appendix I.; or (2) passed the A.M.I.C.E. examination; or (3) obtained such other diploma or distinction in Engineering as the Secretary of State may decide to accept in any particular case.

7. It is preferred that candidates should have taken a college course and obtained one of the degrees mentioned in Appendix I. It is advisable that in addition they should have had at least one full year's practical experience of Civil Engineering under a qualified civil engineer at the time when they appear before the Selection Committee. Those whose qualifying diploma has been obtained without a college course should have had a full three years of such practical experience. In the event of any candidate being selected who has not, in the opinion of the Selection Committee, had sufficient practical experience, he may be required to undergo, after arrival in India, such period of probation in charge of works as may be decided upon, and his final appointment will be made dependent upon the result of such probation.

8. Candidates must be prepared, if called upon, to attend at the India Office, at their own expense, for a personal interview with the Selection Committee, which usually meets at the end of April or early in May in each year.

9. They will further be required, before final appointment by the Secretary of State in Council, to appear, at their own expense, before the Medical Board at the India Office for examination as to their physical fitness for service in India.

The Regulations governing the physical examination of candidates for the Public Works and State Railway Departments of the Government of India are given in Appendix V.

*10. Selected candidates will also be required to satisfy the Secretary of State of their ability to ride.

11. They will on appointment be provided with a free first-class passage to India and they will be expected to proceed thither about the end of September in the year in which they are appointed.

Their pay will begin from the date of their landing in India, and, if they so desire, they will be able to obtain an advance of two months' pay, recoverable by monthly instalments of one-third of salary. Of this advance a portion not exceeding one-half may be drawn in England.

12. They will enter the Service as Assistant Engineers, on a salary of Rs. 4,560 a year (equal, at 1*s.* 4*d.* the rupee, to 304*l.* a year).

13. The instruments required by Assistant Engineers are supplied to them in India.

14. Particulars as to pay, pension, &c., are contained in Appendices III and IV.

India Office,
November 1917.

NOTE FOR THE INFORMATION AND GUIDANCE OF CANDIDATES.

The Selection Committee of 1906 drew attention to the subjects which were held to be of most importance for the Public Works Service, viz.,

Pure Mathematics, including a knowledge of the differential and integral calculus.
Applied Mathematics.
Geometrical and Engineering Drawing.
Surveying and Geodesy.
Strength of Materials and Theory of Structures.
Hydraulics.
Heat Engines.
Materials used in Construction.
Building Construction.—Wood and metal work, limes and cements, and building with stone, brick, and concrete.
Knowledge of the principles of road-making, waterworks, sanitary and railway engineering. (Important.)
The Selection Committee were further of opinion that all candidates should have had some workshop training.

* Selected candidates will be examined by the Civil Service Commissioners as to their ability to ride, and will be required to obtain either—

(a) a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners that they are sufficiently at home in the saddle for the efficient performance of all the duties of the Indian Public Works and State Railway Departments; or (b) a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners of minimum proficiency in riding.

In the latter case they will be subjected, on their arrival in India, to such further tests in riding as may be prescribed by their Government.

Candidates are warned that the certificate of minimum proficiency in riding, without which they will not be allowed to proceed to India, is only granted to those who can qualify in a series of tests, which includes jumping.

The chief tests will be saddling and bridling; mounting and dismounting; trotting and cantering; riding at a trot without stirrups; riding at a trot with stirrups but without reins, jumping a hedge hurdle about 3 feet in height.

Although the examination will, in the main, be confined to these points, the examiner will not be debarred from applying any other tests which may appear desirable.

APPENDICES.

APPENDIX I.

LIST OF DEGREES REFERRED TO IN PARAGRAPH 6.

The degrees shown in Lists A and B are accepted without reservation in the case of candidates who matriculated on or before 30th June 1914. The special conditions applicable to candidates who matriculated on or after 1st July 1914 are stated in the Notes appended to the two lists.

Candidates who rely on a degree in "Mechanical" or "Electrical" Engineering or in "Naval Architecture" should have had at least one year's practical experience in Civil Engineering.

List A.

National University of Ireland.—B.E.

Bristol.—B.Sc. in "Civil" or "Mechanical" Engineeing.

Note to List B.—In the case of candidates who matriculated after 30th June 1914 the degrees in List B will be accepted only if (1) the Matriculation or other Entrance Examination accepted by the Institution of Civil Engineers to the Engineering course in the University has been passed, and (2) a regular course of study occupying not less than three Academical years has been pursued in the University between the passing of such Matriculation or other Entrance Examination and the passing of the final examination for the degree.

But Indians who have taken an Indian degree which exempts them from part of the University course will be regarded as having satisfied condition (1), and will be exempted from condition (2) if their degree has been obtained in less than three years in accordance with the Regulations of the University concerned.

APPENDIX II.

Particulars regarding the Certificate of Age and Nationality to be obtained by Candidates who are Natives of India.

A.—Rules for Candidates born within His Majesty's Dominions.

1. A candidate who is resident in British India must obtain a certificate signed either (a) by the Secretary to Government (or his lawful deputy) of the province in which his family resides, or (b) by the Commissioner (or his lawful deputy) of the District in which his family resides.

2. A candidate who is resident in a Native State must obtain a certificate signed by the highest Political Officer (or his lawful deputy) accredited to the State in which his family resides.

3. The certificate required must be in the following form—

"I hereby certify that has submitted the proofs of his birth detailed below, * and has satisfactorily shown that he was actually born on or about the date stated, viz., the day of 18 , at a place within His Majesty's dominions."

* (Here enter details.)

and the nature of the evidence produced must be such as to satisfy the officer who issues the certificate.

4. The documentary evidence which a candidate may be expected to produce in order to obtain such certificate comprises :—

(a) The horoscope.

(b) Family books.

(c) Tradesmen's account books showing entries relating to the birth.

(d) The record of admission in the registers of the school in which the candidate was educated, and the record of the candidate's age at various periodical school examinations.

(e) If the candidate is matriculated, a certified copy of his application to the Registrar in Form A.

Oral testimony from persons able to give relevant evidence may also be taken.

5. If a candidate has proceeded to England without obtaining a certificate, the certificate may be granted to his father or guardian on production of the requisite evidence.

B.—Rules for Candidates not born within His Majesty's Dominions.

6. The rules are the same as the foregoing except that a candidate not born within His Majesty's dominions must also prove that he is the son or grandson of a person born in those dominions, and in his case the form of certificate must be not as in paragraph 3 above but as follows :—

"I hereby certify that has submitted the proofs of his birth detailed below * and has satisfactorily shown that he was actually born on or about the date stated, viz., the day of 18 , and that he was born at a place without His Majesty's dominions but that his $\frac{\text{father}}{\text{paternal grandfather}}$ was a person born in those dominions."

* (Here enter details.)

PARTICULARS RELATING TO PENSIONS, PROVIDENT FUND, AND LEAVE.

[N.B.—This Appendix is compiled from the regulations for the time being, and is subject to alterations from time to time. The full leave and pension rules are contained in the Civil Service Regulations published by the Government of India.]

1. The following is a summary of the principal pension rules applicable to Engineers appointed to the Imperial Service by the Secretary of State from the United Kingdom.

An officer is eligible for a pension on voluntary retirement after completing 20 years' qualifying service or attaining the age of 55 years. If at an earlier date he is compelled to retire from the Service through ill-health not occasioned by irregular or intemperate habits, he becomes eligible for an invalid pension or a gratuity according to the length of his service.

The amount of pension or gratuity is regulated as follows :—

After a service of less than 10 years, an invalid gratuity not exceeding one month's emoluments for each completed year of service.

After a service of not less than 10 years an invalid pension not exceeding the following amounts :—

Years of Completed Service.	Maximum Limit of Pension.
10	Rs. 1,000 a year.
15, 16, 17, 18, 19	3,000 "

* Officers of the Assistant Class will ordinarily pass into the executive class in the 11th year of service, but no Imperial Engineer may draw more than Rs. 9,600 per annum unless he holds charge of a division or a charge of equal importance.

After a service of not less than 20 years, a retiring pension not exceeding the following amounts:—

Years of Completed Service.	Maximum Limit of Pension.
20 to 24	Rs. 4,000 a year.
25 and above	5,000 „

Officers who have shown special energy and efficiency during an effective service of three years in certain appointments may, at the discretion of the Government of India, be allowed an additional pension of Rs. 1,000 a year, subject to the condition that the officer must not retire voluntarily before the completion of a total qualifying service of 28 years.

Subject to certain prescribed conditions, rupee pensions are now issued at the rate of exchange of 1*s*. 9*d*. the rupee to pensioners residing in countries in which the Indian Government rupee is not legal tender.

2. A general provident fund to which all Civil Engineers entering the Public Works Department in the future will subscribe has been established for all Civil Engineers of the Department on the following basis:—

(1) The contribution is compulsory up to 6¼ per cent., on salaries, with not more than a further 9⅜ per cent. voluntary contributions. Subscriptions on leave of any kind are optional.

(2) Compound interest on such payment is annually credited by Government to each officer subscribing, the rate being at present 4 per cent. per annum.

(3) The sum which thus accumulates to the credit of an officer is his absolute property, subject to the rules of the Fund, and is handed over to him unconditionally on quitting the Service; or in the event of his death before retirement to such person or persons as, under the rules of the Fund for the time being in force, may be entitled thereto.

(4) Other forms of life insurance will, however, if they fulfil certain conditions, be accepted in lieu of the contributions in (1).

LEAVE.

3. The following is a summary of the principal regulations relating to the leave admissible to Engineers appointed to the Imperial Service by the Secretary of State from the United Kingdom.

(a) Short Leave.

4. Privilege leave is a holiday which may be granted to the extent of one eleventh part of the time that an officer has been on duty without interruption; and it may be accumulated up to three months, earned by 33 months' duty. During privilege leave the officer retains a lien on his appointment, and receives an allowance equal to the salary which he would receive if he were on duty in the appointment on which he has a lien. An interval of not less than six months must elapse between two periods of absence on privilege leave.

Privilege leave may be prefixed to furlough, special leave, or extraordinary leave without allowances. The whole period of leave thus taken in combination is known as combined leave. Combined leave cannot be granted for a shorter period than six months, nor, except on medical certificate, may it be extended beyond two years.

5. Extraordinary leave without allowances may be granted in case of necessity, and, except in certain specified cases, only when no other kind of leave is by rule admissible. It may be granted in continuation of other leave.

6. Subsidiary leave in India for a minimum of ten days, usually with half average salary, may be granted to an officer proceeding on or returning from leave out of India, or on retirement, to enable him to reach the port of embarkation or to rejoin his appointment. It is admissible only at the end, and not at the beginning, of combined leave.

7. Short leave is also granted to enable officers to appear at examinations, etc.

(b) Long Leave.

8. Furlough and special leave with allowances (see paragraph 10) are admissible to an aggregate maximum amount of six years during an officer's service. The amount of furlough "earned" is one-fourth of an officer's active service, and the amount "due" is that amount less any enjoyed.

Furlough without medical certificate can, if due, be generally taken after eight years' active service, and again after intervals of not less than three years' continuous service. It is limited to two years at a time.

Furlough on medical certificate may be granted (a) to an officer who has rendered three years' continuous service, for not more than two years, but capable of extension up to three years, and (b) to an officer who has not rendered three years' continuous service, up to one year in any case, and up to such longer period, if any (but not exceeding two years), as the officer may have furlough "due" to him.

9. The allowances admissible during furlough are :—

(1) During the first two years of furlough without medical certificate and during so much of furlough with medical certificate as may be "due,"—half average salary subject to certain maximum and minimum limits.

(2) After the expiration of the period for which the foregoing allowances are admissible,—one quarter of average salary, subject to certain maximum and minimum limits.

10. Special leave may be granted at any time for not more than six months, with intervals of six years' service; allowances, calculated as during furlough, are given during the first six months only, whether taken in one or more instalments.

General Rules.

11. Leave of absence, whether on furlough or on privilege leave, can never be claimed as of right, and is given or refused at the discretion of Government.

12. After five years' continuous absence from India, an officer is considered to be out of the employment of Government.

13. When leave allowances other than privilege leave pay are paid at the Home Treasury, or in a Colony where the standard of currency is gold, rupees are converted into sterling at the rate of exchange fixed for the time being for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Imperial and Indian Treasuries, unless any other rate has been exceptionally authorised. But for the present the rate of conversion is subject to a minimum of 1*s.* 6*d.* to the rupee. Privilege leave pay when issued from the Home Treasury (this is only admissible when privilege leave is combined with other leave) is converted at 1*s.* 4*d.* to the rupee.

APPENDIX V.

REGULATIONS AS TO THE PHYSICAL EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

Note.—These Regulations are published for the convenience of candidates and in order to enable them to ascertain the probability of their coming up to the required physical standard. But it must be clearly understood that the Secretary of State reserves to himself an absolute discretion to reject as unfit any candidate whom he may consider, after hearing the opinion of his medical advisers, to be physically disqualified for the public service; and that his discretion is in no respect limited by these Regulations.

It is not the practice to communicate to candidates who may be reported as physically unfit for service in India the reasons for the Medical Board's opinion.

General Physical Requirements.

1. A candidate must be in good mental and bodily health, and free from any physical defect likely to interfere with efficient performance of duty.

2. In the examination of candidates the Medical Board will apply the following table of correlation of age, height, and chest girth :—

Age.	Height without Shoes.	Chest.
		Girth when expanded.	Range of Expansion.
	Inches.	Inches.	Inches.
21 and upwards	62½ and under 65 . . .	35	2
	65 „ 68 . . .	35½	2
	68 „ 70 . . .	36	2
	70 „ 72 . . .	36½	2½
	72 and upwards . . .	37	2½

3. Measurement of Height.—The candidate will be placed against the standard with his feet together, and the weight thrown on the heels, and not on the toes or outside of the feet. He will stand erect without rigidity, and with the heels, calves, buttocks, and shoulders touching the standard; the chain will be depressed to bring the vertex of the head level under the horizontal bar, and the height will be noted in parts of an inch to eighths. In the Indian Police Force a minimum height of 5 ft. 4 ins. is required, but in other Departments no fixed limit of height is imposed.

4. Measurement of Chest.—The candidate will be made to stand erect with his feet together, and to raise his hands above his head. The tape will be carefully adjusted round the chest, with its posterior upper edge touching the inferior angles of the shoulder blades, and its anterior lower edge the upper part of the nipples. The arms will then be lowered to hang loosely by the side, and care will be taken that the shoulders are not thrown upwards or backwards so as to displace the tape. The candidate will then be directed to empty his chest of air as much as is possible. This is best done by continuous whistling with the lips as long as sound can be produced. The tape is carefully gathered in during the process, and when the minimum measurement is reached it is recorded. The candidate will then be directed to inflate his chest to its utmost capacity. This maximum measurement will likewise be noted. The girth with the chest fully expanded and the range of expansion between the minimum and the maximum will then be recorded.

5. The hearing must be good.

6. The speech without impediment.

7. The teeth in good order, i.e., decayed or broken teeth must be properly stopped or crowned, and deficient teeth replaced by artificial teeth where necessary for effective mastication.

8. The chest must be well formed, the lungs and heart sound.

9. Rupture, hydrocele, varicocele, varicose veins in a severe degree, or other condition likely to cause inefficiency will disqualify a candidate, unless such condition is cured by operation.

10. The limbs, feet, and toes must be well formed and developed, with free and perfect motion of all the joints.

11. A candidate must have no congenital malformation or defect likely to interfere with efficiency.

12. A candidate must not be the subject of chronic skin disease.

13. Evidence of previous acute or chronic disease pointing to an impaired constitution will disqualify.

14. The Regulations as to the standard of vision required are shown separately for each department. In all cases of "colour blindness" a note of the same will be made on the candidate's papers.

Candidates may, if they wish it, undergo a preliminary examination by the Medical Board, which meets at the India Office every Tuesday, under the following conditions :—

(a) Applications must be addressed to the Under-Secretary of State, India Office Whitehall, London, accompanied by a fee of two guineas, and a statement as to the particular appointment which the candidate desires to obtain.

(b) Candidates must pay their travelling expenses.

(c) Candidates considered to be unfit by the Medical Board at this preliminary examination are not bound to accept its opinion, but may, at their own risk, continue their studies with the knowledge that they will have to submit themselves for a final medical examination by the Medical Board, prior to the examination, or to their appointment.

(d) On the other hand it must be distinctly understood that the preliminary examination by the Medical Board is held solely for the candidate's information, and that, if after that examination he is reported to be apparently fit, he has not on that account any claim to be accepted as physically fit when he presents himself for the final Medical Examination, upon which alone his acceptance or rejection will depend. Candidates may be considered fit for the Service at the preliminary examination, but may be found at the final examination to be unfit, either on account of some physical defect which did not exist or passed undetected at the preliminary examination, or for other reasons.

Regulations as to the Standard of Vision.

1. If myopia in one or both eyes exists, a candidate may be passed provided the ametropia does not exceed 3·5 D, and if, with correcting glasses not exceeding 3·5 D, the acuteness of vision in one eye equals $\frac{6}{9}$ and in the other $\frac{6}{6}$, there being normal range of accommodation with the glasses.

2. Myopic astigmatism does not disqualify a candidate, provided the lens, or the combined spherical and cylindrical lenses, required to correct the error of refraction, does not exceed 3·5 D; the acuteness of vision in one eye, when corrected, being equal to $\frac{6}{9}$, and in the other $\frac{6}{6}$, together with normal range of accommodation with the correcting glasses, there being no evidence of progressive disease in the choroid or retina.

3. A candidate having total hypermetropia not exceeding 4 D is not disqualified, provided the sight in one eye (when under the influence of atropine) equals $\frac{6}{9}$, and in the other eye equals $\frac{6}{6}$, with + 4 D glasses, or any lower power.

4. Hypermetropic astigmatism does not disqualify, provided the lens or combined lenses required to cover the error of refraction do not exceed 4 D, and that the sight of one eye equals $\frac{6}{9}$, and the other $\frac{6}{6}$, with or without such lense or lenses.

5. A candidate having a defect of vision arising from nebula of the cornea is disqualified if the sight of one eye be less than $\frac{6}{12}$. In such a case the better eye must be emmetropic. Defects of vision arising from pathological or other changes in the deeper structures of either eye, which are not referred to in these rules, may exclude a candidate.

6. Squint or any morbid condition, subject to the risk of aggravation or recurrence, in either eye, may cause the rejection of a candidate. Any imperfection of the colour sense is a disqualification for appointment to the engineering branch of the Railway Department. In other cases the existence of imperfection of colour sense will be noted on the candidate's papers.

FOR ALL APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT A DECLARATION, AS FOLLOWS, IS REQUIRED FROM CANDIDATES.

1. I ______________________________ declare upon honour that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, I am not at present suffering or affected with any form of disease or bodily infirmity, such as—

The total reported plague deaths during the week under report were 1,045 in excess of the previous week's figure. The United Provinces were responsible for 7,532 deaths, Bombay coming second with 6,667 and Rajputana third with 5,355.

Though the present plague death rate for India as a whole has had no parallel in January during the last twelve years, this result is due rather to a wider distribution of infection than to abnormal severity in any one administration. For example the January mortality in the United Provinces will be at least 33 per cent. less than it was in 1911 which year witnessed the last very severe epidemic in the north of India.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,
Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

OFFICE OF THE TEA COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA.

NOTIFICATION.

Government Purchase of Tea for the United Kingdom.

SOUTHERN INDIA.

No. 3364 T. C.—Tenders are invited by the undersigned from Southern India Tea Companies and Tea Estates controlled in India (i.e., concerns the directors or proprietors of which are resident in India) for the supply of black tea for the United Kingdom up to the 31st May 1918. The total quantity required, including War Office requirements from the 1st January to the 31st May 1918, is approximately 40 per cent. of the total crop of 1917. Each estate may, therefore, tender any quantity up to 40 per cent. of its production in 1917. In the case of Southern India, however, where many new estates or extensions are coming into bearing, the total quantity to be taken will be equivalent to 40 per cent. of the 1917 crop, which is estimated to be equal to about 33 per cent. of the probable 1918 crop. Southern India concerns may, therefore, tender a quantity equivalent either to 40 per cent. of their 1917 crop or to 33 per cent. of their estimated 1918 crop, the actual tea supplied in either case being of either the 1917 or the 1918 crop or of both estimates of 1818 production will be passed by the Advisory Committee. If an estate can supply more than the above quantity the fact should be stated in the tender. The percentage taken will include all tea shipped to England from Indian or Ceylon ports on private account on and after the 1st November 1917, which will be taken over by the Food Controller at the contract rates. It will also include all tea subsequently consigned to the Food Controller under interim arrangements pending the conclusion of contracts with estates. Only black tea will be taken. The percentage will apply to all grades of black tea produced, including clean dust, estates being required to supply 40 per cent. of the total production of each grade in 1917, each invoice containing, as far as possible, the usual proportions of each grade. In the event of any estate being unable to supply the full required proportion of every grade manufactured, this fact should be stated in the tender, and any adjustment in price necessary will be made before the contract is concluded. Southern India estates tendering 1918 teas, manufactured within the period of this contract, would be required when manufacturing such teas not to alter previous methods of plucking but to maintain the previous proportion of each grade and to mill all large leaf teas. All teas tendered will be liable to examination by experts in India, and, if the quality is not up to the previous standard of manufacture of the estate, to rejection or acceptance at a lower cost, such reduction being arranged by the undersigned in respect of concerns controlled in India and by the Food Controller in respect of concerns controlled in England. Garden weights will be accepted by the undersigned, but the teas will be weighed on arrival in England by the Customs and any adjustment in payment necessary will be made by the Food Controller through the Tea Commissioner. All teas will, also, be inspected in England and claims made by the Food Controller for damage in transit or defective packing. The usual system of packing, including the quality of the tea boxes and tea lead, must be maintained and boxes must be in sound condition before acceptance for shipment.

The contract price, which will be f. o. b. at the port of shipment, will be calculated as follows :—

I.—Estates selling on the London market.—The average London auction price realised in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913 less ·90 of a penny for intermediate charges and cess and plus one halfpenny for increased cost of production at rate of exchange 1*s*. 4*d*.

II.—Estates selling on the Calcutta or Colombo market.—The average Calcutta or Colombo auction price realised in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913, plus one halfpenny or half an anna for increased cost of production and plus cost of shipping (i e., cost of shipping at Calcutta or South Indian ports), and minus sale charges, and other Calcutta or Colombo charges. In order to obviate the labour of making detailed calculations in the case of each concern, the undersigned has decided that as regards tea sold in Calcutta and Colombo a net deduction of ·08 of an anna per lb. may be made to cover the difference between the cost of shipping and sale charges.

III.—Estates selling partly on the London and partly on the Calcutta or Colombo market.—The average sale price realised in both markets in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913 with the additions and deductions specified in I and II above.

IV.—Estates selling their teas on markets other than the London and Calcutta or Colombo markets, and partly on outside markets and partly in London or Calcutta and Colombo and estates with no pre-war sales.—The prices paid for similar teas.

The average for the three years should be calculated by dividing the total sale-proceeds by the total crop for the three years, the result being worked out to two places of decimals of a penny or an anna, as the case may be. Where a concern consists of two or more estates each manufacturing its own teas, separate figures should be furnished for each estate. The figures submitted should, if possible, be certified as correct by a Chartered Accountant. In the case of concerns, the accounts of which are not audited by a Chartered Accountant, the figures of total crop sold and total sale-proceeds should, if possible, be certified by the Broker who sold the teas or by the Advisory Committee.

Teas will be paid for in India. Tea cess and (in the case of all tea except that consigned to the War Office which is exempted from the payment of export duty) export duty will be paid by the Food Controller and should be included in the bills of cost. The delivery of the amount contracted for will be taken in equal monthly instalments so far as freight arrangements permit, but, in any event, delivery in warehouse of the whole quantity will be taken and payment made on or before the 31st August 1918, payments made in August bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the 1st August. Producers will be responsible for warehouse charges and insurance for one month after the date specified by the undersigned for the arrival of the tea at the warehouse, the undersigned paying warehouse charges after that period but not insurance charges, as no insurance will be effected on Government teas.

In order to enable the undersigned to conclude the contracts with estates, the following information in respect of each estate controlled in India should be furnished to him without delay, on a form which will be supplied on application to the Collector of Customs, Madras:—

(a) Area under tea in acres—

Actual 1917, Estimated 1918.

Mature tea.

Immature tea.

(b) Total manufactured crop—
Actual 1917, Estimated 1918.

(c) Percentage of each grade of tea manufactured in 1917.

(d) Total crop sold and market in which sold—
1911-1912-1913 separately.

(e) Total gross sale-proceeds of crop 1911-1912-1913 separately.

(f) Gross average sale-proceeds 1911-1912-1913.
(i.e., total gross sale-proceeds for the three years divided by the crop for those years).

(g) Extra allowances and deductions to be made per lb. as explained above.

(h) Average price claimed in sterling or rupees, as the case may be.

(i) Quantity already shipped on and after 1st November 1917.

(a) On private account.

(b) Consigned to Food Controller.

(j) Port from which it is desired to ship the teas (i.e., Madras, Tuticorin, Cochin or Calicut).

(k) Name of agent to whom shipping orders should be sent.

Contracts for companies and estates controlled in England will be made in England by Food Controller.

The 14th February 1918.

No. 456-I. B.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the Indian (Foreign Jurisdiction) Order in Council, 1902, and all other powers enabling him in that behalf, the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that the following amendment shall be made in the Berar Land-revenue Code, 1896, namely :—

For sub-section I of section 159 of the said Code, the following shall be substituted, namely :—

"159 (1). The cesses referred to in clauses (a), (c) and (d) of the preamble to the Berar Rural Boards Law, 1885, shall be levied at the following rates :—

(i) In an unalienated village, at the rate of 18 pies in the rupee on the assessment of each survey number. Where a survey number contains sub-divisions, the amount of the cesses shall be calculated on the assessment of the whole survey number and such amount shall be distributed amongst the sub-divisions, in accordance with rules made in this behalf by the Chief Commissioner, provided that the sum of the cesses of all the sub-divisions in the survey number shall not exceed such amount.

(ii) In a village in which proprietary title has been conferred under the Waste Land Rules of 1865, at the same rate as in an unalienated village on the amount payable by the proprietor as the land revenue under the terms of his settlement.

(iii) In any other alienated village, at the rate of 3 per cent. on the total of the assessments of all the survey numbers in the village.

Provided that with respect to any village referred to in clause (iii) the Deputy Commissioner may levy an additional cess at the rate of one anna in the rupee on the total of the assessments of all the survey numbers in the village in the event of the lessee or superior holder not making adequate arrangements for the maintenance of such jaglias as may in the opinion of the Deputy Commissioner be necessary for the village :

Provided further that on the application of a Rural Board constituted under the Berar Rural Boards Law, 1885, made in accordance with a resolution which has been passed at a special meeting of such Rural Board by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the members present, the Chief Commissioner may direct that the cesses shall be levied at increased rates, as under :—

(a) In an unalienated village, at a rate exceeding 18 pies but not exceeding 24 pies in the rupee on the assessment of each survey number.

(b) In a village in which proprietary right has been conferred under the Waste Land Rules of 1865 at the same increased rate as in an unalienated village on the amount payable by the proprietor as the land revenue under the terms of his settlement.

(c) In any other alienated village, at a rate exceeding 3 per cent. but not exceeding 5 per cent. on the total of the assessments of all the survey numbers in the village.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

His Excellency the President :—"I extend a warm welcome to Hon'ble Members now entering on their labours here in another Session.

"It is with regret that at the very outset of your deliberations I find myself constrained to refer to a very painful topic. It is, however, impossible to pass over without a word the gross outrage so recently perpetrated upon the peaceful Moslem population of Shahabad and certain neighbouring areas. I speak not only for myself, but for the Government of Bihar and the Government of India, and I am sure that I carry with me the whole of my Council, and, I hope, the great mass of Hindu opinion as well, when I say that those outraged people have our profound sympathy. The Local Government are doing their best to bring the culprits to justice without delay; they are pushing on their investigations regarding compensation as quickly as possible, and taking measures to strengthen the police. But I cannot conceal from myself that it must take time to soothe the sore and injured feelings produced by these events, and I can only hope that the leaders of both communities will continue the efforts, which I am glad to see that some of them have been making, to heal these wounds as speedily as possible.

"I know well that the question at issue in these disturbances is linked with unhappy memories of hatred and violence; but India has long since advanced beyond the stage when the appeal in such matters lies to the discreditable agency of brute force. In these days, recognised leaders stand forth who are capable of influencing the masses of their fellow-countrymen, and surely it is not too much to hope that, on their initiative and through their guidance, methods may be devised to prevent a recurrence of these regrettable incidents.

"And now I gladly turn from that subject to those questions with which it is customary for me to deal when we first meet in Session.

"There is one matter involving a change in the procedure in the discussion of our Financial Statement to which I should first like to invite the attention of Hon'ble Members. As they are aware the present system is that the Financial Statement is introduced without any general discussion on its proposals. Hon'ble Members of course have power to move Resolutions on what are known as the First and Second Stages of the discussion, but there is no general discussion on the financial policy of my Government until the Financial Statement re-appears as the Budget, when financial proposals are presented to Council in their final shape at the end of the Session. I think there has been a general feeling that this system which is rendered necessary by the existing rules is unsatisfactory, as, on the one hand, we have not the advantage of a free interchange of views as to our general policy at the time when this would be most valuable to us and, on the other hand, Hon'ble Members are certainly handicapped in dealing with our Budget proposals, especially where legislation is involved. For on a Bill only those matters which arise directly out of the proposed legislation can be brought up for discussion, and, when once the Bill has been passed, a discussion at the end of the Session must largely be infructuous and academic. Accordingly we addressed the Secretary of State last November proposing certain amendments in our rules for the discussion of the Annual Financial Statement, and we have recently received his sanction to our proposals. The necessary amendments will be notified in the Gazette in due course and will be in your hands very shortly. But I may explain briefly for the information of Hon'ble Members that the main changes we propose are that, after the Financial Statement has been introduced in accordance with our present practice, its further consideration shall be postponed for some days in order that Members may have an opportunity of making themselves acquainted with its contents which is not always an easy task. On the appointed day, which this year will be the 8th of March, we shall proceed to a general discussion of the Financial Statement. This discussion will take the place of the Budget discussion at the end of the Session which, as I think Hon'ble Members will recognise, has not been very profitable. Members will be at liberty to offer any observations on the Statement as a whole, or on any question of principle involved therein. After this general discussion has terminated, we shall proceed to the Second and Third Stages of the discussion of the Financial Statement which will represent what are under the existing rules called the First and Second Stages, and at these stages Members will be at liberty to move Resolutions in the same manner and to the same extent as is permissible under the existing rules. The Budget will be laid before the Council at a subsequent date when the Hon'ble Finance Member will explain the changes he has made with reference to the opinions expressed by the Council or on the basis of later figures, but there will then be no discussion. To this extent the existing procedure must be maintained. Hon'ble Members will, I hope, agree that we have endeavoured to give them a system which provides a more effective and satisfactory method of bringing forward their criticisms and suggestions regarding our policy at a stage when that policy has not been cast into final shape.

" Certain further changes will also, I think, be necessitated by this revision of the existing system. As Hon'ble Members are aware, it is our present practice when new taxation is imposed to proceed immediately after the Financial Statement has been introduced with any Bills that may be proposed for additional taxation. This is, as Hon'ble Members will readily understand, necessary for obvious reasons. But if a period for consideration and discussion is to be interposed, it will be equally necessary that any taxation Bills which may subsequently be introduced, should, if and when passed, be made to relate back to the date of their original announcement. It is of course only on this understanding that the present somewhat inconvenient procedure can be revised.

"Let me now as usual summarise such of our departmental activities as are likely to be interesting to Hon'ble Members who have been out of direct touch with the working of Government since we last met. Special preoccupations outside the usual scope of our work we have had, as Hon'ble Members well know, and I shall be brief. But those special preoccupations have not interfered with departmental work ; nor have the departments been allowed respite from the varying and heavy anxieties of the times we live in.

" Since I last addressed you, one or two schemes of considerable commercial importance have been inaugurated. The position of the planting industries in India has for some time been causing me much anxiety. The provision of adequate tonnage has become a chronic difficulty, and I fear that we can hardly look forward with confidence to any possibility of increased supplies of freight in the year that is before us The effect of this shortage has necessarily reacted most severely on the trade in certain commodities which are not held to be of essential national importance. But one of our great industries, the tea industry, can, I think, congratulate itself on the scheme which has recently been inaugurated for the purchase in India and Ceylon of the full civil and military requirements of the United Kingdom We have appointed a Tea Commissioner who is engaged in purchasing for the Food Controller in the United Kingdom at rates which represent a reasonable amount of profit to tea gardens in this country. Under this scheme a market for at least a considerable proportion of the crop is assured, and I think I may safely say that the prospects of the tea industry, which during part of last year gave cause for anxiety, have now materially improved.

" Our anxieties were at one time perhaps even more acute with regard to the disposal of the rice crop. These again arose out of the difficulties of securing freight. In October last a much larger proportion than usual of last year's crop remained to be shipped. The new crop which has just been harvested was at the same time expected to be abundant, and a very serious glut in the market seemed inevitable. Prices in Burma dropped to an exceptionally low level, and the position of the cultivators naturally gave the Local Government cause for the gravest anxiety. I was not slow to represent the difficulties of the situation to His Majesty's Government, and I am glad to think that we have now been able to initiate a scheme for the purchase of large quantities of rice monthly for the Royal Commission in England on behalf of the United Kingdom and our Allies. Prices have been fixed which will give a reasonable return alike to the cultivators and to the millers, and the control of purchases has been placed in the hands of a Rice Commissioner in Rangoon. In order to exercise effective control, it has been necessary to prohibit exports generally, but licenses will be given freely for export to many of the destinations which normally depend on India for supplies, provided that this can be done without interference with, or prejudice to, the requirements of the Royal Commission. I think that we have every reason to congratulate ourselves on this solution of what at one time threatened to be a very grave difficulty indeed.

"I come now to certain questions connected with coal production and railway traffic. The difficulty as regards coal production has throughout been one of labour, especially of skilled labour, and the difficulty has recently been greatly increased by a diversion of labour from the collieries producing the higher grades of coal to collieries and outcrop seams which only produce coal of a very inferior quality. This diversion it was necessary to check both because the demands for better class coal on account of railways and the Indian Marine are large and must be met, and because the production of very inferior coal involves a large economic loss in transport and other directions. Power was taken accordingly, and placed in the hands of a Coal Controller in Calcutta, to restrict the working of low grade collieries, and under this power their production has been regulated in such a way as to prevent their interfering with collieries producing higher grades of coal. It is too soon to judge finally the results of this action, but it is hoped that it will improve the situation. In order to supplement the shortage of labour, an experiment has lately been carried out of employing Turkish prisoners at an outlying colliery, and, as more prisoners wish to be employed and those already at work seem anxious to learn the business of cutting coal, we propose to continue the experiment on a larger scale.

"You will readily understand that the effect on our railways of the short production of coal was very serious. In the first place their own stocks of coal and those at the ports were reduced to a dangerously low level. Then, when the raisings of coal improved, the railways had to give all their energies to taking the coal through to its destination and to replenishing stocks. Further the demands of military and other essential traffic have been constantly increasing. Finally, the difficulties on the North-Western Railway were aggravated by a serious outbreak of sickness, due to the unusually heavy rain in the Punjab. As a consequence it has been exceedingly difficult to maintain the services for passengers and goods. One very unfortunate result has been that it became necessary in view of the great mela which is being held at Allahabad to prohibit the sale of tickets to stations within a certain zone round that centre of pilgrimage. The occasion, I recognise, is one of special sanctity, and it was with the greatest reluctance that we decided on this action, but in view of the peremptory necessity of maintaining the coal and military traffic it was unavoidable, and to have done otherwise might have led to disastrous results. I have given special attention to this matter of pilgrim traffic, and I deplore the fact that, owing to the necessities of the war, the railways are not in a position to provide full facilities for the purpose of a great religious festival, and I am glad that it has been found possible, in view of the special sanctity of February 11th, to remove the prohibition on the sale of tickets for Allahabad and the neighbourhood by the ordinary trains on February th, 9th, 10th and 11th.

"I am afraid that in other directions also there has been a large interruption and dislocation of ordinary traffic. It is impossible under present conditions largely to increase the capacity of our railways. We can adopt and have adopted various expedients, such as the introduction of the train control system, and the multiplication of crossing stations, both of which help the capacity of the lines ; we have taken steps to ensure that the maximum use is made of the rolling-stock and to conserve the engine power. The success attained by the railways of India in carrying an enormously increased traffic, without substantial additions to their lines or equipment, has in fact been remarkable. But inevitably there is a limit to their capacity. The essential traffic at the same time is constantly growing. To give you some idea of the bulk of this traffic I may mention that the single item of coal is estimated to absorb permanently 40,000 wagons, or at least one-third of the whole supply of wagons in the country. And the more nearly the limit of capacity is approached, the more frequent must be the dislocations of traffic and the inconvenience and loss which result from them. The problem is engaging my earnest consideration. I trust we shall be able to find some methods of alleviating the position.

"I am proud to think that we have given freely of our railway staff and our materials for the equipment of railways overseas in the interest of the Empire, and in this country we have subordinated other requirements to military needs. While no restriction has been imposed which was not dictated by considerations of our Imperial interests, no one regrets more than I do the inconvenience which has of necessity resulted; but I hope and believe you will consider it a small thing when compared with the great causes involved in the present war.

"We have been engaged in the struggle now for 3½ years, and hitherto India has not felt the burden and suffering which war brings into the houses of the poor with anything like the same severity as less favoured countries nearer the main theatres of operations. But the pinch is at last beginning to be felt, and one of the matters which has given my Government cause for the most anxious consideration has been the recent rise in the price of many of the necessities of life. I am not going to attempt to analyse here the various and complex causes to which the general rise in prices is due. The rise has been world-wide, but I think you will not question me when I say that in respect of some articles (I am thinking at the moment particularly of salt) the market rates which have recently been prevalent have soared far higher than could be justified by economic circumstances. Salt and clothing are among the prime necessities of life, and the prices at which they have been sold have pressed with great hardship on the poorer classes in this country. The discontent and uneasiness to which this has given rise have resulted in several regrettable instances of lawlessness in parts of Bengal, Bombay, Bihar and Assam. The Local Governments have taken timely measures to police the affected areas, and the Government of India have endeavoured to grapple with the situation, so far as it is possible to deal with circumstances in which economic forces play the major part.

"It will, I think, interest you to hear the steps which we have taken to alleviate the position. The high prices of salt were caused in their origin by the shortness of supplies from sources overseas, and speculators took advantage of the position. We are endeavouring both to secure an increased import of salt from abroad and to develop our internal resources as far as we possibly can. The output from the Khewra Mine is increasing month by month, and we hope that by the middle of April it will be double what it was in pre-war days. The powers which we took a year ago to provide local authorities with salt in priority over ordinary indents were calculated to ease the market and are now being freely used, but we have recently gone a good deal further than this. We have taken powers by Rules under the Defence of India Act to fix the prices of any commodities, the supply of which it is necessary to control in the interests of the public safety. It is obvious that the actual fixation of prices and the measures necessary to ensure adequate control must rest in the first instance with the Local Governments. We have addressed them on the subject and have already notified salt as a commodity the supply of which it may be necessary to regulate. The control of prices in the case of cloth is obviously a question of much greater difficulty than in the case of salt, but we shall not shrink from any action which may be found, in consultation with Local Governments, to be both practicable and desirable.

"May I add that we are always ready to listen to those who criticise our measures, and our Council is above all the place where such criticisms may legitimately be made. But I confidently look to Hon'ble Members, who know our practical difficulties and understand the grave needs of the time, to help us by instructing the general public as to the reasons underlying our action.

"Having touched on these pressing questions of supply and demand which, though both difficult and acute, are merely questions of the moment for which altering circumstances must in course of time furnish an automatic solution, I will not dip further into industrial questions. Hon'ble Members know the high hopes I entertain of industry in India, and they may have noticed that at the opening of the recent Madras Industries Exhibition I dealt with the important subject of industrial development. I shall not revert to that topic to-day, but content myself with re-emphasising the fact that no reforms in India will achieve their purpose unless they have their counterpart in the industrial sphere. A great industrial advance, reacting strongly on social and educational conditions, is, I am convinced, a condition precedent to the full development of healthy political life in this country.

" In the sphere of education we have to record an event of the greatest educational importance, namely, the meeting in November last of the Calcutta University Commission under Dr. Michael Sadler. The Commission, as you know, is composed of men of high repute, and we have never before had at our disposal in this country so distinguished and experienced a body of expert advisers on educational affairs. They have commenced their inquiries by the widest consultations of all classes of opinion and by diligent and unobtrusive personal observation of the conditions upon which they are to advise. I look with confidence to receiving from them during the summer of this year a report which will contain a useful exposition of the principles upon which University education should in future be conducted in Bengal, and I have little doubt that much of their advice will be of the greatest value in dealing with University questions in other provinces also.

"Of education at the other end of the scale—of primary education—I made some mention in addressing you last September. I said that we were agreed that a definite advance must be made in this sphere, and that it was only the fact that there were other connected problems awaiting solution which prevented my giving an indication of the policy which we had in view on this most important question. The support of primary education is a function of local bodies and its extension is, in the main, an operation of finance. While, therefore, the future powers of local bodies and the future relations of local, provincial and Imperial finance are still undetermined, it is, as you will readily understand, a matter of no small difficulty to set forth a definite policy of future development for our primary schools, and it will be necessary for us to wait a little longer before we can take definite steps for the realisation of such a policy. In the meantime, we have determined to place no obstacle in the way of such local legislatures as may decide on any reasonable measures to forward the same end, whether those are the precise measures which we would ourselves be prepared to initiate or not. The last few months have accordingly seen the first beginnings of legislation to allow of compulsory education in this country. A private Bill has been introduced and passed into Law to admit of the adoption of compulsion by district municipalities in Bombay. Arrangements have been made for the introduction of similar Bills in Bengal and in Bihar and Orissa. The Punjab Government has drafted a Bill dealing with the same subject on comprehensive lines and has published it for criticism. I need hardly say that I shall watch with deep interest the use which local bodies make of the powers conferred upon them by measures of this description.

" In the cognate sphere of local self-government I desire to invite attention to an important move which has been made by Lord Ronaldshay's Government in Bengal. A Bill has recently been introduced in that Presidency in which an attempt has been made to institute a general system of village government. The question is complicated in Bengal by the absence of real village units and the pre-existence of local Committees for dealing with watch and ward; but, whatever the ultimate fate of the Bill in its details may be, I cannot but welcome its preparation, as representing a bold and comprehensive effort to provide a code of rules for a difficult and little trodden field of administration, and as a step along one of those main lines of advance—detailed by me, as Hon'ble Members will recollect, in my opening speech at the September Session—which lead to the accepted goal of British Rule in India.

"In accordance with my intention to be brief in surveying the departmental field, I shall not to-day touch on some important aspects of our general administration, but shall now turn to matters immediately connected with the war and our military administration.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [His Excellency the President.]

"Nearly a year has elapsed since the Indian Defence Force Act came into operation. As regards the European Branch of the Force, a very large measure of success has been achieved. The duty of military service has been undertaken by the European population of the country cheerfully and in a spirit of patriotism, and the Government of India gladly acknowledge the sacrifices which have been made by a community which has otherwise made large contributions to the fighting forces of the Empire, and is in the pursuit of its civil avocations, working at high pressure with depleted staffs. The burden, the Government of India are well aware, has been particularly felt in the matter of raising the General Service Units, the formation of which for the time being was necessitated by the exigencies of the military situation, and they are grateful to the commercial community for the good spirit in which the obligation has been accepted I am pleased to be able to announce that the reorganisation of the Armed Forces in India, in which the newly-constituted Indian Defence Force plays a considerable part, has enabled His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to dispense for the present with these units, which will be disbanded at an early date.

"It is not necessary to explain that the obligation for general service when required remains unimpaired, and it will, as a matter of fact, be necessary, as an offset to the disbandment of the larger units, to maintain in certain places smaller units permanently embodied for the purpose of local defence.

"With regard to the Indian portion of the force, recruiting was under the Indian Defence Force Act closed on 28th August 1917, by which time the number of applications sent in had reached over 9,000. Not all of the applicants, however, appeared when called on for medical examination, and of those who did appear only a little over 3,000 have been passed as medically fit, and in only three of the six areas into which India was divided for the purpose has the number of fit men approached 1,000, the minimum which it was proposed to require before a unit was raised. The Government of India, however, wishing to give the movement every possible encouragement, agreed not to insist on this minimum, and one or more units have been formed, or are in process of formation, in each of the areas referred to, and it has now been decided to give a further opportunity to fill up the cadres of these units by re-opening recruiting, and an amendment to the Indian Defence Force Act will be introduced in Council for this purpose. Hon'ble Members will, however understand that our hands are not free in the matter of numbers. The demands of the military situation and the calls upon our personnel for service in the field necessarily limit the opportunities which we can offer in respect of training for auxiliary troops, and these opportunities naturally vary from time to time We therefore propose to open and close recruiting for the Indian portion of the Indian Defence Force in the various provinces by notification in the Gazette of India, as the above considerations shall dictate.

"As regards the work of our forces in the field, the past few months have seen a series of successes in Mesopotamia and in Syria, where a notable advance has been made The operations in East Africa have been uniformly successful, and the Indian troops who have aided so largely in securing this result are now returning to India to refit.

"The war is now entering on a new phase. The added burden thrown on the Allies by the situation in Russia is one which is likely to increase rather than lesson, and India, in common with the rest of the Empire, must be prepared for greater efforts and greater sacrifices, and for a fuller organisation of her military resources, in man-power and in material.

"Recruiting for the Indian Army and for the subsidiary services has, during the past year, shown a distinct improvement, and the results of the last few months are encouraging. At the same time, we are not, even now getting the full numbers we require, nor do the numbers obtained nearly approach the contribution that India could supply without in any way affecting her own requirements.

"If we are to obtain a supply adequate to our needs, a sustained and combined effort on the part of all is now necessary. The Central Recruiting Board is keeping in close touch with all recruiting questions, and has arranged for a division of the total requirements among the provinces, with special regard to their resources. Provincial Recruiting Boards have been established in most Provinces with very satisfactory results, and their efforts have undoubtedly contributed in no small degree to the measure of success that has attended recruiting operations during the past few months.

" The Punjab is maintaining its proud position as the chief supplier of recruits, but, with the co-operation of the various Provincial Boards, it is fully expected that other Provinces and States will shortly contribute a share more in proportion to their population

" The Native States generally maintain their record of high achievement. The first fruits of victory in one field of battle have been manifested in the return of war-worn battalions of Imperial Service Troops to our shores. The Kashmir battalions, which returned last summer with a distinguished record in an arduous campaign, have now replaced their losses and refitted and are about to retake their places in the fighting line where they will, I feel confident, earn fresh laurels The States of Bharatpur, Jind, Gwalior and Kapurthala have more recently welcomed the return of their contingents with fitting honours and rejoicings, and the Rampur Infantry, the Faridkot Sappers and Miners, and a Kashmir Mountain Battery may shortly be expected. The splendid services rendered by the troops which have reached India have been acknowledged by the General Officer Commanding in messages which will be treasured in the annals of the States and have been a source of deep gratification to myself and the Government of India.

" The Bharatpur Infantry in particular, who suffered heavy losses in the recent fighting, have earned the special appreciation of His Majesty's Government and the thanks of the Army Council. The Durbars are already planning to reform their units for further service after the men have enjoyed their well-earned leave.

" From Palestine also news has been received of the admirable work done in the battle of Gaza, and in the subsequent pursuit, by the Imperial Service Troops of His Exalted Highness the Nizam and of Their Highnesses of Mysore, Gwalior, Patiala, Alwar, Bahawalpur and Khairpur.

" The stream of gifts and contributions from the States still flows strongly. Among others I may mention a gift of 5 lakhs from the Maharaja Holkar, a lakh of rupees each from the Maharao of Sirohi and the Maharaja of Nawanagar, Rs. 45,000 from the Maharaja of Jind for the purchase of a bomb aeroplane, 5 lakhs and 25 thousand rupees and 100 horses, besides other gifts, from the Maharaja of Nabha, whose Imperial Service Infantry will, I hope, soon take the field, one lakh and eight thousand rupees from the Chiefs of Northern Shan States for the purchase of aeroplanes, and, lastly, yet another gift from the Maharaja of Gwalior, namely, £60,000 for the benefit of disabled naval officers and men and their families

" The Central Recruiting Board has received considerable assistance from some States in the matter of recruiting for the Indian Army, notably from Kashmir, Jaipur, Alwar and Bharatpur, and in the Punjab, from Patiala, Jind, Nabha and Kapurthala, and besides this the Kashmir, Patiala, Jind, Kapurthala and Bahawalpur Durbars have undertaken, on the request of the Government of India, to increase considerably the strength of their Imperial Service units in order to meet the rapid wastage of modern war.

" If I were now to resume my seat, Hon'ble Members would perhaps have a right to complain that there remains a subject of momentous importance to India, second in importance to nothing except the war, upon which I have not so far specifically touched. It is a subject which naturally claims at this hour the serious attention of every man interested in the welfare of India. But Hon'ble Members will on reflection realise that at this stage it is not possible for me to say much on the topic of Constitutional Reform. For the past three months the Secretary of State and I have been in daily consultation on the subject, We have received numerous deputations and given still more numerous interviews. In the addresses presented to us we have had clearly placed before us the hopes and aspirations, as well as the doubts and fears, of the various communities in India. In the interviews we have endeavoured to elicit the opinions of those whom we were meeting. We have probed those opinions by searching cross-examination, not for the pleasure of mere dialectic but to satisfy our minds that beneath the opinions expressed there was a solid substratum of fact and experience. I can say for my part—and I believe I can also speak for the Secretary of State—that we regarded these interviews as a liberal education. They enabled us to clear our minds, and they assisted us to see how far opinions expressed in addresses were based on genuine conviction and solid thought. The whole scheme of the tour and the arrangements made at each centre seemed to me admirably suited to the purpose which the Secretary of State and I had in hand; and I should like to pay a tribute to the great ability with which so many of the addresses we heard had been drafted and to the careful labour and thought which they embodied. I also take the opportunity of cordially acknowledging the almost universal spirit of genuine co-operation which animated those who came to meet us in interview. Availing ourselves then of all the help that offers, we are threshing out the great problems with which we have to deal, and I have every hope that the Secretary of State may be able to take home proposals embodying a sane and sober advance. with future steps duly outlined, so that, provided we get that co-operation on which the announcement of August the 20th laid stress, we shall be able to progress towards the realisation of responsible government. Let me remind you of the words of the announcement, that 'ample opportunity will be afforded for public discussion of the proposals which will be submitted in due course to Parliament'. If His Majesty's Government accept our request for publication, then it will be for those who represent the numerous communities interested to put their heads together and make reasoned representations to me upon them for transmission to His Majesty's Government. I notice that it has been suggested that a deputation should go home and lay the case for the Congress-League scheme before His Majesty's Government. The same intention may exist in other quarters. I think that at the right moment that is a course worthy of consideration, and I would not have it thought that there is any desire on the part of Government to hamper any such representations. On the contrary I will gladly give all the advice and all the help which it lies in my power to give.

"You will observe that the procedure we propose to adopt is that which was followed on the occasion of the Morley-Minto Reform Scheme. It opens the door to full discussion, and seems to me a highly convenient course to pursue. I do not disguise from myself that there will be those who will criticise our proposals, whatever they may be, as not going far enough, while others will regard them as going dangerously far. That is inevitable. But they will represent a sincere and honest attempt to give effect to the announcement of August the 20th, which the Secretary of State and I have regarded as constituting our terms of reference and therefore binding upon us. I would ask people generally to re-read that announcement as a whole resisting the temptation to select that portion which suits their particular views and to reject the rest. I believe that in the main the announcement commanded general acquiescence, and it behoves us all to endeavour to work together in general harmony with it and to accept its spirit.

"The first practical step in fulfilment of that announcement has a directly personal aspect in that it accounts for the presence here in Delhi to-day of the Right Hon'ble Edwin Montagu, Secretary of State for India. It is our privilege to be able to greet him in our midst, and I am sure that all Hon'ble Members would wish me to extend to him a most sincere and cordial welcome on behalf of the Imperial Legislative Council of India. His task and mine is a joint task, and in its discharge we stand in a relationship peculiarly personal; but this consideration will not deter me from thanking him here and now for the whole-heartedness of his co-operation with me. He has moreover met others freely and widely, the leading figures in our political life, official and non-official; and, knowing as I do the spirit which has animated him, I feel sure that Hon'ble Members would like me to express to him on behalf of India as a whole our great appreciation of the manner in which he has approached his task. We do not know whether our work of the past three months will lead us to success. It will be for history to record the result of those labours. 'Tis not in mortals to command success', but if ever a man engaged in a task beset with difficulties deserved success, that man, I most emphatically hold, is the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Forest offences relating to cattle trespass.

1. " (a) Are Government aware that the general condition of cattle has deteriorated owing to inadequate supply of fodder and restrictions of grazing facilities in forest areas ?

(b) Will Government be pleased (i) to state the number of forest offences relating to cattle trespass for the last ten years, Province by Province, and (ii) explain the cause of the increase, if any, in the number of such offences ?

(c) Will Government consider the advisability of relaxing the forest laws so as to afford greater facilities for grazing ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) As stated by Sir Robert Carlyle in reply to a question asked by Maharaja Ranajit Sinha on the 16th January, 1915, it is impossible to decide whether, taken as a whole, Indian cattle have deteriorated in recent years.

(b) I lay on the table a statement * showing the number of cases of grazing without permission during the ten years ending 1915-16. For explanation of increases in particular provinces I must refer the Hon'ble Member to the annual provincial reports, but the general increase shown in the statement is probably due to the larger number of cattle grazed and the increased efficiency of the forest staff.

(c) As stated by Sir John Miller in reply to a question asked by Mr. Dadabhoy on the 18th February, 1910, the rules under the Indian Forest Act are framed for each province by the Local Governments concerned, and Local Governments are fully aware of the importance of providing grazing facilities in forests The Government of India see no necessity for amending the law on the subject."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Agricultural education.

2. " (a) Is it a fact that in this country the want of an adequate supply of manual labour is being more and more acutely felt by agriculturists, and that till now the mechanical side of agricultural education has received but little attention ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to consider the advisability of providing for the mechanical side of agricultural education so as to make the farmer familiar with the fundamental laws and principles of mechanics, and encourage the adoption and extended use of improved tools and implements and labour-saving machines ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a), first part.—The Government of India are of course aware that manual labour is short of requirements at harvest time and on other seasonal occasions when the demand is heavy, but they have not information which confirms the view that the supply of manual labour for agricultural operations is becoming progressively more inadequate.

(a) second part and (b).—The introduction of improved agricultural implements and labour-saving machines is already recognised as one of the most important functions of the Agricultural Department in the various provinces ; and land-owners and cultivators are instructed in their care and use at Government Demonstration Farms. Several provinces, moreover, namely, Madras, Bombay, Burma, the United Provinces and the Punjab, have Agricultural Engineers attached to their Agricultural Departments with the object of assisting and instructing the agricultural public in the use of such implements ; and the Governments of Bihar and Orissa, and the Central Provinces contemplate the appointment of Agricultural Engineers after the war. It will thus be seen that Government is already fully alive to the importance of this Government Grants for the purchase of implements.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

3. "Are Government aware that in some of the countries of the West, such as Italy and France, Government subsidies are granted to agricultural societies for the purchase of agricultural implements and machines? Will the Government of India introduce a similar system in this country?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member presumably refers to agricultural societies organized on a co-operative basis. The Government of India understand that such societies are assisted in some European countries by loans from Government or from State-aided banks. They have no information that any special subsidies are granted for the purchase of agricultural implements and machines. In regard to the second part of the question, the Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to paragraph 213 of the report of the Committee on Co-operation which indicates the extent to which Government advances are made to agricultural societies generally in this country. The Committee expressed the view that no change in the existing rules regarding these initial advances was called for and were of opinion that they will be even less used in the future than in the past. The Government of India do not consider that the need for any material modification of their present policy has as yet been established."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Appeals against the assessment of Income-tax.

4. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of appeals made against the assessment of Income-tax for the last three years in each Province and showing how many such appeals were accepted and how many rejected?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"I lay on the table a statement * derived from Income-tax Return V showing by Provinces the number of petitions presented to Collectors and Commissioners under the Income-tax Act, 1886, during the years 1914-15 to 1916-17. The Government of India have no information whether the petitions, figures of which are shown in Return V, relate solely to appeals against the assessment of income-tax, and it is possible that the basis on which the statistics are compiled differs in different Provinces.

2. Local Governments, with whom the actual administration of the Income-tax Act rests, are not required to furnish to the Government of India statistics showing the number of petitions under the Act, which were successful in whole or in part, and the figures of successful and unsuccessful petitions in all the Provinces of India, which the Hon'ble Member asks for, are accordingly not available."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Student strikes and Advisory Boards.

5. "(a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the various circulars issued in the different Provinces by the Department of Education regarding the attendance of teachers and students of schools and colleges at public meetings?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of students' strikes during the years 1916-17 in different schools and colleges, Province by Province?

* Vide Appendix B.

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

(c) Have the Provincial Governments inquired into the causes of such strikes and with what results?

(d) Will Government consider the advisability of appointing an Advisory Board of Education in each Province consisting of persons, partly nominated and partly elected, to advise the Government on all educational matters?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) A copy of the circulars * is laid on the table.

(b) and (c) The Local Governments are being requested to supply the information asked for and it will be communicated to the Council when received.

(d) The Government of India have given discretion to Local Governments to constitute Advisory Education Boards where these may be considered necessary, and in some Provinces Boards of this nature already exist. The Government of India do not propose to take any further steps in this direction at present."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Grants to District Boards.

6. "(a) Are Government aware that the system of making earmarked grant to District Councils and other local bodies has been found to cause much inconvenience in practice, and is it a fact that a new scheme of consolidated grants to District Boards has been introduced in the Punjab, abolishing as far as possible all earmarked grants?

(b) If so, will Government instruct other Provincial Administrations to adopt a similar scheme?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"A system of consolidated grants for purposes other than educational has been introduced in District Boards in the Punjab, but the Government of India are not prepared to say that earmarked grants to local bodies are in all cases productive of inconvenience. They approve generally the view of the Decentralization Commission that grants-in-aid should normally take the form of a lump grant or a percentage towards specific services, but the system to be adopted in making grants is a matter purely for the decision of Provincial Governments, and the Government of India do not propose to instruct Provincial Governments to adopt exclusively any particular system of making grants."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Relief and comforts fund for the Indian Defence Force University corps.

7. "(a) Are Government aware that much hardship is felt by the mofussil students who have to pay the out-of-pocket expenses for their board and lodging during the period when they join the Indian Defence Force?

(b) Is it a fact that the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay has started a fund for the relief and comforts of such graduates and undergraduates as have joined the University corps of the Indian Defence Force?

(c) Has the same course been adopted in other Provinces also? If not, will Government recommend this course to other Provinces?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) The question, it is understood, refers to University companies of the Indian Defence Force, the training of which is divided into two portions, a preliminary training of one month carried out at the Universities, and a period of two months in camp. During the second period all men serving receive pay and allowances as for the corresponding ranks in the Indian Army. During the period of preliminary training, pay and allowances are not generally necessary, as the men are living at their own houses and serving under conditions similar to Europeans of the Indian Defence Force when not called out for actual military service; moreover it is only proposed that they should perform 86 hours' drill during the month. But to meet special cases of men not actually resident at the Universities, pay and allowances during the period of preliminary training have been allowed in the Calcutta and Allahabad University units for men who do not reside at the places of training. A similar concession for the Bombay University unit is now under consideration.

---

*Vide Appendix C.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir Claude Hill].

(b) The Government of India understand that a fund has been started in the University of Bombay on the lines described in the question.

(c) The Government of India believe that a similar fund has been started in the University of Calcutta, but have no information as regards the Allahabad University, the only other University which has a separate unit of the Indian Defence Force. They think that the adoption of such a course should be left to local initiative as all necessaries are provided by Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Recruitment of officers for the Agricultural Department.

8. "(a) Is it a fact that the inadequate strength of the superior staff interferes with the expansion of the activities of the Agricultural Department over a wider area in the various Provinces of British India?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what special arrangements, if any, have been made, or are proposed to be made, with a view to ensure an adequate supply of officers in this country in the near future?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

(a) "The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) Local Governments and Administrations have been addressed regarding the extent to which it will be necessary or desirable to expand the Provincial Agricultural Departments after the war. All replies have not yet been received and the matter is still under consideration. Difficulties have been experienced by the India Office in securing suitable candidates for the Indian Agricultural Service during the war for the posts already sanctioned. Every endeavour is, however, being made to secure candidates for the superior service either by direct recruitment of qualified Indians and others, or by promotion of qualified men from the Provincial Service."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Settlements and soil classification.

9. "Is it a fact that in the Bombay Presidency when a general classification of the soil of any area has been made a second time, or when any original classification of any area has been approved by the Governor in Council as final, no such classification is again made with a view to the revision of the assessment of such area? If so, will the Government of India advise the other Provincial Governments to adopt a similar policy in case of re-settlements?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The Government of India are not prepared to take the action suggested in the second part of the question as they still adhere to the policy in regard to the legitimate grounds for a re-assessment of land revenue which was laid down in paragraph 22 of their Resolution No. 1, dated the 16th January 1902. I would invite the attention of the Hon'ble Member to this Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Revision of the Indian Arms Act.

10. "Have the Government of India received the views of the Local Governments on their proposals regarding the revision of the Indian Arms Act? If so, will the same be placed on the table, and will the Government be pleased to appoint a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials to consider the whole question of the administration of the Arms Act before introducing a Bill to amend the same?"

[Sir James DuBoulay; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir Claude Hill.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay replied:—

"The Hon'ble Member is under a misapprehension in thinking that the revision of the Arms Act is in contemplation. The Government of India, as explained by His Excellency the Viceroy in this Council on September 5th last, have the question of the administration of the Arms Act under their consideration, and will not accept any solution of this question which continues to base exemption on racial distinctions. They have not yet received all the replies of Local Governments, one is still outstanding: those that have been received are voluminous but are now being examined, and when the examination is complete Government will consider whether the replies should be laid upon the table, and whether it is desirable to obtain further official and non-official opinion."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

Agricultural training.

11. "Is it a fact that in the Punjab one of the means adopted for popularizing improved methods of agriculture is the provision of a short English course for Revenue and Irrigation officers, and also a 6 months' vernacular course as Lyallpur Farm, and that the experiment has been found useful? If so, will the Government of India advise other Provincial Governments to adopt at similar course?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied:—

The practice in the Punjab is as indicated in the Hon'ble Member's question, and the Government of India understand that the results of this practice have been found satisfactory. They consider, however, that what is suitable to the conditions of one Province may not be equally so to those of another, and that it may safely be left to other Provinces to adopt such courses as may be held suitable to local requirements. A copy of the question and of this reply will, however, be communicated to all Provinces for their information.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

Medical relief in rural areas and improvement of the indigenous system.

12. "(a) Are Government aware that the arrangements for medical relief in rural areas are inadequate? And is it a fact that the depletion of medical staff both higher and subordinate owing to the war and the consequent disorganization of medical relief has necessitated the closing of dispensaries in certain rural areas, especially in the Madras Presidency?

(b) If so, will Government state what action they propose to take with a view to improve the present condition?

(c) Is it not a fact that any wide extension of medical relief in rural areas on Western lines would involve a prohibitive cost?

(d) Are Government aware that the indigenous system of medical relief is cheaper, and that people in this country have to resort to this system?

(e) Have Government any information that the Mysore Government have devised a scheme to place the practice of the Ayurvedic system on a scientific footing? If not, will they be pleased to obtain the same from the Mysore Government and place it on the table?

(f) Will Government consider the advisability of trying a similar experiment in British India?"

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay replied:—

"(a) It is unfortunately probably the case that the arrangements for medical relief in some rural areas in India, as indeed of most countries, are inadequate. The subject, however, is one which has received the closest and most anxious attention at the hands of both the Government of India and the Local Governments, and in the years preceding the war considerable improvement in this respect was effected. The triennial reports for the years 1914, 1915 and 1916, showed that there was as a result of war conditions a slight decrease in the number of dispensaries open in some provinces, for example, Assam where the number fell from 225 to 215, but there was an increase in Madras, Burma and the Punjab during the same period. The figures for 1917 are not yet available.

(b) Effective action cannot be taken so long as the war lasts and the demands on the cadre of the civil departments for medical officers for military purposes continue.

(c) The Government of India agree that a wide extension of gratuitous medical relief in rural areas on Western lines will involve considerable further expenditure.

(d) So long as practitioners of the indigenous systems receive no scientific education in the principles and practice of those systems it would no doubt be possible to obtain such men at cheaper rates than would attract men trained in the principles of Western medical science.

(e) and (f) The Government of India have no information about the Mysore scheme, but have under consideration the question whether it is possible to place the Yunani and Ayurvedic systems on a scientific footing and to increase their usefulness. They are awaiting a representation from the All-India Ayurvedic and Unani Tibbia Conference."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

The Patna excavations.

13. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state how much has been spent on the Patna excavations carried on by the Archæological Department?

(b) Is it a fact that the whole excavated area is not properly cared for and that no efforts are made to preserve the remains of ancient bricks, wooden walls and pavements, etc.? If the answer be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to conserve the old monuments excavated? If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to take early action to ensure their preservation?

(c) Is it a fact that many old relics discovered in India have been removed to other countries, and are Government aware that such removal has been resented by the people? If so, will Government be pleased to see their way to put a stop to this practice?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" (a) The sums expended on the Patna excavations have been published in the Annual Reports of the Superintendent, Archæological Survey, Eastern Circle, and the cost to Government has amounted in six years to R17,512. The remaining cost of the excavations has been borne by Sir Ratan Tata.

(b) The discoveries include moveable antiquities, and wooden and brick structures. The moveable antiquities are preserved provisionally in the office of the Archæological Superintendent, while the wooden structures of Mauryan date can only be preserved either by flooding them with water or covering them again with earth. When the excavations are complete, Government will decide which of these two courses will be followed, meanwhile they are being preserved by water. The brick remains are of later date and a small proportion of them will be permanently conserved and kept visible to the public, the remainder will be buried again beneath the soil. The site at Pataliputra is protected under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904, and chaukidars are maintained there. Government is satisfied that all necessary precautions are being taken for the preservation of these remains.

(c) The only body relics which have left India in recent years were a Buddhist relic which was presented to the Buddhists of Burma by Lord Minto in 1910, and another to the Buddhists of Ceylon by the present Viceroy in 1917. Arrangements have been made by which it is hoped that the Buddhists will be able in future to preserve such relics on Indian soil."

[Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir Claude Hill.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

The Co-operative Societies Act of 1912.

14. "(a) Did the Committee on Co-operation in India in their report of 1915 make the following recommendations :—

'(i) Where individual creditors refuse to disclose claims, societies should be empowered to ascertain the debts of a member by serving a notice on such a creditor requiring him to state his claim subject to discharge of his debt on failure to comply and prosecution for wilful falsehood ?

(ii) The lien of a society under section 19 of the Act should be converted into a charge ; otherwise there is no bar to outside attachment unless a decree has been passed in favour of a society ?

(iii) Provision should be made for the summary recovery of members' debts by a Liquidator on the cancellation of a society's registration' ?

(b) If so, will Government take early action to revise the Co-operative Societies Act of 1912, with a view to give effect to these recommendations and to make such other provisions in the Act as may in the interest of the Co-operative movement seem necessary in the light of experience gained on the working of the co-operative system in this country since the introduction of this Act ?

(c) Will Government state what steps they have taken or propose to take with a view to provide for the custody of the cash balances of Co-operative Societies and Banks at Government Treasuries or Police Stations, or in the Postal Savings Banks ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) (i) and (b).—The Committee on Co-operation recommended the experimental introduction of such a provision in Burma only in the first instance. As the Burma Government is now of opinion that such a measure is unnecessary, the proposal has been dropped for the present.

(a) (ii) and (b).—Yes, when the Act next comes under revision. As the Committee points out, the difficulty has arisen out of a ruling of the Calcutta High Court ; and as the Bengal Government are not satisfied that the existing provisions of the law are insufficient to meet the difficulty, no further action is contemplated at present.

(a) (iii) and (b).—Yes, when the Act next comes under revision. A provision to this effect has already been made in the Public Demands Recovery Acts in Bihar and Orissa and Bengal ; and the proposal will be considered further when the amendment of Act II of 1912 comes under consideration.

(c) The orders issued by the Government of India on the subject are embodied in their Circular* letter No. 807-262-1, dated 3rd October, 1916, a copy of which is placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

The economic condition of the agricultural classes.

15. " Was the following resolution passed by the Board of Agriculture which met at Poona in December last :—

' That an improvement in the economic condition of the agricultural population in India is a matter of the most fundamental and urgent importance to the country ' ?

If so, will Government consider the advisability of appointing a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to consider the whole question relating to the economic condition of the agricultural classes, and report as to the best means of ameliorating the same ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, but as the proceedings of the Board have not yet been submitted to the Government of India they are not yet in a position to discuss its recommendations.

*Vide Appendix D.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir George Barnes; Mr. K. K. Chanda.]

Case of Amritammal in Ceylon.

16. "(a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to the alleged case of ill-treatment accorded to one Amritammal and her son working in the Poosellah Estate, Perkadu Post, Ceylon, as coolie, particulars of which are reported on page 4 of the "Hindu" of the 23rd November 1917?

(b) Will Government be pleased to inquire if it is a fact that the reply which the Ceylon Labour Commissioner, Trichinopoly, has received from the Superintendent of the said Estate, in Ceylon, with regard to this case differs altogether from the letter of Amritammal, the aggrieved? If so, will the Government of India arrange with the Ceylon Government to hold a joint enquiry into the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The attention of the Government of India has been called to the case referred to in the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question, and enquiries are being instituted both from the Government of Madras and the Ceylon Government on the subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Grant of licenses for making salt in Bengal.

17. "Is it a fact that Bengal has got an extensive sea board and people used to make salt in Bengal formerly? Will Government be pleased to consider the expediency of granting licenses for making salt in Bengal, at least for home consumption?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi in this Council on the 12th of September last year. A copy of the Memorandum by the Government of Bengal on the subject of salt production in that Province referred to in the answer is laid on the table for the information of the Hon'ble Member. The question of granting licenses for salt manufacture is a matter for consideration by the Local Government who are responsible for the administration of the Salt Department in Bengal."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Looting of hâts in Bengal.

18. "(a) Is it a fact that there have been recent cases of looting of hâts in Bengal and parts of Assam, the commodities looted being cloth and salt?

(b) Is it a fact that the price of these commodities has been enhanced enormously, causing great hardship to the poor people?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what action, if any, has been, or is proposed to be, taken by Government to meet the situation?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) Yes.

(b) It is true that the price of cloth and salt has risen greatly, and this rise in prices has pressed heavily on the poorer classes.

(c) The attention of the Hon'ble Member is invited to Rule 11 J of the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules recently enacted, under which Government have powers to control the supply of any commodity of general use, where it is necessary to do so, for the purpose of securing the public safety. These powers include the power to fix prices. Salt has already been notified as an article the supply of which it is necessary to control, and Local Governments have been invited to take such action in accordance with the rules as may be found to be necessary. With regard to the price of cloth, the question of the action to be taken to meet the situation is under consideration."

[Mr. K. K. Chanda; Sir James DuBoulay.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Grant of permission to State prisoners to enlist in the Bengali Regiment.

19. " Will Government be pleased to consider the expediency of permitting State prisoners under Regulation III of 1818 or detenus under the Defence of India Act, or such of them as offer to do so, to enlist in the Bengali Regiment, if they are considered fit by the military authorities, forming if necessary a separate company or companies for them ?"

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay replied :—

" It has been ascertained that the military authorities are unable to entertain the proposal."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

The Committee to investigate and report on the revolutionary movement in India.

20. " (a) Will Government be pleased to amplify the scope of the Committee announced on the 10th December last enabling it to examine individual cases of persons interned under the Defence of India Act or detained under Regulation III of 1818 with a view to recommend, if it considers proper, the release or relaxation of restraints in the case of any such person ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what procedure is to be adopted by the Committee for ascertaining the existence of any revolutionary party in the country, namely, whether it is to examine witnesses or to base its findings merely on files placed before it by or on behalf of Government ?

(c) If the answer to the above question is that the Committee is to base its findings on such files only, will Government be pleased to modify such procedure and enable the Committee to examine the parties whose statements are placed before the Committee or such other persons as the Committee may consider necessary or desirable, such examinations taking place in camera if the Committee considers it expedient and persons examined before the Committee being granted immunity from any prosecution or other legal proceedings as the result of the information they give during such examination ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to reconsider the desirability of relieving the Committee of the necessity or duty of making any recommendations for introducing any fresh legislation ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why fresh legislation is desired for dealing with any revolutionary conspiracy which the Committee may find to exist in Bengal or any other Province, and why the existing laws are considered to be inadequate ? "

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay replied :—

" (a) The Government of India do not propose to modify the scope of the Committee's enquiry in the manner suggested. It is however at full liberty to examine the records of individual cases, and if it felt moved to make any recommendation in regard to any specific case, the Local Government and the Government of India would attach the greatest possible weight to such an expression of opinion.

(b) and (c) The Resolution with regard to the appointment of this Committee contained the following words :—

> ' It will be given full access to all documentary evidence in the possession of Government bearing on the existence and extent of revolutionary conspiracies in India, and will supplement this with such other evidence as it may consider necessary.'

No change is contemplated in the procedure indicated.

(d) and (e) Under the terms of the Resolution of the 10th of December, 1917, no necessity or duty has been imposed upon the Committee to recommend the introduction of fresh legislation if it does not think it necessary. If it does think it necessary, it will doubtless give the reasons."

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis; Sir William Meyer; Mr. Abdur Rahim; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Maharaja Sir M. C. Nandi.]

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

Budget for 1918-19.

21. " Will Government be pleased to consider the advisability of forecasting the Budget of the Government of India in consultation with a small representative Committee consisting of official and non-official members of the Legislative Council, before it is presented to the Council on the 1st of March ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer asked whether the Hon'ble Member in referring to the Budget meant what is technically known as the Financial Statement.

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis said this was so.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" A suggestion similar to that made by the Hon'ble Member was considered in 1907, but it was decided at that time not to proceed with it. The reasons for this decision were that it was desirable that proposals which may have an important effect on the price of commodities—such alterations in duties for instance as have been made in recent years—and, therefore, on the course of commercial speculation should be kept secret until the time comes for making them public. In the second place, it was thought essential that there should be full opportunity for a confidential exchange of views among the responsible authorities before criticism is invited on their conclusions; and that if the proposals of the Government of India were, as a matter of course, laid before a Budget Committee, there would be a probability that if there were subsequent divergencies of opinion between the Secretary of State and the Government of India these would become known to persons outside responsible circles.

2. The matter will however again come under consideration in connection with the question of constitutional reforms on which the Government of India and the Secretary of State are at present engaged."

The Hon'ble Mr. Abdur Rahim asked :—

Muhammadan representation on the Senate of the Calcutta University.

22. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muhammadan and Hindu members, respectively, of the Senate of the Calcutta University ?

(b) Are Government aware of any existing dissatisfaction in regard to the inadequacy of Muhammadan representation on the Senate, and will Government be pleased to consider the question of increasing such representation ? "

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" (a) The Muhammadan and Hindu Fellows of the Senate of the Calcutta University number at present 8 and 47, respectively.

(b) The Government of India are aware of the desire of Muhammadans for an increased representation on the Senate of the Calcutta University and the matter is already engaging their attention."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Increase in price of cloth and salt in Bengal.

23. " (a) Are Government aware that in several districts of Bengal market-places have been looted for cloth and salt ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if the increasing high prices of these commodities are due to unavoidable economic causes or to speculation or cornering of any kind ?

(c) Are Government prepared to regulate the prices of these commodities and to offer facilities through the District Boards, Local and Taluka Boards, and village unions all over the country, for the sale of these goods under duly notified prices ?

(d) Will Government undertake any organisation for the establishment of a large number of salt factories round the sea-coast of Bengal, and offer greater facilities for the growth and production of long-staple cottons in India ?"

[Sir George Barnes ; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur ; Sir Claude Hill.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) Yes.

(b) The causes of the rise in prices are complex, but there has undoubtedly been a considerable amount of speculation.

(c) The Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the reply I have given to-day to a question by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda on the subject of the regulation of prices. As far as salt from the Northern India salt sources is concerned, facilities are being given for supply to local authorities in priority to the indents of other persons.

(d) The manufacture of salt in Bengal rests with the Local Government and I would refer the Hon'ble Member to the reply which I have given to-day to another question by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.

The possibility of extending the cultivation of long-staple cotton in India is at present being investigated by a special committee. The Hon'ble Member will find the Resolution appointing the Committee, on pages 2108-2109 of the Supplement to the Gazette of India dated the 29th September, 1917, and if the Hon'ble Member wishes I shall be very glad to send him a copy. The whole question will be carefully considered by the Government of India on receipt of the Committee's Report."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

The glass industry in India.

24. " Will Government be pleased to state whether in connection with the glass industry in India (a) the efforts initiated by the United Provinces Government to capture the Austrian trade in bangles and glass have met with some measure of success ; (b) what steps, if any, Government propose taking to encourage the establishment of the industry in India ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" Various steps have been taken to stimulate the glass industry in the United Provinces. The bangle industry at Firozabad is reported to have made great progress and the outturn to have improved in quality as well as in quantity. A new factory has been started in the Moradabad District which is producing superior glassware for lamps and laboratory work The Allahabad factory is also doing well under its present management. The Government of the United Provinces has engaged a glass expert from England who is helping the industry in the Province and whose services have been lent at different times to other Provinces The Local Government has also decided to make a loan to the Moradabad factory on favourable terms, and assistance is being given to the industry where possible in securing raw materials and favourable railway freights. It is hoped that as the result of these measures the industry will be firmly established in the United Provinces before the end of the war.

(b) The general question of policy must await the report of the Indian Industrial Commission which the Government hope to receive at the end of March. "

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Appointment of a Bureau of Information for the sugar industry.

25. " (a) Is it a fact that at the recent session of the Board of Agriculture at Poona, it was decided to appoint a Bureau of Information for the sugar industry ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the scope of the Bureau ? "

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"The Board of Agriculture have recommended the establishment of a Bureau of Information on the sugar industry, but since, as I pointed out in replying to the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul, the Government of India have not yet received the report of the Board's proceedings, they are not in a position to say what action will be taken on this recommendation, or what the scope of the Bureau, if established, will be."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Manufacture of salt in Bengal.

26. " In reply to a question in this Council (September 12, 1917) did Government state that the question of increasing the output of salt in India had been under the consideration of the Government of India for some time and the Governments of Madras and Bombay had been addressed on the subject ?

(a) Will Government be pleased to state (i) the result of the communication with the Governments of Bombay and Madras and (ii) whether any steps have been taken to increase the output of salt in India ?

(b) Is it a fact that since the submission of the memorandum by the Government of Bengal, dated the 5th April, 1917, on the production of salt in that Province (Appendix E, Proceedings of the Council 12th September, 1917), in which it was stated that ' Bengal stands in an unfavourable position as regards the supply of good brine '—that Government has admitted the possibility of the manufacture of salt on the Chittagong side of the Bay of Bengal ?

(c) If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what steps they intend taking to encourage the manufacture of salt in Bengal ?

(d) Is it a fact that in December, 1917, in consequence of an abnormal rise in the price of salt in Bengal resulting in the looting of numerous bazars, the Government of Bengal were constrained to issue a communiqué on the 10th December in connection with the supplies of salt in the Province ?

(e) With a view to preclude the possibility of a recurrence of such a condition of the market, will Government be pleased to take necessary steps to encourage the production of salt in Bengal ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) The Government of Bombay are completing arrangements for the construction of new salt works at Bhandup, which, when in operation, are expected to produce annually about 15 lakhs of maunds of salt. They are also considering the possibility of extending the works at Kharaghoda. In Madras, numerous extensions on a smaller scale are reported, but the increase of production is slow, as the average yield of new pans is, for the first few years of production, considerably below the general average. In Northern India additional plant was last year sanctioned for the Mayo Salt Mine. The output from the mine is increasing month by month. We have raised the output from 14,000 maunds per day to 18,000 maunds, and we hope that by the middle of April it will have reached a total of between 27,000 and 28,000 maunds per day, that is to say, double what it was before the war.

(b) and (c) The Government of India are not aware whether the Government of Bengal now consider that the manufacture of salt on the Chittagong side of the Bay of Bengal is possible, but they understand that the whole question is now being examined by that Government.

(d) Yes.

(e) The attention of the Hon'ble Member is drawn to the reply I have given to-day to a similar question asked by the Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda The production of salt in Bengal is a matter which rests with the Government of that Province."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

One rupee and two and a half rupee currency notes.

27. " Will Government be pleased to state the number of one rupee and two and a half rupee currency notes respectively received from England, issued to the banks and in circulation ? "

[Sir William Meyer.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" The number of one rupee notes so far received from England is 20 millions, the number issued up to the 26th January, 1918, 2,804,246, and the number remaining in circulation on that date 2,139,418. The corresponding figures for Rs. 2½ notes are 8·8 millions, 285,738 and 254,914. Separate figures are not maintained for notes issued to banks and to the public.

2. In addition 210,000 one rupee notes and 100,000 two and a half rupee notes have been issued to treasuries, and 4 lakhs of one rupee notes have been sent to Basra. "

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX BILL.

12-25 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, I rise to introduce the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to income-tax. The Bill was published in the Gazette of India on the 27th October 1917. It is not, therefore, necessary for me to make a separate motion for leave to introduce it, and I shall presently proceed to move that it be referred to a Select Committee. But before doing this I desire to make some explanatory remarks in respect of the Bill.

" I do not intend to occupy the time of the Council with any lengthy account of our reasons for bringing forward this measure; for these have been described with some fulness in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. It will, I think, be of more practical interest if I confine myself in the main to explaining the intentions of Government in regard to some of the principal clauses of the Bill, and to clearing up a few points on which apparently a certain amount of misapprehension exists.

" I wish to emphasise at the outset that a change in the rates at which the tax is levied on various scales of income is not one of the objects of the Bill. Such an alteration where it may be expedient should be undertaken as part of the Budget proposals of a particular year. It would be out of place in a Bill the aim of which is simply to remedy certain defects in the machinery of assessment provided by the existing Act, that have resulted in unequal assessments on persons of equal means, or in a certain amount of our just dues from the tax escaping the Government, which in such a matter is of course the trustee of the public, and to meet as far as possible a reasonable demand that the basis of assessment applied throughout India should be uniform.

" When in 1916 a graduated scale of taxation was grafted on to the old Act with its system of water-tight assessment on different sources of income, it was obvious that inequalities in the incidence of the tax on individual assessees must arise. An income derived from more than one source would often have to pay at a lower rate than an income of equal amount but derived from one source only. This was the first flaw in the Act which we set ourselves to mend, and we have done so by imposing the tax on the aggregate of an assessee's taxable income from all sources and by adopting a uniform period of receipt as the basis of assessment, from whatever source or sources the income is derived.

" I should like here to clear up some misconception in regard to the period in respect of which we assess people to income tax, in other words, the definition of ' year of assessment ' in clause 2 and the provisions of clause 14. These provisions have been subjected to a good deal of unfounded criticism in Calcutta. We have been told that we are starting a new and most undesirable precedent in taxing people on past instead of on current earnings. The result will be that men will, in effect, pay twice over in the same year; and so forth.

" Now we have no such Machiavellian intention. The proper principle, of course, is that a man should pay income tax out of his current earnings or profits; but it is quite impossible, in practice, to assess these during a year in which they have not fully accrued and when he himself cannot tell how he will eventually stand, and this is specially the case in regard to businesses which have been newly founded or expanded. We, therefore, say that we will take the tax with reference to income which an assessee has actually received, i.e., what he has made in the year preceding; and, in practice, that is already done under sections 11 and 15 of the existing Act. The English practice is similar, save that they take a three years' average instead of figures of the immediately preceding year.

" What we have done is to make the existing practice more clear and definite. If you depart from it, you will get endless trouble. A Collector of Income-tax will say to a man: 'I know or believe you made so much last year, but how am I to know that you are not making more than this' and the ultimate result would be chaos. Our principle, which as I have said is not in practice a new principle, of going on past actuals does away with such complications; and in the long run it is quite fair, since if a man is taxed this year, during which time his business may have fallen off, with reference to the profits he made last year, next year he will probably pay less (on this year's actuals) than his current profits would then justify.

" In logical pursuance of this principle, we have omitted section 33 of the present Act, which said that if a company or person ceases to carry on business, or dies or becomes insolvent, or from any other specific cause is deprived of or loses the income on which assessment was made, it or he might, on application, obtain a refund. That section is obviously unnecessary when the assessment is made with reference to income actually received in a given year; and it has been brought to our notice by various Local Governments as a fruitful cause of trouble, assessees being inclined to use it on the 'heads I win, tails you lose' principle. That is if a man considered that he was making more this year than last, he kept quiet and was satisfied with the basis of last year's figures, but if things were the other way he claimed a refund under that section. People cannot have things both ways in this manner, and as I have already said, such inequalities as arise from taking the last year's profits as the basis of assessment are automatically remedied as time goes on.

" I shall be quite ready, however, in this and other respects, to consider any practical suggestions for the amendment of our Bill which may be made in Select Committee.

" Of course there is nothing in the argument that under our scheme a man pays income-tax twice over on the takings of a single year, e.g., 1917-18. He does nothing of the sort, since the 1917-18 assessment was based on the profits of 1916-17, as that of 1918-19 will be on the profits of 1917-18.

" In the past complaints of the lack of uniformity in the bases of assessment applied in the various provinces have been chiefly directed against the methods employed for calculating the profits of business, particularly with regard to allowances for depreciation of plant and machinery. We have attempted to meet these complaints by a clear statement in clause 9 (2) of the Bill of the allowances from gross earnings which will in future be permissible. With regard to depreciation, we provide in clause 9 (2) (vi) for an annual allowance which will enable a fund to be built up, free of income-tax, sufficient for the eventual replacement at the original cost of the particular machine or plant when the time comes for it to be scrapped. The aggregate allowance thus granted will normally be distributed equally over the series of years taken as representing the life of the plant; but where in any given year or years a company or firm is not in a position to set aside the full amount thus permissible it will be permitted to carry forward the balance to be claimed in subsequent years, so long as the allowance claimed in any one year does not exceed twice the normal annual maximum. For instance, if in the first five years of its life a company is unable to set aside any sums for depreciation, it will be permitted to make up for its failure to do so by claiming twice the normal maximum allowance in each of the next five years. The account will carry on. We have imposed a limit of twice the maximum for the allowance to be granted in any one year in order to prevent undesirable fluctuations in our revenue or any manipulation of accounts with the object of avoiding legitimate taxation.

"We have not been able to lay down in the Bill the exact rates of depreciation allowance which will be given on different classes of machinery and plant. The Council will recognise that, as conditions vary in different provinces, it is doubtful whether these rates can be made entirely uniform ; and even if we were now able to tabulate all the different classes of machinery our list would probably become obsolete in a few years' time. But we wish to secure as large a uniformity as possible, and we have therefore asked Local Governments, in consultation with expert opinion and with local Chambers of Commerce, to classify the main existing types of machinery, etc., and to recommend the rates of depreciation allowances to be given in each case. When we have received their replies, it is our intention, if important differences in the rates proposed are still apparent, to convene a small committee to consider the whole question and submit recommendations as to the rates to be finally adopted It will be obvious that the question cannot be settled in time for next year's assessments, and for these assessments the existing rates allowed in the various provinces will be continued. But where as the result of the final decision more liberal rates are fixed, assessees will be permitted to make up in subsequent years any shortage in the allowance granted in 1918. On the other hand,—though that is not, I think, very likely—if any reduction is finally made in existing rates, retrospective effect will not be given to it.

"Clause 32 of the Bill contains new and important provisions which will enable us to reach the Indian profits of foreign firms, which in the past we have often failed to do. As an example, I may mention the case of a German firm dealing in aniline dyes which was registered as a separate limited liability company in India with a capital of Rs. 20,000 The shares of this company were never placed on the market in India and were practically all held in Germany. The registered capital was nominal in comparison with the value of the stock-in-trade, and the parent firm in Germany sold the stock-in-trade to the subsidiary Indian company at a price leaving a margin only just sufficient to cover the expenses of the subsidiary company, or causing an actual loss to be shown. Under the old Act the subsidiary Indian company, by this manipulation, entirely escaped our tax, and this, I am sure every one will agree, was a situation we should not allow to continue. In future, under clause 32 of the Bill, where we suspect any such manipulation, we shall be able to assess the subsidiary Indian company on the profits which it may reasonably be considered to have derived from its Indian business, while where any difficulty is experienced in determining what these profits are, it will be possible to base the assessment on a percentage of turnover, or other suitable method, by issuing a rule under clause 43(2) (d) of the Bill.

"We have also to deal with cases in which non-resident firms set up Indian agencies and by similar methods manage to escape assessment to Indian income-tax. Clauses 32 (1) and 33 of the Bill will enable us to reach the profits of these agencies. They would also—and this is even now the case under section 21 of the existing Act—enable us to tax consignment business carried on through an Indian agent. But we have not in practice enforced this last mentioned liability, and it is not our intention to do so now. To make this clear I will read to the Council an extract from the instructions which we have issued to Local Governments in the matter.

'Indian agents of non-resident firms, of which they are not technically either branches or subsidiary firms, will be liable for the payment, on account of their principals, of the tax on their principals' Indian income or profits under the provisions of clauses 32(1) and 33 of the Bill; and it will be observed that these provisions would permit the levy of the tax on a non-resident's business not only where he has established a regular agency in India, but also where he conducts his business regularly through a particular agent or casually through various agents.

The Government of India do not, however, desire that in practice the liability to assessment should be enforced except where something definitely of the nature of an agency exists, and in particular the freedom from taxation which the profits of consignment business pure and simple enjoy as a result of the instructions contained in Mr. Howard's letter No. 7701-Exc., dated the 27th December 1907, should be continued.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Sir William Meyer; Maharaja Sir M. C. Nandi.]

No attempt should therefore be made to tax the profits of consignment business merely because the non-resident consignor habitually uses a particular resident as his agent. I am to request that instructions to this effect may be given to Collectors of Income-tax. In all cases it will be a question of fact whether the connection between the non-resident and the resident is such that an agency can be held to exist.'

"There is one particular class of business carried on by non-residents to which I must make a special reference. Shipping companies have hitherto under section 5 of the existing Act been exempt from income-tax on their profits made in India. In 1916, when we were discussing the Indian Income-tax (Amendment) Bill, Mr. Vijiaraghavachariar proposed that this exemption should be cancelled, and I promised that the question should be fully considered when a general revision of the Act was undertaken. We have now decided not to continue the exemption in the new law. It was originally granted in 1886 because it was then considered that it would be very difficult to estimate the Indian profits of such companies, or to collect the tax. With the provisions of the present Bill to help us, we do not anticipate a similar difficulty now. We might, for instance, with the aid of a rule under clause 43 (2) (d), calculate the profits on the same proportion of the total profits of the shipping company as the Indian receipts of the company on account of goods shipped or passengers carried from India bear to its total receipts; and we have asked Local Governments for their opinion what would be a suitable method. In the meantime we have omitted from the Bill the existing exemption, so that when the time comes we may have a free hand to deal with the matter. So long as war conditions continue we do not, however, propose to take any active steps to tax these companies, and the existing exemption will be maintained by a notification under clause 44 of the Bill, leaving the final decision over for consideration when peace conditions return.

"Finally, I wish to refer to a complaint which has been made in some quarters that we have shown undue haste in bringing this measure before the Council. I do not think we are open to this charge. It was as long ago as July 1916, that we first asked for the views of Local Governments on amendments in the Income-tax Act, and the opinions which we received from them, from Chambers of Commerce, and from other public bodies and private individuals were most carefully considered before the Bill was drafted. In many instances their recommendations have been incorporated in it. The Bill in its present form has now been before the public for over three months, and we have received the opinions on it of Local Governments and other bodies. I again repeat that the points raised in these opinions will be fully considered in Select Committee.

"I now move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes, the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. Muddiman, the Hon'ble Mr. Howard, the Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia, the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B N. Sarma, the Hon'ble Lieutenant-Colonel Aplin, the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray, the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg, the Hon'ble Sir G. M. Chitnavis, the Hon'ble Sir John Campbell, and myself."

12-37 P.M.

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir, Manindra Chandra Nandi:—"My Lord, I do not believe that there is any member of this Council who would quarrel with Sir William Meyer in his anxiety to consolidate and amend the law relating to income-tax in the country with a view to remedy certain inequalities in the assessment of individual tax-payers under the existing law, to define more precisely the methods whereby income and profits of various descriptions are to be calculated for the purposes of this tax, and to effect improvements in the machinery of assessment. But My Lord, as the representative of the class of men in Bengal who derive most of their income from agricultural sources, I feel it my duty to enter my humble protest against section 4 of this Bill which, under cover of a graduated scale of tax, is likely to contravene the very spirit of Lord Cornwallis's understanding with the owners of permanently-settled estates. Section 4 of the Bill under discussion provides that the net amount of the agricultural income in excess of Rs. 1,000 received by any particular assessee in the year of assessment shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied thus laying him open to be assessed as a landlord at a higher rate than at present. My Lord, it may appear quite equitable to Sir William Meyer to decide that, in assessing the rate on which a person should pay his income-tax on his non-agricultural income, his income from agriculture should be also taken into account as we are told on the authority of our Finance Member, it is not fair for a wealthy landlord to pay the tax at rates 'intended only for the poor.' The question of equity does not arise in this connection at all, as the existing exemption from the tax of all agricultural incomes is based on solemn pledges for well over quarter of a century. Last year, however, on the occasion of presenting his financial statement to this Council, Sir William Meyer sounded for the first time a note of warning, declaring that 'while we refrain on the present occasion from imposing additional taxation on agricultural incomes, we can give no pledge that we shall refrain from doing so hereafter, should future necessities oblige us to take this course.' Fortunately, the proposed indirect imposition upon agricultural incomes does not follow the hard necessities to which the Finance Minister so darkly hinted for he distinctly states that the present Bill is not designed to raise money or higher revenue for the State. If, my Lord, more money is not the object of the present Bill, why give the men with agricultural incomes of over Rs. 1,000 an occasion to think that this is only the thin end of the wedge and that in the name of equity and the improvement of the machinery of assessment, solemn pledges are being disregarded? My Lord I consider the Bill contemplates a momentous departure of principle and, as the representative of the community which will be hard hit by it, I repeat my protest. If the State wants more money it is certainly entitled to have it, and men with large agricultural incomes will not shirk their responsibility in this connection, but I pray, my Lord, the Government must not lend themselves to be misunderstood only for the sake of an 'improvement in the machinery of assessment.'"

12-45 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—"My Lord, the present Bill which seeks to consolidate and amend the Income-tax Act, of 1886, is a measure of far reaching importance. The existing Act has already become antiquated and the income-tax imposed under it remains to this day in its most crude and unscientific form. In so far as this Bill seeks to remove the defects existing in the present Act by improving the machinery of assessment and removing inequalities and other anomalies in the assessment of income-tax payers it deserves our wholehearted sympathy and support. I welcome the introduction of the principles of graduated rates of income-tax and that of abatement in respect of depreciation. These are all measures, my Lord, which have been conceived in a right sprit So far as the income-tax is concerned, it is bound to play a prominent part in the future finances of the State and none could object to any attempt being undertaken by Government to find out ways and means for the development of their financial resources especially during the stress of war as at present, rather we would be but too glad to strengthen the hands of the Government in adjusting the financial machinery at this juncture, but my Lord, it shall have to be safeguarded at the same time, that the machinery provided by the Bill should not prove to be an engine of oppression amongst the people who will be affected by it. I shall, therefore, attempt to lay before the Council some of the hardships which the passing of this Bill is likely, in my opinion, to entail and which involve the consideration of important principles.

One of the outstanding features of the present Bill is the inclusion of 'Agricultural incomes' in the total income of the assessor for the purpose of determining the rate of the tax on his 'Taxable income'. This is an innovation, my Lord, against which we, the landholders, have got particular grievance and I take this opportunity to enter my humble protest against it. This provision will directly affect the landholding classes who are already overburdened with taxation and whose economic condition is far from being satisfactory. In no other country of the world does the Government demand on land is as so heavy as in India. The average Government demand here is 20 per cent. of the gross produce against 4·8 in France, 3·0 in Germany, 4·9 in Australia, 7·0 in Italy, 2·8 in Belgium, 2·8 in Holland, 8·3 in the United Kingdom.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul.]

The inclusion of 'Agricultural income' which is already assessed to such a high pitch of land revenue would tantamount to the introduction of the principle of double taxation, as it were, which will be very much resented. Apart from having to pay such a high rate of land revenue, the annual contribution of the landholding classes to the Imperial Exchequer in the shape of other taxes and duties such as Excise, Salt, Forest, Stamps and Registration, etc., are by no means small. Rather, the whole scheme of Indian taxation taken as a whole, it will be found, that the burden of taxation falls comparatively heavier upon the shoulders of the landholding classes than on that of any others. My Lord, it is needless to remind this Council that it is in the interest of the country on the whole, that the burden of taxation upon the landholding classes should be light. If you want to make India more happy and prosperous you must improve agriculture which is the mainstay of the Indian nation, and if you wish to see agriculture improved you must place the agriculturists in a sound financial position. To think of further saddling them with additional taxations is a policy suicidal to the real interests of the State. My Lord, I am fully alive to the present necessities of the State arising out of war, but in the matter of levying rates of assessment, we have not to look merely to the necessities of the State but we must as well have in view the whole scheme of taxation first from the standpoint of the requirements of the State and secondly from the standpoint of the comparative ability of the different classes to contribute their own quota of the total revenue of the country. The high rate of land revenue assessments from the landholding classes hardly leaves any scope for further encroachment upon their pockets. This is not only the point of view of the landholders, which, I am afraid, may seem to be interested. Rather it was the deliberate opinion of so able an official as the late Mr. J. E. O'Connor who recommended all round reduction of one-third of the revenue demand as it stood in 1901 and it will be borne in mind that the revenue instead of being reduced has considerably increased, since then. It has gone up by more than 2 millions.

"It is true, my Lord, that the agricultural incomes will still enjoy the benefit of exemption, but as I have just stated, the very inclusion of the agricultural income for the mere purpose of determining the rate, will eventually cause an appreciable increase in the income-tax demand leviable from the landholders. The introduction of this novel departure from the accepted policy of the income-tax assessment in the past has not only given rise to serious misgivings but has furnished ample justification for the apprehension already aroused with regard to the general attitude of Government towards the taxation of agricultural income, by the pronouncement of my friend the Hon'ble Finance Member, when he at the time of presenting the last Financial Budget, declared on behalf of the Government, that no pledge could be given that Government would refrain from imposing any additional taxation on agricultural income in future. What wonder then, my Lord, if after this, the introduction of the new proviso in the Bill is regarded by the landholding classes to be merely a thin end of the wedge and has created so much discontent amongst them. I, therefore, urge with all the earnestness and emphasis that I can command that this aspect of the Bill be seriously considered by the Select Committee and that the agricultural income should not in any manner be taken into account for the purpose of the income-tax assessment.

"Next I have to refer to the principle underlying provisions relating to the new powers given to Collectors. The Bill empowers the Collector to issue notices to all the proposed assessees; to submit duly verified statements of their incomes and also to call upon the assessees to produce accounts and other documents in support of the statement if necessary and in case of non-compliance with the terms of the notices the assessee is subjected to more penalties than one. My Lord, I come from the mofussil and I know the conditions prevailing in the backward rural areas and I dare say from my own personal experience the petty money-lenders and traders carrying on business in rural areas will be subjected to much hardships and unnecessary harrassment. The majority of them will find in these drastic provisions of the Bill a Damocles' sword ever hanging over their heads.

In this connection I have to point out two things, viz., in the first place every business man in this country does not keep regular accounts, rather I would say the majority of them have practically no accounts in the true sense of the word and secondly, those who keep accounts are loath to produce them publicly for the very obvious reason of upholding their credit and prestige in the money market by avoiding any publicity being given to their real assets and liabilities, especially because borrowed money forms an integral part of their working capital, which they would never like to disclose so far as they could prevent it. Even in the United Kingdom the tax-payer cannot be forced to produce his account books and the legislation has provided for other devices to gain the desired end, without having had to enforce such heavy penalties as this Bill provides. In my opinion it is sufficient that the tax is gradually raised to a point when the assessee is forced to produce his accounts if he has any of his own accord.

"The penalties imposed for the non-compliance of the term of notices issued under the Act, will not only be found harsh but excessive as well. The defaulting assessee is not only subject to the payment of the double rate of income-tax, but would at the same time be liable to a futher penalty, viz., a fine extending to Rs. 10 daily till the continuation of default and to add to grievances still further, he will not be even given a chance to establish the 'bona fides' of his mistake, as clause 38 at present stands. This is a matter which deserves serious consideration at the hands of the Select Committee.

"My Lord, before I conclude I have only to refer to one more point viz., the longstanding general grievance against the manner in which the income-tax has been hitherto administered in this country, how the people are thrown entirely at the mercy of the assessing officer and how prefunctorily the objections and appeals preferred by the dissatisfied assessees are disposed of is already a theme of loud complaint. These are all matters, my Lord which should not be overlooked and in view of this the bar to Civil Suits as provided in the Bill should be removed. In England, the dissatisfied party can refer to the High Court for opinion and the High Court has a right to reverse, affirm or amend the orders of the assessing Commissioner, and the decision of the High Court is final and binding on all parties concerned. In my opinion similar powers should be given to High Courts in India.

"These are the few observations, my Lord, which I beg to make with regard to some of the principles underlying the Bill and I hope the Select Committee will so modify the Bill as to make it more popular in character and less oppressive in application."

12-46 P.M. The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—"My Lord, as I shall have an opportunity of discussing this Bill in the Select Committee, I do not like to trouble the Council with a detailed criticism of its provisions at the present stage. But I cannot help taking strong exception to clause 4 of the Bill. It was after the Mutiny, in 1862, that the first attempt was made to impose income-tax on agricultural incomes. At that time the then Maharajadhiraj of Burdwan, the grandfather of the present Maharaja, acquiesced in the proposal of the income-tax being levied on agricultural incomes. Instead of attempting to impose the tax directly, which would be much better, what the Government now propose to do is to impose it in an indirect way. I therefore, beg to take exception to this indirect attempt to impose a tax on agricultural incomes. I need not trouble the Council with the other provisions of the Bill."

12-48 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray :—"My Lord, I do not propose at this stage to say very much about the Bill. The Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce have put forward their views very fully in their letter to their Local Government and those views are, or, I believe shortly will be, also in the hands of the Government of India, and I hope they will be given very full consideration in Select Committee.

[6TH FEBRUARY 1918.] [Sir Hugh Bray; Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg.]

"There is one point, however, to which I want to draw the attention of this Council. It is a point which the Hon'ble Finance Member has already referred to. He naturally has referred to it from his own point of view, in the way he looks at it, and I should like to refer to it from my point of view and the way I look at it. Income-tax legislation is a complicated matter and one that few perhaps take very much interest in or take the trouble to study very carefully. I know for a fact that in this case there are people who scrutinise this Bill very carefully and have yet missed the point altogether. The point I refer to is this. Up to now income-tax has always been paid on the current year's income. It is true that in the case of such incomes as those of firms, companies, etc., the amount of the tax payable has been arrived at by taking the figures of the previous year's income, and if, ultimately, it has been found that that basis is a wrong one, adjustment under the present Act has been possible. Now the Hon'ble the Finance Member by this Bill proposes to make a very drastic alteration in that practice or principle. By this Bill the previous year's income will no longer be the basis for fixing the amount of tax payable for the current year. So that, although a company may hold a receipt from the Collector of Income-tax to the effect that it has paid its income-tax for 1917-18, yet on the 1st of April next, if by that date this Bill should become law, it will again become liable for income-tax on its income for 1917-18, and should its profits for 1918-19 be much less than was estimated it will still have to pay that higher rate, since, under this Bill, provision for adjustment is omitted. Now, I understand that the Hon'ble Member justifies this in a way by saying that it will average out all right in future years. Well that may be a fair risk for Government to take, but why force that risk on the unfortunate tax-payer. Government lives for ever: the tax-payer comes to an end sooner or later; and if he comes to an end, as he does, where does his chance of averaging out come in? It is all in Government's favour as far as I can see I think from what the Hon'ble Member said last year in the matter of the super-tax that he forecasted then the possibility of bringing the income-tax into line with the super-tax in this particular respect Well, last year when he adopted the principle of retrospective taxation, my Lord, if I may use a colloquialism, it made us sit up, but we took it lying down because it was a war measure and because it was a levy on the large profits we had made. Though we disliked the principle extremely, we acquiesced purely from patriotic motives. But when it comes to adopting the same principle in regard to the income-tax we must protest most emphatically. Nowhere in the British Empire is the income-tax levied on anything except the current year's income. The proposal to make a new departure should be most carefully considered; and I hope if there are any Members of this Council who have not fairly appreciated this particular point and what the Bill means, that they will give it their further and most careful study.

"There is much more that I could say on this point and on the other features of the Bill to which the Honourable Member referred, but I think I will say no more now because I hope that this Bill will emerge ultimately from the Select Committee in a very much more acceptable form than it appears at present."

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg:—"My Lord, I am glad to learn from the Hon'ble the Finance Member that it is not the intention of the Government to introduce any change in the principle as to the year in respect of which the tax is levied. The present system is that the tax collected in, let us say, 1918-19 is a tax on the current income for that year which is primarily assessed for purposes of convenience, upon the ascertained income of the previous year. If I understand the Hon'ble Member rightly, it is the intention of Government that that principle should be maintained and continued. 12-54 P.M.

"But while I am glad to learn of the innocence of the Hon'ble Member's intentions, I must confess that they appear to me to be wrapped in obscurity in the present Bill. I am quite unable to see how section 14 of the present

[Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

Bill, read in conjunction with the definition of 'the year of assessment' in section 2, can in the absence of any provision similar to section 33 of the present Act, mean anything else than that the tax collected in the year 1918-19 is a tax upon the income of the previous year. However, as I shall have an opportunity, I hope, of debating this point with the Hon'ble Member in the Select Committee, I need not say anything more about it here.

"There is one other point to which I should like to refer. The Hon'ble Member, in his opening remarks, justified the omission of any provision similar to section 33 of the existing Act from this Bill on the ground that it operated entirely in favour of the assessee. The Hon'ble Member complained that the assessee only called attention to the incorrectness of an assessment if his income proved to be less than the income of the previous year upon which the assessment was made. I really do not see why the Hon'ble Member should expect the shorn lamb to return to the shearer and point out that there is a little wool left on his back. Just as it is for the assessee to point out if his income proves to be less, so I should have thought it was for Government to call attention to the matter if the assessment should have been greater. I quite agree that in section 33 of the present Bill there does not appear to be any provision for enhancement of assessment but only for reduction of assessment. Personally I think it would be quite equitable that there should be provision for enhancement as well as for reduction, and I think this Bill should contain a provision for both enhancement and reduction of assessment in the event of the actual income of the current year proving to be greater or less than the income of the previous year upon which the assessment is made."

12-57 P.M.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, I fail to understand the procedure that has been adopted on this occasion in dealing with a proposal for taxation. The Hon'ble the Finance Member says that this Bill is not a Bill by which it is designed either by altering the rate of the tax or otherwise to raise money. He emphasises that point very clearly; but I submit, my Lord, that the Bill does result in raising taxation. It does affect the rate of taxation at which the tax to be paid by a particular person is to be determined. Section 4 says agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax. That is very good. But the net amount of such income in excess of Rs. 1,000 which has been received by an assessee in the year of assessment shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income chargeable under this Act. Now the income-tax chargeable under this Act, but for this provision of section 4, would be on the income which a man derives from non-agricultural sources; the Hon'ble the Finance Member says he does not want to touch agricultural income; but he says if a man has an agricultural income in excess of a certain amount, that shall be taken into account and shall determine the rate of the tax which he has to pay on his non-agricultural income. That is to say, by this device the rate of taxation for a person who happens to be the unfortunate recipient of an income from agricultural sources is raised. I do not think, my Lord, that this is the right way to proceed about this business of raising the rate of taxation which is to be paid by persons who are in possession of large incomes. I think the straighter course would be for those concerned to say that money is needed and to ask those people to contribute.

"But I am puzzled on a second point also. I think this is the first occasion, so far as I remember, in this Council, of a proposal for taxation being put forward without there being any justification presented for such proposal. We have not yet any idea what the Financial Statement will be like; we do not know whether we shall have a surplus or be short of the requirements for the year. We have not been told for what reason more money should be raised by taxation; and yet here under the guise of a consolidating and amending Income-tax Act a proposal for taxation is put before the Council. I submit, Sir, that unless the Hon'ble the Finance Member is able to tell the Council that there is need for further taxation being raised during the coming year, this Bill ought not to be allowed to go before the Select Committee, because the principle underlying it is one of fresh taxation. In so far as the mere adjustment of the existing machinery is concerned, in so far as the removal of inequalities in the administration of the income-tax which does not lead to fresh taxation on the people is concerned, I have not the slightest objection to a Bill like this being prepared and placed before the Council. But in so far as the Bill purports or must result in increasing the amount to be paid by a certain class of persons—and that a very large class—I do object to the Bill in its present form. I think, my Lord, therefore that this Bill ought not to be allowed to be referred to a Select Committee in its present form, unless the Hon'ble the Finance Member is able, with Your Excellency's permission, to tell the Council that there is a necessity for fresh taxation, and, in that case, that the form proposed is the best form of raising more taxation."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"My Lord, I desire to associate myself with the observations which have fallen from my Hon'ble friends on my right in their protest against section 4 of this Bill. Both my friends are zemindars, inheritors of large estates; and one of them is the descendant of Kantu Babu who played so prominent a part in connection with the early establishment of British rule in India. He is the inheritor of property which has come down to him from generation to generation. He is the holder of a solemn league and covenant entered into between the British Government and his ancestors; and he now tells us in this Council before Your Excellency, the head of this Government, that section 4 of the Bill makes a serious encroachment upon the rights guaranteed to Bengal Zemindars by the permanent settlement. Is that so or is it not so? I want a straight answer from the Government. The permanent settlement may be a good thing; in the opinion of some it is a very bad thing, it is an evil. But be it a good thing or be it an evil thing, it is there and it has come to stay. You cannot get rid of it; you cannot discard a solemn covenant entered into by the Government in 1793 which has been consistently acted upon for a period of over a century. 'The word of a British Officer' says Macaulay in his life of Warren Hastings 'is more binding than the most solemn oaths which superstition can inspire.' And our reading of Anglo-Indian history is this that when a pledge is given, when a solemn contract has been made on behalf of Government, that pledge and that contract are never departed from. Is it to be departed from on this occasion? Are the terms of the permanant settlement encroached upon by section 4 of the Bill? My friends here say 'yes.' We want a straight answer from the Government in this connection. There seems to be the less justification for it because as my Hon'ble friend the Finance Minister has told us there is not the smallest desire to add to the taxation of the country. It is a readjustment of the machinery for taxation. If that be the case I am sure my friends will submit to all measures; but if it is merely a question of administrative re-arrangement, it seems to me that that section is absolutely indefensible.

1-1 P.M.

"My Lord, there is a further consideration which I desire to submit to Your Excellency's Government. If you tax agricultural income you may do it frankly; it may be dexterous enough, but there is not the slightest doubt that you do tax agricultural income when you include it in the general income of a zemindar. Now, who will pay the tax? The zemindars? But do you really mean to say that the zemindar will pay? Will he not try to extract as much as he can out of the ryot? Therefore, in the interests of zemindars and in the interests of the ryots alike I desire to record my most emphatic protest against section 4 of the Bill. Above all in the interests of good government, in the interests of the good name of the Government, I desire to record my protest. The Court of Directors said on a memorable occasion that not only should the British Government administer justice, but that the people should be convinced that justice had been administered. I venture to submit that that principle is applicable in this case. It would create a most unfavourable impression if the feeling were created in the minds of the great zemindars of Bengal that there has been in this case an attempt made to interfere with the solemn rights guaranteed by the good faith and the honour of the British Government, for after all popular confidence in the good faith of the Government is the greatest bulwark of States, and Thrones. I venture, my Lord, therefore, to enter my most emphatic protest against section 4 of the Bill."

1-6 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar :—" My Lord by the new Bill that is before us the principles of graduated taxation seem to have become an established and settled fact. Last year when this principle came to be realised I tried my best to point out to the Council the injustice of this kind of progressive taxation. The finance minister then said that my remarks against these socialistic innovations were refreshing but now there seems to be no end to this principle and tighter grips are being forged as are evidenced in this new Bill.

" My constituency has asked me to protest emphatically against the new innovation of taking into consideration the agricultural income for the purpose of levying a higher rate of income-tax. It is virtually an attempt to bring agricultural income within the scope of taxation though not fully yet partially. The principle followed by the Government till now has always been that agricultural income should not be subject to income-tax, the land being otherwise heavily taxed I wish to point out that this principle should never be violated. Even at the risk of repetition I beg to say that zamindars hold a covenant from the Government that no kind of assessment will be levied beyond their fixed payment to the State and even the local cesses that are levied on them are considered to be a gross encroachment on their rights In Bengal this levy of the cess was carried by the executive after a very sharp division—the Council dividing half and half and the casting vote being given in favour of the levy. And now this Bill goes against the pledges solemnly made.

" There is another point that requires the sympathetic consideration of the Council, namely, that a single dwelling house which is a bare necessity of every one should be free from income-tax. There is no objection to taxing houses if they are partly or fully leased out It is certainly assessing an imaginary income if one's own dwelling house is included in estimating his taxable income. The Punjab Government while emphasising this point aptly cites the cases of persons, inheriting palatial ancestral houses which are often their only earthly possessions. It would, therefore, be only fair if the dwelling house is excluded in calculating the income of the assessee.

" Then in Madras, the largest bankers of India, the Nattukottai Chetty community, apprehend the greatest hardship since the Bill compels them to submit their account books to the Collector of the district where they live. Their firms are conducted in far off places such as Rangoon, Siam and the Straits Settlements. It is only in five years or at longer intervals that these proprietors go to those places to satisfy themselves that their business is conducted safely. To compel them to produce their account books at their place of residence would dislocate their business considerably. The matter was brought to the notice of the Madras Government through a Resolution moved in the Local Legislative Council that a profit and loss statement prepared by approved, chartered or certified accountants may be accepted in lieu of their account books. Owing to the reasonableness of this Resolution it has been accepted by that Government. Now the present Bill should either accept the principles of this Resolution or declare that the place of assessment may be where the business is carried on and not at the place of residence of the assessee.

" Due consideration should be given to the depreciation in the value of Government securities, municipal debentures and the like. Depreciation in Government securities has been of late very heavy. The reason that applies to the depreciation in buildings and machinery and plant applies also to the depreciation in Government securities and other investments. Temporary fluctuations need not be considered.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis; Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay.]

"There is also a widespread feeling that no distinction should be made in the rate of assessment between an individual and a joint-stock company. The struggling nature of these companies that are floated in India should weigh with the Government to do away with unnecessarily burdensome higher rates.

"Then in the matter of treating the wife's income as part of the husband's, due care should be exercised to distinguish between the proceeds from any money given to her or invested in her name by her husband and the proceeds derived from the property given to her by her own parents or relations other than the husband. Under the Hindu Law, a husband has no right over the Stridhanam of his wife, that is, over the property given to her by her own relations. What she recieves from such property must be treated as her own in the same way as the income from any business carried on independently by her.

"The natural reserve and timidity of Indians will stand in the way of their exerting themselves for applying for refunds. We have seen the working of the Land Revenue Act, how many resort to the system of refunds under it. Considering the large percentage of people who do not know the intricate provisions of the law but only pay tax simply because it is demanded of them, the law should necessarily be made suitable to all classes by doing away with over-collections first and refunds afterwards. Even without the Government exhibiting the feverish anxiety as implied in over-collections first and refunds afterwards, the assessees will not escape higher rates if their income is found at any time to fetch higher rates.

"I suppose section 37 will not apply to life assurance companies where refunds can be obtained only after five or three years when alone the valuations are made by the actuary.

"Throughout the world any tax-payer who feels aggrieved has got the right of appeal in a court of law. The Taxes Management Act of 1880 in England, I understand, and the Colonial Income-tax Acts—all provide for such right. Only in India is the executive unwilling to trust the judiciary and so restricts appeal to a court of law. When other principles of Indian Law are assimilated to English and Colonial ideals, this right of appeal to the judiciary on every doubtful point should be the first deserving of such assimilation. I trust my remarks will receive favourable consideration in the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis :—"My Lord, at this stage, I think it my duty to support the previous speakers in the objections they have raised to include agricultural income in the income-tax assessment. This is a novel principle in India. Agricultural income is an uncertain income subject to many vicissitudes of seasons and other complex considerations. It is also sufficiently taxed at the time of the settlements which comes off in many parts of the country every 15 or 20 years. I, therefore, think it my duty to oppose it and place before Government the resentment felt against it by the landholders who in their humble way have done and will ever be ready as loyal citizens of the Empire to do what they can in this war and on other occasions. I would reserve my remarks on the other provisions of the Bill for the Select Committee." 1-11 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay :—"My Lord, I feel that I would be wanting in my duty to the great landholding classes in Bihar and Orissa and also in my duty towards the agricultural population of that province if I did not enter a strong protest against the principles underlying section 4 of the Income-tax Bill. My Lord, my colleagues representing the landholders of the different parts of India have expressed themselves with due emphasis on that point. There was a pledge given to the landholders of my province at the time the Permanent Settlement was concluded in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa that there would be no further taxation on land. It is quite true the present Bill, so far as this matter is concerned, is silent, but 1-18 P.M.

Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay; Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

it is silent only to the extent that it does not say plainly that the landlords are going to be taxed. One has to read sections 2 and 4 to arrive at the conclusion as to what the real intention of the measure is. Clause 4 says agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax, but the net amount of such income in excess of one thousand rupees which has been received by an assessee in the year of assessment shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income chargeable to income-tax under this Act. My Lord, that is an indirect method—and I am sorry to have to say not a very approved method—to tax the landholders. If they are going to be taxed, as a previous speaker said, they ought to be told in plain terms that the Government is in need of money and that there is no other source that can be tapped and that they ought to pay. But to approach their pockets in this indirect way is objectionable from more than one point of view. I do not desire to say more, I have felt it my duty to enter this protest, all the more because of the absence of my colleague from Bihar and Orissa who represents the land-holding classes."

1-15 P.M. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—"My Lord, without entering into a detailed discussion of the question at this stage, I desire to associate myself with all that has been said by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Malaviya with reference to the effect and nature of the enactment embodied in section 4 of the Bill. Should this section come back to us from the Select Committee unamended, I reserve to myself the right to reopen the question at a later stage of the case. To-day I would add my protest to those of my Hon'ble friends who have already spoken about this."

1-16 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, I cannot understand how Hon'ble Members find themselves in this discussion opposed to clause 4 and why they have charged Government indirectly with a breach of the covenant entered with landlords in the early part of the last century. But I fear that if we analyse the principles on which graduated income-tax is based there will be little ground or justification for the complaint against Government. It may be that on grounds of policy and because money is not required at the present juncture, in Select Committee Government may accede to the wishes of the zamindars and remove this clause against which there have been strong protests. I suppose graduated income-tax proceeds on the principle, that a man who has a superabundance should give to the state a little more out of his excess than his less fortunate brother. Once the principle is accepted I cannot see how we can escape from the conclusion that whether income is derived from agriculture, from commerce or from any other source it ought to be included within the total aggregate assessable income for the purpose of the graduated income-tax. It does not matter to a man who possesses a lakh of rupees whether that money comes to him from land, from money-lending, from commerce or from trade. If it is a question of proportional taxation, certainly he ought to pay at the rate of 4 pice just as a man who receives an income of one thousand rupees does. But if it is not a question of proportional taxation, if it is a question of graduated taxation, if a person who possesses superabundance is expected to pay at the rate of two or three annas because so much of his income is not required for his needs, it passes my comprehension as to why any serious objection should be taken to agricultural incomes also being included within assessable incomes for the purposes of income-tax assessment rate. Well, whether any exception should be made in the case of land-holders is a matter of policy with which we are not concerned at present. But I think that it would be wrong to take exception to section 4 on the ground that the Government are intending to introduce the thin end of the wedge or that agricultural incomes are intended in an indirect manner to be brought within the purview of taxation in violation of any pledges that might have been given at any previous time.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Mr. G. S. Khaparde.]

"There are one or two other points which I shall have an opportunity of discussing in the Select Committee and to which I shall not allude at the present moment at length. One of such matters is the question as to whether any detailed provision ought to be made in the case of assessing members of an undivided Hindu family. Hon'ble Members will remember the discussion that took place when the Super-tax Bill was under discussion, and I hope that, inasmuch as these two Acts have to be read together for various purposes, the Select Committee will consider whether the objections that were then taken to the undivided Hindu family being treated as a unit for all purposes should be taken up and disposed of."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde :—"My Lord, this Bill reminds me of a picture which I used to see in my school days. If you looked at it from the front you saw the features of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria; if you looked at it from one side it showed the Prince Consort, whereas from the third side it presented the then Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII. This Bill is somewhat similar in character. It is said that the Bill is not intended for raising money, but it is to be merely a consolidating measure designed to remove inequalities and afford facilities for the collection of income-tax hereafter. This is the impression which it makes at first sight, but when you examine its provisions a little more carefully you find that it is really a measure for introducing taxation. See the definitions of the words 'agricultural income,' 'total income' and 'taxable income.' Then you will see that the agricultural income which has hitherto never been assessed is now brought in indirectly. It is brought in to be taken into consideration to determine the rate of the tax on the taxable income. In other words, it actually indirectly taxes the agricultural income. To do so would be against principle, because land when it pays assessment to Government already pays a tax. Then the produce raised on the land ought not to be further taxed. The agriculturist has obtained by paying his assessment permission to raise crops. Government, therefore, cannot tax the crops again. I see in the opinions circulated there is an attempt to look upon the Government assessment on land as rent, but it cannot be called so because Government never assumes the responsibilities of a landlord. It merely collects so much tax on so much land according to its quality. That being so I do not understand why the agriculturists should be doubly taxed once as land-tax and again on the income.

"My Lord, this tax last year came before this Council in another shape, namely as a super-tax, and it was supported by the Hon'ble Members of this Council because it was distinctly understood that it was to be a war measure. Now it gets into this Bill as a permanent tax, I humbly submit that when our house is on fire we call in the fire brigade and we make it as comfortable as we can, but after the fire is extinguished we do not like that the brigade should be quartered upon us permanently. When they have done their purpose they ought to depart, so too should a war measure. During the war I am willing that money may be raised in all possible ways, but I do not like that these war measures should become permanent. So long as you treat them as temporaries and accommodate them only like necessary guests in tents outside in the compound you can easily get them to leave by merely pulling down the tent. But if you accommodate them in your main building and make them comfortable and they do not choose to depart you have nothing left but to apply for eviction, which is a tedious process. Similarly, if this super-tax and measures like it are once made permanent and are put in the Statute Book, it will be very very difficult to take them out again. My Lord, I submit that temporaries should be temporaries and should never become permanencies.

"Then the principle of exclusion in this Bill has not been properly brought out. Land-tax when paid can be deducted from the taxable income, then why not the municipal taxes? They go to reduce the income of a person just as much as land-tax does. What, then, is the principle on which land-tax is allowed to be deducted and not the other taxes? There are similar matters, but on this occasion it is not necessary to go into details. The measure is by itself objectionable, because there is really no case made out for raising money. There are many other points in connection with this measure on which one could speak, but they will no doubt be discussed in the Select Committee. At present, therefore, I join my humble voice to the protest that has been raised from all sides of the Council."

1-29 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer.—"My Lord, an Income-tax Bill always calls forth what some theologians call a rational love of self. In some cases voiced in to-day's speeches, I might even call it irrational.

"A certain class of people talk as if the Government were a hostile, foreign power trying to grab money out of their pockets; and that it therefore becomes a positive virtue on their part to evade its demands. Well, as I said in my opening speech, the Government are the trustees of the general community; and in that character they are repeatedly asked to do this, that and the other—to develop education, to develop sanitation, to defend the country and so on, and they have got to have the means for it. We must keep in mind the fact that people who are paying the income-tax are contributing to the needs of the general community and not, as the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde seems to think, to some mysterious force outside the community which sends the police into his compound.

"May I say, my Lord, that I was very glad to hear once more the Boanerges blast of the turgid eloquence of my Hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Banerjee; and not surprised to find the rafters resound once again with his charges of breach of faith......"

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"May I rise to offer a personal explanation. I said that there is this allegation made and we ought to have a straight answer from the Government. I did not make that charge at all. I said it has been made and that it was the duty of the Government to say 'yes' or 'no' to that charge."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"I understood the Hon'ble Member to take up the matter with some gusto; but I now gather that he was merely an ingenuous inquirer for information. Well, the Hon'ble Member has been devoting himself so assiduously of late to the political future of India that I rather think he has forgotten what is after all the not very remote past. The first Income-tax Act of 1860 deliberately taxed all landed profits. The same procedure was continued in other Acts so that even if we were to tax agricultural profits now—which we are not proposing to do—it would be a mere question of expediency. There can be no question of breach of faith, or of rending covenants that have remained untouched for over a hundred years, as my Hon'ble friend said......"

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"One bad precedent does not justify another, does it?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"It disposes of my Hon'ble friend's argument that anything which brought agricultural profits into an income-tax would be a unique departure. It has been done before.

"Then we get to the Hon'ble gentleman from Madras, the Hon'ble Mr. Ayyangar, who stands forth once more as an unabashed extremist defender of capitalist and landlord interests, and has told us that it is wrong even to levy local cesses from the landlords. To his mind, the landlords ought to be, like the old French aristocracy, a privileged class, paying no taxation and living on the rest of the community.

"My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul struck a quite new argument, for he said the landlords were entitled to our special consideration because of their contributions to the excise revenue. Do I understand that my Hon'ble friend alleges that the landlords drink more than other classes?

"Well, my Lord, there is no question of breach of faith—nor do we tax agricultural incomes directly at all. We have merely said that, for the reasons explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, when there is a graduated scale of income-tax, and the rich man pays at a higher rate than the poor man it is equitable, in assessing a landlord in regard to his non-agricultural profits, that we should also take into account, in fixing the rate of assessment, the exempted amount he makes from agriculture.

"The Hon'ble Pandit has started a new constitutional theory of taxation, that taxation should only be imposed in connection with the Budget speech and says that this Bill imposes an additional taxation. I say it is not a taxation Bill, though it is a Bill which will in some ways get us more revenue......"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"May I say that what I said was not that taxation should not be introduced at any other time than when the Budget is before the Council, but that, as the Financial Statement is not before us, I should like my Hon'ble friend to tell the Council what need there is for this extra taxation. I take it he has to justify his proposal as fresh taxation."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"I take note of the Hon'ble Pandit's supplementary speech. He says that he asked me to justify the reasons for fresh taxation put into this Bill. Well, I say there is no direct fresh taxation, though the Government will get more money in certain ways. Its object is to make income-tax taxation more equitable. We have always found it a difficulty in past times, in dealing with the income-tax, that there was material objection to its enhancement, because people felt that it pressed unequally; that the honest man paid more than the dishonest man; and that our present Act with its water-tight compartments enabled, as I have said in my opening speech, men who are getting the same aggregate income to be taxed at different rates. We desire to get rid of these anomalies in the interests of the community, to bring people within the income-tax net who have escaped—improperly as we think. We desire, in applying the graduated scale, to have reference to income on which a man has not paid taxation under this Bill, but only as a matter of equity in considering the rate on which he shall pay on the remainder of his income. If the Hon'ble Pandit chooses to say that making our Bill more equitable, by bringing people into the net who ought, in our opinion, to be in it is fresh taxation, well, he is welcome to his opinion. I am not in the least ashamed of imposing such taxation, and I do it in the interests of justice and equity.

"Well, my Lord, these matters—the various criticisms that have been made—will be dealt with in the Select Committee—this question of agricultural profits especially. As I have said, there is no question of breach of faith; there is nothing which we are not absolutely entitled to do; it is a matter of expediency. I have taken note—my Hon'ble Colleagues around me have taken note—of the universal anxiety of the landlords that they should not pay any money they can help. I have taken note of the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee's declaration that if the zemindars have to pay extra taxation to Government they will obtain all of it and more also from their tenants . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee:—"I did not say all; I said a portion of it, and I stick to that."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Well, as I said, we shall consider the matter with an open mind in the Select Committee.

"The only other question raised which purported to be one of principle is the one I mentioned at the beginning of my speech as to the 'year of any one of which might have produced a catastrophe. Only last November there was a fire in Calcutta resulting in the destruction of 100,000 feet of films.

"In these cases the fires for the most part occurred when the auditorium was empty: and in one or two cases the fire was prevented from becoming serious by the fact that the buildings were of corrugated iron or fitted with fire proof doors. But on the whole, it may be said, that we have escaped rather by good luck than good management and when this Council remembers the appalling calamities that have occurred through faulty arrangements in various parts of the world, I think they will agree that it is time that we put our house in order.

"I beg to move that that the Bill to make provision for regulating exhibitions by means of cinematographs be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes; the Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali; the Hon'ble Sir James Walker; the Hon'ble Sir Edward Maclagan; the Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan; the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri; the Hon'ble Mr. Walsh; the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee and myself."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE INDIAN FOREST (AMENDMENT) BILL.

1-50 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill:—"My Lord, in introducing this Bill, which, like Sir James DuBoulay's, is a very little one, I have very little to say in amplification of what is contained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. This Bill is really the result of minor defects which have been found to exist in the Forest Act during the past 7 years; and I think the department is entitled to congratulate itself in that the amendments are so few. They are practically only three in number. The first relates to section 29 of the Act under which a Local Government may from time to time by notification declare that a portion of a protected forest may be closed for such time not exceeding 'twenty' years as the Local Government thinks fit. Well, experience has shown that the period of twenty years is not enough to allow for regeneration, at all events in many cases; and it is therefore proposed to take power to extend that period to thirty years in clause 2 of the Bill.

"Then we propose by clauses 3 and 5 of the Bill to add to sections 52 and 63 of the Act. Section 52 at present reads as follows:—'When there is reason to believe that a forest offence has been committed in respect of any forest produce, such produce, together with all tools, boats, carts and cattle used in committing any such offence may be seized by any forest officer or police officer.' Section 63 permits of the arrest of any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists of having been concerned in a forest offence punishable with imprisonment for one month or upwards. In neither case is there any provision for the release on bond or bail, as the case may be, of the property or person of the offender. By clause 3 of the Bill we propose to remedy the omission in section 52 by providing that any officer of a rank not inferior to that of a Ranger may release the property which has been seized on the execution by the owner of a bond; and in the case of section 63 the amendment embodied in clause 5 of the Bill provides that an officer not below the rank of Ranger may release the individual arrested on his executing a bond to appear if necessary before a magistrate. I do not think there will be any question as to the advantage of these amendments. The third amendment to which I need refer relates to section 78 of the Forest Act under which privilege holders are bound to furnish any information respecting the commission of a forest offence and to assist in extinguishing any fire occurring in a forest. It was represented some five years ago by one Local Government, and all Local Governments admit the validity of the representation, that this obligation on the part of privilege holders is not sufficient and that they ought to be compelled—those who are in possession of certain advantages in State property ought to be compelled—of their own motion to take steps for the prevention and extinction of forest fires. It is therefore proposed by clause 6 of the Bill to substitute the following: privilege holders shall forthwith take steps whether so required by any forest officer or police officer or not:—(a) to extinguish any forest fire in such forest of which he has knowledge or information, and (b) to prevent by any lawful means in his power any fire in the vicinity of such forest of which he has knowledge or information from spreading to such forest. In other words those who have derived certain privileges from State property are held responsible for taking steps to protect such property. Finally, in order to make this new provision effective it is proposed by sub-clause (2) of clause 6 to provide a penalty I do not think I need say anything in regard to the minor and purely consequential amendments. I therefore beg to introduce the Bill and to move that the Bill together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned for Lunch till 3-15 P. M.

RESOLUTION RE REDISTRIBUTION OF PROVINCIAL AREAS AND THE CONSTITUTION OF PROVINCES ON A LANGUAGE BASIS.

3-15 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"May it please Your Excellency, I rise, with a confidence new born in me, to move the resolution which stands against my name. The resolution reads thus:—

"This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council (a) the redistribution of provincial areas, and the constitution of provinces, where necessary, to secure complete success for self-governing institutions in British India; (b) the rearrangement of provincial areas on a language basis wherever and to the extent possible, especially where the people speaking a distinct language and sufficiently large in numbers, desire such a change.

"It is with feelings of profound satisfaction and joy that the people of India welcomed the memorable announcement of the 20th August last, wherein responsible government in India as an integral part of the British Empire has been declared to be the goal of British policy. The Indian people cannot be too grateful to His Majesty and the British public for the imaginative, sympathetic foresight and wisdom which dictated the policy of the Cabinet, and fortunate indeed are we for the happy combination which brought together a Lloyd George, a Montagu and Lord Curzon. May we be permitted to congratulate your Excellency on your rare good fortune, that it was on your initiative and during your regimé are being laid the foundations of the fabric of a constitution destined to make the British Empire the mightiest, the loftiest, purest and the most high souled the world has ever seen. Now that the work of reconstruction has been undertaken and not a day too soon, I have ventured to seek the assistance of the Council in pressing upon the attention of the Government for their acceptance my long cherished ideas, dreams, hopes, may be, illusions, and I am deeply grateful that your Excellency has ushered the dawn of a new era in allowing this important subject to be treated as an open question.

"Responsible government as an integral part of the British Empire being the object to be achieved, we are confronted with the problem of laying the foundations well and truly for the construction of a federation within a federation a federal unit, part of a larger whole. The problem is simplified to the extent that the burden and responsibility of enunciating foreign policy in the fullest sense of the term rests largely with others, and British Indian federalism deals only or mainly with problems of internal administration. We are not confronted with another difficulty, which faced the federalists of other times and at other places in that the privileges, powers and rights, financial, legislative and administrative, of the component parts proceed from the centre. India is fortunate in that she has for untold ages been in the midst of her diversity accustomed to a central control, however feeble at times such control may have been, and the essential unity of her economic interests, her geographical position, and the community of beliefs, traditions, the sense of oneness and nationhood, the product of centuries of common government, coupled with large provincial independence eminently fit her for the constitution which His Majesty's Government has resolved upon conferring and the essential and minute details of which are to be worked out. Western Hindustan, the Central, the Eastern, and the Deccan have been the centres of power, the centrifugal forces are not negligible, demonstrating that the central authority cannot be unduly weakened But it must be remembered that that was in the old days of autocratic rule, when the people counted for nothing, and the central control in truly Imperial matters now removed to a distant sphere. It is possible, therefore, to confer with safety wider powers on Provincial authorities, where the real authority and responsibility is with the people, but would the machinery devised for another purpose do? In my humble judgment, the provincial areas constituted for administrative convenience and partly the result of historic accident, when the people had no real voice are eminently unsuitable in the altered conditions. I do not contend for a moment that self-governing institutions cannot be introduced into the provinces as they are constituted with any hope of success; in the case of many important provinces, extensive changes are hardly needed, and I would strongly deprecate the postponement of the introduction of reforms until the changes, I am advocating, are taken on hand; but I have no hesitation in stating that in some provinces at least self-governing institutions would work smoothly and harmoniously with a re-adjustment, and a general re-distribution would pave the way for complete success.

"I urge in this Resolution that re-distribution of areas and a constitution of new provinces wherever such re-distribution and constitution may be found necessary for the complete success of self-governing institutions and urge that it should be done where three conditions co-exist, namely, that the people should desire such a change, that they should be sufficiently numerous and that they should speak the same language. I do not say that such changes should not be made even where the three conditions may not co-exist, but they are not immediately necessary and the problem should not be complicated unnecessarily by raising avoidable agitation to attain an ideal state of things. I realise that a large number of languages are spoken in each province, but on an analysis it will be found that the number of people speaking many of them is comparatively small, and in several instances though small minorities writing a language different from the principal vernacular or generally bilingual; where a small body of people had migrated and found themselves in the midst of a large number speaking a different language. The process of assimilation has been going on for very many years; for example, over two millions Telugu people are scattered all over the Tamil districts, having settled themselves down during the time of the Vizianagram Kings, and though they have not given up their mother tongue they have learned the Tamil language and are being educated in Tamil schools. The reverse process took place in the Telugu districts also. Even if it were otherwise no separate provision can be made in the nature of things for such minorities, and the problem therefore is confined to compact areas where there is a large population speaking but a single language. In such cases, I feel sure that the Council will agree with me that a re-distribution or a constitution of a new province will be absolutely necessary by reason of the very nature of the introduction of self-governing institutions for provincial purposes, for promoting educational and administrative efficiency, for the strengthening of finance by reconciling people to additional expenditure and taxation and the efficacy and possibility of social legislation and to prevent bickerings and disputes and promote general harmony.

"If I could dream of the possibility of inducing the people of India to adopt one language even in the very remote future, I should not have brought forward this Resolution for discussion. India has had a central government for ages, but its past history, as well as the history of the peoples in the world in general, does not encourage one to entertain any such hope. After a century of British rule the number of English knowing Indians is but about a million and a half amongst 14 million literate people. It should be possible to hasten the pace, but to expect the people of India to give up their mother tongues seems to be a wild dream and I dismiss it from consideration. The very nature of representative institutions involves an independent appreciation by the people of the problems of legislation, administration and finance, an appeal to electorates and the wide use of the vernaculars. I have had some 30 years' experience of district non-official organizations and can speak with authority that during the discussions when the medium employed was English the assemblies were composed almost wholly of English educated Indians, but during the last 10 or 15 years in my own part of the country since the use of the mother tongue came into general vogue on such occasions and began to be almost exclusively employed, the assemblies have been composed of all the strata of society and have become large, real and living centres of activity. A similar phenomenon is discernible all over India during more recent years. Difficulty has been experienced in the conduct of Provincial Conferences where the problem has been attempted to be solved by making at least one speech compulsory in the language of the district wherein the assembly meets. The Provincial Conference when it meets in our district has not the same vitality as the Andhra Conference by reason partly of the language employed in the former being foreign to the vast masses of the population. In the Legislative Councils in future influential men who know only the vernacular or cannot express themselves clearly in English will be in a large majority and it would be impossible to conduct the proceedings where large bodies, Tamil, Telugu, Canarese and Malayalam gentlemen have to sit and listen to speeches which they do not understand. The only alternative would be to confine the assemblies to men proficient in the use of English. The position would be repugnant to the very nature of representative institutions, and I am confident therefore that a separation would be necessary as soon as representative institutions should be a reality. It is of course necessary to preserve the records and publish them in English as well, but such a procedure does not touch the position now under discussion. I shall now point out several other difficulties in allowing the existing state of things to continue. It is quite within the range of practical politics that on essential questions there would be a wide difference of opinion between the people speaking different languages. At several meetings of the Andhra Conference consisting of 1,000 to 2,000 delegates assembled from all parts of the Telugu districts, it has been almost universally resolved to suggest the necessity and desirability of employing the vernacular as the medium of instruction in secondary schools. Opinion does not seem to have solidified to the same extent in other parts of the presidency. Supposing in a future legislative assembly the whole of the Andhra population should give a mandate to their representatives on a question like this, the position would be intolerable if their internal improvement has to be governed by the votes of the other communities. In matters of social legislation also the communities do not see eye to eye and there would be considerable friction and difficulty in the passing of social legislation. Difficulties will also be experienced in the matter of location of educational institutions, distribution of funds regarding the incidence of taxation, and other similar matters.

"The success of representative institutions would also depend upon the universal spread of education, and primary education in the first instance. The spread of primary education necessarily involves the growth of secondary education especially for the purpose of training teachers. The growth of secondary education would in its turn necessitate the multiplication of colleges and university education, wherein the vernacular would have to play a much greater part than is the case at present; the necessary corollary follows that each language area should have at least one distinct university of its own wherein education would proceed on lines suited to its genius, and the points of dissimilarity of views and conflict of interests, both financial and otherwise, are bound to arise under one Government. The problem is partially solved at present by requiring teachers and inspectors to learn two or three languages which means superficiality of knowledge, general inefficiency and can at best be only a partial remedy. A difference in our educational ideals, difference in types, difference of institutions, can be evolved satisfactorily only under a distinct legislature and distinct Government. Education in English in High Schools and Colleges should be made compulsory by Statute.

"British officers and to a certain extent Indian officers also of any province are at present transferred to different parts of the presidency in order to qualify them for higher positions of trust and responsibility, and the more people there are the larger would be the number of transfers. These frequent transfers to areas speaking different languages make it impossible for the officers to acquaint themselves adequately with the vernaculars; and also prevents the growth of attachment on the part of the officers as well as the people. And the desired influence for good is minimised unnecessarily and sometimes rendered impossible of acquisition. The administration of justice cannot but suffer by reason of the imperfect acquaintance of the judges with the vernacular, who can acquaint themselves with documents and the real meaning of witnesses' oral evidence only through the medium of translations. Unnecessary and prohibitive cost is also involved leading to the ruin of litigants in a large number of cases. Reform of the administration of justice necessitates a departure on the lines suggested. The same may be said of the Registration Department.

"I have already alluded to the difficulties and discord likely to arise in the distribution of taxes and the funds raised thereby. I would here only allude to one further fact that where the people are homogeneous in character and are bound together by ties of a common language and where the areas are small people are likely to be more willing to tax themselves for provincial improvements which would benefit those whom they understand and with whom they have close affinity.

"Inequalities must always exist; but where they arise between people who do not understand one another, they are likely to lead to unnecessary jealousies and friction which may occasionally become a source of danger. The relations between the Uriyas and others with whom their lot is cast, the cry of the Mysore to the Mysoreans, and Travancore to the Travancorians and the desire on the part of the Andhra-speaking people for a change are indicative of the conviction on the part of the people concerned that their progress would be facilitated by being allowed to evolve it according to their own genius untramelled by others. I might quote in this connection the example of Austria-Hungary where numerous languages are spoken, where provision had to be made for the representation of these various speaking people in the Legislative assemblies, where internal discord prevails as to which language should be used and which should have precedence, and where the more powerful people resort to the suppression of the weaker.

"Under representative institutions in purely provincial matters it would not be right to jeopardise the interests of minorities, wherever they may be adequately protected. It is impossible to conceal that the three million Malayalese or the two million Kanarese, whose representatives would be about seven and five per cent. of the assembly, can have an adequate voice in Madras. The same may be said of the four millions Uriyas out of the 34 millions in Bihar.

"The Andhras form a distinct group living in a compact area consisting of north Madras and 12 districts whose total population is between 17 and 18 millions, and the representatives of the districts during the last four years have been pressing for the creation of an Andhra province. The case of the Uriyas seems to be equally plain. They are but 6½ millions in British India, and whether they are grouped with Bengal, Bihar or Madras would form a very small minority, and such grouping would retard the development and success of representative institutions and their own growth on lines peculiar to them. On the other hand, they are a sufficiently numerous body living in a compact territory whose population is larger than some of the minor Kingdoms of Europe and the population of the United States at the time of the secession from Great Britain. Similar remarks would apply to Malabar, Sindh and Gujarat and Canara. It must also be noted that there may be a federation or combination for some purposes with the adjoining Native States, whose population is of the same race and speak the same language. For example, the cost of a University may be borne by the British province and the Native States. Mysore has a University, practically Kanarese, and has solved the problem of the Kanarese people until they can find resources for a separate University of their own. Travancore and Cochin are rich Malayalam States which have taken the problem in hand, and the wishes of the people may be respected without any financial embarrassment. The adjoining Native States of Orissa are another instance in point on the question of cost. The cost of general administration would be comparatively small having regard to the smallness of the area and population in many of these cases. Enormous savings may be effected under various headings including travelling allowances and if the people are desirous of effecting a change they must be prepared to pay for it. It must also be remembered that the salary of a Governor in American States varies from 1,000 to 10,000 dollars and Coorg, Ajmer, Merwar not to speak of the North-Western Provinces, furnish instances of small administrative areas. The language problem does not seem to require many additional provinces with perhaps the possible exception of Sind.

"Then, as regards re-distribution of areas, Bombay and the Central Provinces furnish an instance where the language problem may be taken up for solution. The Hindi-speaking people of the Central Provinces form a contiguous compact area adjoining Bihar and the Mahratta tracts are similarly situated with regard to Bombay. Mahratta-speaking people seem to be extremely desirous of being brought in together, and the question of University education, and the language to be employed in Legislative Councils may find an easy solution by a re-adjustment at a reduced cost. My friends from Bengal and Assam will, I am sure, represent the wishes of the Bengalee-speaking people of Bihar and Assam who seem to be desirous of being brought together. I have been receiving a number of telegrams from various provinces asking vehemently to press this Resolution. In this connection I cannot help making a few remarks with regard to North-Western Frontier Province, which has been proposed in some quarters to be excluded from self-governing India. The province has always formed part of India from prehistoric times, was clearly so in the time of the Hindu and Mahomedan Kings and their separation accentuating the existing differences on a religious basis would, in my opinion, be a great political danger to India. The problem should rather be to identify their interests with the rest of India to educate them under such ideals and settle the restless tribes in the vast new colonies to be opened. I would earnestly urge their reunion with the Punjab. Whether the Hindi-speaking people living in the Punjab, United Provinces, Delhi and Bihar and Central Provinces should be re-grouped is an interesting problem which does not seem to be pressed for an urgent solution. The future of India is largely bound up with their advancement as has been the case in the past. But whether they fall under one, two or three governments, will not affect the political equilibrium in any large degree. The times have changed, the rest of the peoples of India form as important a group and therein lies the safety to the unity and harmonius development of a united India. No people can dominate the rest in a manner analogous to Prussia as is feared in some quarters. My Resolution may suggest the inquiry as to whether the larger provinces should be cut up into smaller units as has been proposed by Mr. Curtis and others. The sentiment of Bengal and the United Provinces as far as can be gathered and further from their present position seems to be decidedly against it, and I have already indicated that the wishes of the people must form a condition precedent to any re-distribution. Furthermore, on analysis it will be found that we have got in all the provinces the divisions which correspond to smaller States of Germany or the United States. We have 250 districts with an average population of 900,000, some of which are 3 million strong; others about half a million and so on. And it will be found that only 9 out of 48 of the United States have a population above 3 millions, 13 between 2 and 3, 11 between 1 and 2, and the rest below 1. With the exception of Prussia, the German States present the same problem. The same may be said of Switzerland. We have, therefore, units of the size advocated. But no one has yet felt that for legislative purposes any of these districts require a separate constitution. The bye-law making power, which at present partakes of the nature of legislation may be enlarged, where necessary. It would be a mistake to promote the creation of intermediary bodies and in opposition to the sentiment and wishes of the people. If the larger provinces find such a decentralisation necessary there will be time enough to consider the question. But at present we have Imperial finance, all-India finance, Provincial finance and local finance, and need not complicate the matter by adding another category of sub-provincial finance. It would also be found that once legislative powers are conferred upon these, it would be difficult to deprive them of the same as has been found when a federal constitution had to be framed for the United States and a separatist tendency would also be created thereby.

"By the creation of provinces and re-distribution of areas seem on the lines indicated, we shall remove as far as possible all the causes for Provincial and racial jealousies and provide a basis of representation for the constitution of the All-India Council. The men who would befit themselves for all-India legislation of an Imperial character would qualify themselves by the study of English, and the language problem would not present the same difficulty as in the provinces. And the vast variety of languages would also make imperative the use of a common language, namely, English with rare exceptions. The real cause of friction would naturally be for a distribution of financial burdens and care would, I am sure, be taken in rendering the central Government largely independent of Provincial financial help and where such may be necessary, it will be made dependent upon certain data which would not admit of wrangling or dissatisfaction. The similar causes which may disturb harmony would generally be found in the Provincial and Local Councils and local bodies, and the essential unity of interest in all large Imperial matters of the people would make for the harmony of the deliberations of the Imperial Assembly.

"The foregoing remarks clearly show that in the whole of the upper Hindustan with a population of 150 millions from the Punjab to Assam the problem is of a minor importance and no extensive changes are needed. The question does not arise in Burma. It is equally evident that changes are necessary in the Deccan, Southern India and the East Coast. The numerous memorials presented by the several peoples living in these tracts to your Excellency and the Secretary of State during your recent tour, the innumerable Resolutions passed for very many years by the people concerned and extending for a period long anterior to the contemplation of the present reforms are indicative of a desire on the part of the people for a change; and all the conditions referred to in my Resolution are complied with in our case. But I do not wish to be understood to endeavour to complicate the problem of reforms with the question of re-distribution of areas and constitution of provinces. What powers should be reserved by the Government of India, how the legislature is to be composed, what decentralisation of power is permissible, how the Provincial legislatures are to be elected and composed, what powers they shall exercise in administration, legislation and finance are problems which have no relation to the question under discussion. The latter are details to be worked out in the case of each area and may be modified by an alteration therein. But I have ventured to bring forward this resolution at the present time fully convinced that the solution of the question would also have to be undertaken immediately and without delay. In order to ensure the complete success of self-governing institutions and that modifications may be introduced at as early a date as possible. I realise the reluctance of the Government to deal with the problem, having regard to its experience in the case of Bengal. But as my Resoultion proposes the consent of the people or a large majority of them, no such difficulties need be apprehended. I would suggest the appointment of a commission to determine the need for re-distribution and constitution of new provinces and their areas; and the new electorates under the reform scheme will have ample opportunities of expressing the wishes of the people; if this question cannot be solved earlier I hope I have said enough to justify my demand for an early change on the lines suggested in the Resolution. It only remains for me to thank the Council for the patient hearing which they have been pleased to accord to me. The divisions I have suggested are amply sufficient to meet the purpose. Pray do not cut us up into further sub-divisions, rendering cohesion and common action impossible. The Native States furnish us an example how their numbers render it difficult for them to arrive at conjoint action and further re-grouping for representative purposes is felt to be necessary, but difficult. We are on the eve of great political changes in the world; just as industries trusts and good monopolies are squeezing companies out of existence, so in the world of politics combinations of states with practically a partial surrender of sovereignty as it has been hitherto understood are not improbable. There would, therefore, appear to be reasonable ground for hope that even the wildest and maddest Indian revolutionary would be reconciled to the federal partnership so generously conceded by the liberty loving British public. The unity of Indian nationhood and the community of the economic and political interest of the Indian people I have alrealy dwelt upon. But there is enough diversity to make that cohesion solid and indestructible only with the co-operation and help of the British people. And as far as human foresight can see there does not appear to be any reason why the union should not be permanent and for ever, so long as the foundations are well and truly laid and all parties understand the limitations of their position. So welded it may be that the mighty British Empire may not need any outside alliance to keep the peace of the world. The war has purified the souls of men and politicians of the dross of selfishness and greed to a perceptible extent. Let the structure be laid while under the influence of such a holy fire, before human passions and selfishness regain ascendancy. I am confident with such lofty minded statesmen at the helm under the guidance of an able and far seeing premier and an able broadminded and energetic Secretary of State, with a sympathetic Government of India and with knowledge and willingness to move under your guidance and aid, I feel sure the structure will well and truly be laid in the immediate present. I commend this Resolution to your acceptance"

3-45 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant:—"My Lord, it may seem strange that an officer holding the post of Foreign Secretary should have the temerity to rise in this Council. It might be thought that like the famous Dean Maitland he was doomed to a vow of silence. But I cannot allow the present Resolution to pass, affecting as I think it does the interests of Your Excellency's Department which I have the honour to represent in this Council somewhat nearly without remark. I regret, your Excellency, that my maiden speech in this Council should be made under conditions of considerable disadvantage; in the first place that I should have arrived this morning from a journey of six thousand miles and two nights in the train without having any previous knowledge of the subject which Mr. Sarma was going to lay before the Council to-day, and in the second place that I have not had an opportunity of discussing with the colleagues of my Department the matter at issue. As I understand it, the reason underlying this resolution is that in the near future the provinces of India will be enjoying self-government. If that is so, the question of our foreign relations comes up in a somewhat serious form. What do we mean by self-government? If self-government is to include the direction of foreign affairs, then, my Lord, I submit there are very serious reasons why the redistribution of the provinces of India is necessary. We shall have to so redistribute those provinces that we shall have buffer areas along our whole exterior frontiers directly under the control of the Government of India and safeguarded from the interference of Local Governments. If, on the other hand, your Excellency's Government and His Majesty's Government accept what must and should be the fundamental principle of all administration, that foreign affairs must and always shall be entirely under the control of the Government of India, subject to the direction of His Majesty's Government, and that Local Governments as heretofore will so far as foreign relations are concerned be entirely under the direction of those Governments, then I say that, so far as I can see at present, no provincial redistribution whatever is necessary. The North-West Frontier at present our most vital external frontier is sufficiently safeguarded by the buffer States of Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province, and I cannot accept the proposal of the Hon'ble mover that the North-West Frontier Province should once more be thrown back into the vortex of the Punjab. I do not think that the North-West Frontier Province themselves would welcome it; I am perfectly certain that the Punjab would not. As regards the remainder of the frontier, I think that if any one would study the map for a few minutes, he would see that the direction of our external relations are adequately safeguarded by the buffer States of Nepal, Bhutan and Sikkim. As regards the Burma frontier I think that this is a matter which we may leave for discussion outside this Council. If, on the other hand, it can be seriously considered that Local Governments should direct foreign affairs, I would point out that the creation of buffer areas would be open to serious disadvantages. I believe.................."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—" May I make a personal explanation, your Excellency? I do not think it has been my contention that any of these governments should have anything to do with foreign affairs

The Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant:—" My Lord, if that is so, I need not pursue the point, and I will merely take this opportunity to speak on one or two arguments put forward by the mover of the Resolution. He seems to be under the impression that the Government of India, Your Excellency in Council, require a stimulant in this matter, that you require to be stung into the redistribution of provinces. My experience of India has been that we are juggling the whole day along with Provincial boundaries. I have seen the North-West Frontier created, I have seen the partition of Bengal, the present repartition of Bengal, I have seen Bihar and Orissa come into existence. I have seen the province of the Berars abolished. I have seen infinite provincial juggling till one is tired of it, and it is hard to know what province one belongs to. I do not think that the Government of India require any stimulant in this matter. But apart from that, assuming there is some lethargy, and that they have not themselves realised that the grant of local self-government might possibly require some readjustment of provincial boundaries, I would point out that there are one or two further objections to the method which the Hon'ble mover proposes to this end. One of the main lines upon which he proposes to work is what is called the linguistic redistribution. I do not know whether he has read that valuable work, the Linguistic Survey of India; I have not done so, but I have had a little to do with the languages of the country myself. At one time I thought I had mastered the language, at any rate of a district. I went 20 miles and I could not be understood; I went another 20 miles and I could not understand. If we were to have governments formed on linguistic divisions, I think we shall have a local government every 20 miles. What we want is, I maintain, a lingua franca common to all India. Hindustani at one time tried to be this, but Hindustani is now approximating to English. We constantly hear, for instance, such odd admixtures as 'uska nature bahut sympathetic hai, lekin uska sense-of-responsibility kuch nahin' and expressions like that. In the same manner English is approximating to Hindustani. You hear of 'kucha', 'bandobast', 'what a dhik that is' and so on. Well, what we want obviously is a language that is a good hotch-potch between the two and let that be the language of our Councils in future; and in this way Canarese and Tamil, Punjabi and Pathan, etc., will have a common vehicle of expression and a universal understanding of the proceedings of the various legislatures. With these words, your Excellency, I would merely deprecate any haste in the matter of the redistribution of the provinces."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis:—"My Lord, I know this Resolution has been moved with the best of intentions, but my humble experience has been against such territorial redistribution. These redistributions of provinces as previous experience has shown are not very often popular with the people. They land Government in many and unnecessary difficulties. The people's general tendency seems to be to remain attached to the administration or the province under which they have long remained and with which they seem to grow in love on account of long association. The partition of Bengal has taught all of us many a bitter lesson. In my own province about 30 years ago, when there was a proposal to transfer some of the Marathi-speaking districts to the Bombay Presidency on account of language considerations in lieu of Sindh, which was proposed to be transferred to the Punjab, there was bitter opposition to the proposal and the people petitioned Government against such transfer. I am inclined to believe that territorial redistribution if not satisfactorily arranged will create resentment and unnecessary agitation and will be a bad prelude to any scheme of reform. Moreover, if redistribution is to be made irrespective of this and other considerations language cannot be the only criterion. Any redistribution of provincial areas and boundaries should be considered not only from the language point of view, but also from racial and geographical considerations. Questions of defence by land and sea and future politics both internal and external have their bearings on a comprehensive rearrangement of provinces with a view to autonomy. Financial economy in administration is also an important factor and any redistribution, if made irrespective of this and other important considerations, is likely to fail and bring trouble in its train. Moreover, the present war will bring other factors into play, and it will be unwise for Government to launch themselves into a policy which may perhaps mean increased expenditure and consequently increased taxation." 3-52 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. J. Fagan:—"My Lord, in approaching the consideration of the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Member I have been rather impressed by the wide area of debateable matter which seems to underlie its main topic. The chief question involved in that matter is itself a large one, that is to say how and in what manner geographical, lingual and racial factors operate upon or are themselves affected by the political system which embraces them. It seems scarcely possible to estimate the effect of these factors until one knows something about the nature, the working and the tendencies of the political system. Now, as members of the Council here to-day, what do we know with any precision regarding what I may perhaps term the future political organism or the future political morphology of this great continent? As regards the ultimate goal we have had recently an announcement, an authoritative, an epoch-making announcement, that the 3-54 P.M.

goal is responsible government, no doubt on democratic lines responsible government with the tremendous and as yet very partially and dimly recognized implications which that involves for this country in its external relations no less than in its internal relations. The question whether that goal is attainable within clearly conceivable limits of time is one which is probably irrelevant and, at all events, presumptuous for me to discuss here and now but in passing I may perhaps be allowed to remark that so far as the Province in which I have the honour to serve is concerned, a body of Indian opinion, by no means negligible, by no means unintelligent, would answer that question at present, at any rate, with a decided negative. But, my Lord, I will let that pass, I will subscribe to the assumption that the goal is one that is attainable within fairly moderate limits of time. What then? What do we know sitting in this Council here to-day, of the lines, direct or devious whatever they may be, along which advance towards the goal will be made. What do we know of the political machinery which it will be found necessary to construct and to set up, in order to aid that advance? What do we know of the ebb and flow of political thought which will mark its course? What do we know of the rate at which effective political education will leaven the great masses of this country? Until, my Lord, we know something about these things and about many others is it not premature to enter upon a wide carving and recasting of the administrative units of India with all the endless administrative dislocation, and if we may judge from a comparatively recent instance, of the long-continued agitation which such a course must necessarily and inevitably involve; my Lord, truly the people perish where there is no vision and it is well, within reasonable limits, that young men should dream dreams and that old men should see visions, nevertheless it is not the less true that the dreamers of dreams and seers of visions are apt to be precipitate in endeavouring to clothe their dreams with the garments of reality. Festina lente is a trite but a very wholesome maxim which they would do well to bear in mind. My Lord, I must apologise for detaining the Council at this length in a maiden speech but there are one or two other matters which deserve mention. Who is to say, who is to forecast whether that future diversity of interest which will help to mould the future political organism and to differentiate its parts will proceed on geographical, racial or lingual lines? Recent utterances and recent occurrences seem to indicate fairly clearly that some at least of the dividing lines will be of a very different nature. Who moreover can say who will presume to predict how these factors of geography, of race, of language will affect the politically awakened and enlightened braves as we all hope that they will be.

"For these reasons, my Lord, the Resolution of the Hon'ble Member appears to me to be both premature and academic, and one which it is impossible at the present time or in the near future to put into practicable shape. When the tender plant of to-day shall in the fulness of time have grown into a strong and lofty tree under those branches the nations of India may collect, in some form of political organism which shall embrace them all, then perhaps the process of differentiation and redistribution of the administrative units of India will largely have become an automatic process."

4-1 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda—"My Lord, I find myself in a peculiarly difficult position in regard to this Resolution. The people of Sylhet feel deeply interested in the question of a redistribution on a linguistic basis. They feel that they have a genuine grievance and that the policy of the Despatch of 25th August 1911, which was to reorganise the Bengal districts into one unit has not been given effect to. That Sylhet is bound to Bengal geographically, linguistically and ethnologically is admitted. It was stated in the Despatch that there would be administrative and territorial distribution, a distribution with a view to remove any dissatisfaction arising out of the repartition of Bengal on broad and comprehensive lines and with a view to giving satisfaction to all. That has not been done although there was a gracious message in the coronation speech of His Majesty the King-Emperor.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

Speaking from his place in the House of Commons the Secretary of State, then Under Secretary, on the second reading of the Government of India Bill in 1912 said that the question remains for settlement. When therefore my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma re-opened the question the people of my district were grateful to him for affording them the opportunity of bringing their grievance to the notice of Government. But there is another aspect of the question. I deplore the fact that my friend should have thought fit to bring forward this motion at this juncture, it is highly contentious, I have grave misgivings and apprehensions that this may prove a veritable apple of discord in many provinces.

"I fear, my Lord, that this Resolution might possibly stand in the way of the early introduction of securing reforms to which the whole country is looking forward with such eagerness and anxiety. Well, if that happens, if it comes to this that the acceptance of this Resolution, in whatever shape or to whatever extent will, in the slightest degree stand in the way of the reforms or delay even by a single day the introduction of the reforms, then I say, my Lord, whatever the consequences to provinces or to people who have formed great expectations from this Resolution, its consideration must be postponed sine die. My Lord, my humble submission would be that it would not be gracious to take up the general question of redistributing territories or provinces on a linguistic or any other basis. There may be causes for general complaint, and if there are, their consideration will depend on their merits, but there too anything that would tend in the slightest degree to delay the introduction of reforms should not be considered for the present.

"My Lord, in this connection I may be permitted to state the case of my own province. I submit, my Lord, that the people of my district are very keen about this matter. Theirs is a small case but a simple case too, and they feel that justice has not been done to them. I will state the facts of the case very briefly. I am referring to the district of Sylhet. In this district 92 per cent. of the population speak the Bengali language, and this population is as large as in the neighbouring districts of Tipperah, Mymensingh and Dacca. It has no affinity whatever, geographical, ethnological or linguistic, with Assam from which it is separated by a somewhat natural barrier in the shape of a range of hills. My Lord, Sylhet is an old district full of historical traditions. In the days of Muhammadan rule it shared the fiscal system of Raja Todarmull and it formed a limb of the Subah of Bengal when the Dewani was granted by Shah Alam to the East India Company in 1765. Under British rule the inestimable boon of the Permanent Settlement was conferred upon it with the rest of Bengal by Lord Cornwallis. The land revenue system of Sylhet which is the same as in other permanently settled and regulation districts is wholly dissimilar to that obtaining in Assam. The judicial system which prevails in Sylhet is not the same as that of Assam though both are under one and the same High Court. In Assam the executive officers do civil work; they exercise the functions of Civil Courts, whereas in Sylhet the Civil Courts, as in Bengal, are presided over by Subordinate Judges. With your permission, Your Excellency, I wish to read to the Council an extract from a memorial submitted to Lord Hardinge protesting against the inclusion of Sylhet in Assam in 1912.

'That Sylhet is not only a Bengali speaking district, but its ancient history and culture have always been organically bound up with those of Bengal. The old Hindu University of Nuddea not only contributed to the intellectual evolution of Sylhet, but Sylhet on her own part made large and vital contributions to the enlightenment and culture of Nuddea The founder of what is known as the Nava Nyaya (New School of Logic), the great Raghunath Siromani, was a native of Sylhet. Sylhet also played a very prominent part in the great Vaishnavite movement in Bengal of the 16th Century associated with the sacred names of Sri Chaitanya Mahaprabhu and Srimat Advait Acharya both of whom had their ancestral homes in Sylhet.

'That so far as the Muhammadan population of the district is concerned, their religious and social traditions are identical with those of the Muhammadans of Dacca and Murshidabad. As Nuddea was the centre of Hindu learning in Bengal, so Murshidabad was the seat and centre of Muhammadan culture in the Presidency, and the socio-religious associations of the Muhammadans of Sylhet, Your Excellency's memorialists beg respectfully to submit, have been always closely linked with the neighbouring districts of Bengal, but not with

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

Assam. The respectable Muhammadan families of Sylhet are united socially with the higher classes of Muhammadans of Bengal but not with those of Assam, and the transfer of Sylhet to Assam will, in their humble opinion, vitally affect the religious, the social, and even the political interests of the Muhammadans of the district by reason of their administrative isolation from the Muhammadans of Bengal and especially of Eastern Bengal, and further, they would find themselves in a minority in the Province of Assam.

'That the social connections of the Hindus of Sylhet, Your Excellency's memorialists beg to submit, are also with the neighbouring districts of Tipperah, Mymensingh and Dacca. Not only are there no social relations between the Hindus of Sylhet and those of Assam, but custom which has the strength of religion among the Hindus absolutely bars the formation of such associations with the Assamese. The Assamese speak an entirely different language, and this difference is recognised by the Calcutta University.

'That Sylhet being a Bengali-speaking district, Your Excellency's memorialists beg leave to point out, there exists the closest intellectual, moral and spiritual kinship between that district and the rest of Bengal. The affinities of a common religion, language and literature and common intellectual aspirations form an indissoluble bond of union between them and their countrymen in other parts of Bengal. Your Excellency's memorialists are confident that in the territorial redistribution which is about to take place, Your Excellency's Government will recognise these sacred ties which will be still further strengthened and confirmed by their union with the rest of Bengal. In the 16th and 17th centuries Sylhet made valuable contributions to the literary life of Bengal and this connection has been maintained up to the present day. The first Bengali newspaper published by an Indian in Calcutta was edited by a Sylhet Pundit, the late Gourishankar Bhattacharya.

'That your Excellency's memorialists beg most humbly to represent that Sylhet is an old district full of historical traditions. In the days of the Muhammadan rule it shared the fiscal system of Raja Todur Mall, and it formed a limb of the Subah of Bengal when the Dewani was granted by Shah Alam to the East India Company in 1765. Under British Rule the inestimable boon of the Permanent Settlement was with the rest of Bengal conferred upon it by Lord Cornwallis.'

"My Lord, in the last place, I should also mention in this connection that Sylhet is the only district in Assam that was invited and that was allowed to furnish recruits for the Bengali Regiment, and I feel proud to mention, my Lord, that the number of recruits that could be furnished would be far in excess of the number that would be furnished by any district in Bengal. My Lord, it may also be mentioned that the Bengali population of Sylhet is one-sixteenth of that of the whole of Bengal. It may be asked how under these circumstances Sylhet comes under Assam. Prior to 1874 Sylhet was a separate province, but the Government of Lord Northbrook in 1874 decided to transfer Sylhet to Assam in spite of the strong protests of the people, and that decision was largely based on financial grounds. Assam could not get on without the help of Sylhet, and therefore as Sylhet was the nearest Bengal district is was seized up. The people of that district even at that time strongly protested against its separation as will appear from the memorial presented to the then Viceroy and Governor General, Lord Northbrook, but it was ignored, and in the columns of the Hindu Patriot this action of the Government was described as offering a calf to be sacrificed for the new wife of Assam. That is how Sylhet was cut off from Bengal, and it continued with Eastern Bengal till 1906 when the partition of Bengal was effected. When in 1912 the Eastern Bengal province was abolished and Assam was again separated, Sylhet was re-transferred to Assam and the whole district was convulsed by an unparalleled agitation. In the Dacca district in every town and in every sub-division, in every thana, in fact in every important village there were meetings held to protest against this action, and the memorial from which I quoted was submitted to His Excellency Lord Hardinge. It was signed by all the members of the Legislative Council, by all classes of people, Hindus and Muhammadans, and also by all the zemindars and influential people. Not only this, my Lord, but at the request of the leading Muhammadans of the district a meeting of the Moslem Association was convened under the presidency of Nawab Shamsul-Huda and a Resolution was unanimously adopted recommending that Sylhet should be put in Bengal, and a similar Resolution was passed by the National Congress. On the other hand, my Lord, it must be mentioned in fairness that those that passed the Resolution recommending the exclusion of Sylhet from Assam no doubt did so in order that the population of Assam may be homogeneous and the Assamese newspapers also supported this. Now, my Lord, the present position is, the Assamese do not wish us to be in Assam and we on our part have been anxiously trying to be united with our brethren in Bengal, but nothing has been done, my Lord. We are losing hope. When this pronouncement was made by the Secretary of State in Parliament it revived our hopes and infused a new feeling into us.

"In the course of yesterday and to-day I have received telegrams urging me to press this matter on the Council. To-day I have received a telegram from the local Anjuman Islamia which runs as follows :—

'Mussulmans of Habiganj assembled in general meeting Anjuman Islamia most earnestly pray incorporation Sylhet with Bengal.'

"That is how matters stand. Well, I feel that raising a question like this at this juncture might be injurious to the interests of the people, and yet although urged to do so, I did not think of bringing it before this Council. But the opportunity having been afforded by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, if I let it pass, I am afraid my position might be misunderstood. I therefore press it before the Council.

"My Lord, I do not think it is a question of territorial redistribution at all, but this question of Sylhet is really a question of the adjustment of boundaries. The question is practically settled, and, if without prejudice to the question of reforms. this can be done, my suggestion to the Council is that the matter should be taken up. These are the remarks I submit to the Council.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :— 4-16 P.M.
"My Lord, the announcement of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma's Resolution seems to have created a tremendous stir among the people of Sylhet. My learned friend has received a telegram—the latest one which he received this morning—from some Anjuman in Sylhet asking him to put the request of the Muhammadans before Your Excellency to the effect that Sylhet should be re-united with Bengal. I have just now received a telegram also on behalf of Mahammadans of Sylhet protesting against reunion with Bengal. I presume my brethren who have sent me this telegram thought that, belonging as I do to the Punjab and representing as I do the Muhammadans of that province, that perhaps I was the best advocate they could select to fight it out with my friend Mr. Chanda, the Hon'ble Member for Assam.

"Coming nearer home, so far as my own province is concerned, we have to-day witnessed a duel between the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma on the one hand and the Hon'ble the Foreign Secretary on the other with reference to the debated question of the restoration of the North-West Frontier Province to the Punjab. Well, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma seems to be a keen advocate of that restoration; the Hon'ble Sir Hamilton Grant opposes it tooth and nail. My Lord, if I, a Punjabi, could have a choice in the matter I am perfectly ready to bow before the verdict of the Foreign Secretary, but with a condition. That condition is this Instead of the North-West Frontier Province, give us Sind. In all seriousness, my Lord, so far as the incorporation of Sind in the Presidency of Bombay is concerned, I have never been able to appreciate the wisdom of that step. There is, so far as one can see, nothing in common between Sind on the one hand and the rest of the Presidency of Bombay on the other. Ethnologically speaking, there is no affinity between the people of the two tracts. Looked at from a lingual point of view, the language spoken in Sind and that spoken in Bombay are as dissimilar as that of the Punjab and Bombay. So far as community of interests is concerned, there is not only none whatsoever between the two provinces, but the divergence, nay, the conflict, of interests between the two tracts has hitherto hampered the industrial and commercial development of Sind. The port of

Karachi, with its vast possibilities, has been neglected in the interests of Bombay, and naturally so, for Bombay being the capital of that Presidency has monopolised the attention and the energies of the Local Government. So far as facility of inter-communication, which is an obvious necessity in the case of two different portions of the same province, is concerned, there is hardly any between these two tracts, and the physical formation of the two is as divergent and as dissimilar as that of Egypt and the Balkans. On the contrary, Sind is but the natural extension of the Punjab. Both together constitute what may be characterised, and rightly so, as the valley of the Indus. The waterways, the roads and the railways of the two tracts bind them close to one another. Karachi is the natural channel through which all the foreign export trade of the Punjab flows and the business relations between the two are undoubtedly close and intimate. During my practice at the Bar, now extending over a period of nearly 26 years, I have often and often appeared in partnership, agency and other cases in the Chief Court in which the parties belonged to Sind and the Punjab. The language spoken in the south-western districts of the Punjab is practically identical with that spoken by the people residing in the northern portion of Sind, and the populations of the remaining portions of the two tracts are well able to understand each other. The two are essentially agricultural tracts, and the extension of the Punjab irrigation and colonization system to Sind would undoubtedly result in the whole tract becoming ultimately the principal granary of the whole world. The union of Sind and the Punjab is therefore ordained by Nature and the unnatural separation which has hitherto kept them apart from each other ought to be done away with as soon as possible.

"My Lord, while a slight readjustment here and there may be desirable, the game of 'General Post,' which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma advocates, and which has also been advocated in certain other quarters, viz., the partition of our existing provinces into small Provincial States, 30 to 40 in number, is one which, in my humble judgment, is in the highest degree impracticable, and, in view of the heterogeneous character of our population, is likely to be highly injurious to the best interests of the country. My Lord, there is, within the British Empire, no precedent for it. Australia with its territorial extent of three million square miles is divided only into six colonies or provinces. Canada with its are a of three million and a half square miles is divided only into seven. The advocates of this scheme would divide India with its area of one million and a half square miles, into 30 to 40 small States!"

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"May I state, My Lord, that under my scheme the total comes only to 18 or 19 at the utmost. The number is 14 now and I suggest the addition of 4 more."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—"My Lord, we have, sometimes, the precedent of the United States of America placed before us as a justification for the scheme which is put forward by this school of politicians; but the two cases are not at all alike. At the time when the existing constitution of the individual States as well as of the Federal Government of the United States of America was finally adopted, the sense of American nationality had become highly developed in that country: community of interest, community of language, community of religion, had united the white settlers of the United States into one nation. The case of India at this stage and for some time to come is entirely different. Here the heterogeneous mass of our population is divided in language, in religion and in traditions. Happily there are, in this country, the beginnings of an Indian nationality which we all welcome and which all sincere well-wishers of this country would like to see consummated as soon as possible; but the stage of development has not yet been reached which would make the case of the United States of America in point. To my mind, the cutting and chopping of the [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi; Mr. C. A. Kincaid.]

Indian continent and of our existing Provinces into a large number of Provincial States would retard the evolution of an Indian nationality in this country. It would be a disintegrating factor highly prejudicial to the best interests of the country, and in consequence I cannot give my support to such a proposal as that.

" With these few observations, my Lord, I regret I am entirely opposed to the Resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend.

The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. Kincaid :—" My Lord, as the official representative of the Presidency of Bombay which is more interested in this question than any other Presidency or any other Government in India, I should like to say a few words in opposing the motion before us. 4-29 P.M.

" I oppose the motion for this reason, that although we have so many languages in our Presidency there is no territorial redistribution which would improve the situation. First of all, take the case of Aden. A large part of Aden is in the possession of the Turks and the rest in the hands of the War Office. But supposing we ever get it back from the Turks and the War Office, its situation would not be improved by handing it over to any other Government. The Bombay Presidency is the coast line nearest to Aden; it therefore should naturally be attached to our Presidency.

" Then I come to Sind. The Sindi language is perfectly distinct from any language spoken in the Punjab. Sind is a distinct unit in itself. I may say here that the arguments used by the Hon'ble Member from the Punjab are exactly those advanced by the Germans for the annexation of Holland. He must have the mouth of the waterway of his province : so the Germans say they must have the mouth of the Rhine. Again, Sind is a rich province, therefore it must have been by nature designed to be part of the Punjab. The Germans say exactly the same of Holland. I have no doubt that the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi would like to see a part of our Presidency attached to his own somewhat backward Province . . . . "

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—" Lahore has a larger number of colleges than there are in the metropolis of Bombay ".

The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. Kincaid :—" In the Bombay Presidency we know that Sind is a rich province and we propose to keep it.

" Then I come to Gujarat. You cannot add Gujarat to any other Presidency. On the east is Rajputana, to the west is the sea, and on the north and south you have the Bombay Presidency. Gujarat contains all the Gujarati speaking people in India.

" Then comes the Deccan. The Deccan I quite admit does not include by any means all of the Marathi-speaking people. The whole of the Berars and a good many districts of the Central Provinces also speak the same language as the Deccan. But from the earliest times the Marathi-speaking provinces of the Bombay Presidency have been politically separate from those of the Central Provinces and Berars.

" In the old days the Marathi-speaking provinces of our Presidency were under the Chetpawan Bhats, while the Marathi-speaking districts of the Central Provinces were under the rule of the Maratha Bhosles; and so from the earliest times there has been a distinct political line between the Presidency of Bombay and the Central Provinces.

" Lastly, the Berars are the property of His Exalted Highness the Nizam whose permission we should require before a change could be made.

"Now I come to the Canarese districts. It has been suggested that these should be handed over either to Mysore or to the Madras Presidency. With equally good reason I would urge might Mysore and the Canarese-speaking districts of Madras be handed over to us. I do not see why the Canarese-speaking districts under the Bombay Government should be handed over to Madras and Mysore any more than Mysore and the Canarese-speaking districts of Madras should be handed over to us.

"However, the chief ground on which I oppose this Resolution is that it is absolutely premature. We are asked to make certain redistributions according to the languages spoken by people in order to suit the reforms which are to come; but we do not know what the reforms are. I think I may say on behalf of the Government I humbly represent here that when the reforms are introduced, the Bombay Government will be perfectly willing in order to help on those reforms to negotiate with any other Government any necessary redistribution of their territories.

"With these remarks I oppose the Resolution".

4-34 P.M. The Hon. Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"My Lord, the interest with which I followed the very eloquent discourse of my friend Mr. Sarma did not prevent me from feeling that there was an air of unreality about the whole speech. I was wondering within myself as to what was the centre of gravity of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's argument, and then at the end I discovered that it was really the desire to separate his part of the Madras Province from the rest of the Presidency and to constitute it into a separate province by itself. If that was the real object of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution I can assure him that he would have had my sympathy in an unstinted measure; but my grievance against him is that he has dragged us along with him in a very comprehensive survey from China to Peru. I was not prepared for such an academic debate on a question affecting only a small part of India.

"I do not know whether the proper word to use on an occasion like this is the 'redistribution' of territories or the 'partition' of the various provinces into smaller States; but somehow or other I feel that the word 'partition' is a very unfortunate word in Indian history.

"I am afraid that any question like the one which has been mooted this afternoon will lead to endless controversy and discussion all over the country, and the danger of that seems to me that instead of accelerating or expediting those reforms which Mr. Sarma hopes for, as much as I do hope for, and in which our hopes all over the country are centred, Mr. Sarma's Resolution if carried into effect may seriously retard the introduction of those reforms. If that is the effect of Mr. Sarma's Resolution, I would strongly deprecate it, and I would say that instead of doing any service to the country, the Resolution will be found, or will be pronounced by the country to be, extremely injurious at the present juncture. Mr. Sarma is a trained lawyer, and a reputed advocate. He has introduced his Resolution in the guise of a hope that if it is accepted it will further and promote those self-governing institutions which we are expecting to have in the country. My Lord, I feel that it is somewhat premature at this particular moment to ask the Council to accept the Resolution in anticipation of those reforms. I really do not know what those reforms may be, what may be their character and extent, and what calls they may make upon our resources in future. But one thing is certain to my mind; I hope I am not indulging in vain prophecy, that whatever may be the nature of the reforms, the Councils that will come into being in future will be of a more representative character and larger in their strength than the Councils which we have at present. If that be so, I do not see any reason at all why we should be in a hurry to anticipate the judgment of those Councils. I think the proper time for taking up the consideration of this question would be when those new Councils come into existence and when with their representative character they will be able to express the wishes of the people with greater authority on a subject like this than we are in a position to do at the present moment. Now, my Lord, Mr. Sarma says there should be a redistribution of the provinces in India on the basis of language. I am not prepared to endorse that view wholly and without a considerable amount of qualification. My Lord, it has taken the various provinces fifty or sixty years to build up a solidarity of public life. Provincial associations and the like have sprung up within the last 50 years in spite of the fact that various languages are spoken in unfortunate Presidencies like Madras and Bombay, and Mr. Sarma would like us now to forget the strength of those associations; and merely because he wants uniformity of language in our future Councils he would like us to cut asunder those associations and evolve new provinces where only one language is spoken. I really do not understand what Mr. Sarma means when he says that the provinces should be divided or re-distributed on a lingual basis. Take for instance the province to which I have the honour to belong. In spite of what outsiders may say with regard to the Urdu-Hindi controversy, which sometimes reminds our critics that there are controversies in the United Provinces also, the fact is that the substratum of the language in the United Province is one. You may go from the Gorakhpur division to the Rohilkhand division and you can speak practically the same language, though the dialects may differ from one another. Would Mr. Sarma divide the divisions on the basis of differences in dialects. If so logically speaking the future India that he must be picturing to himself is something like the city states of Greece. Well, I do not know whether Mr. Sarma really thinks that strength lies in unity or in division. So far as we in the United Provinces are concerned, we have never thought of any possibility of division or distribution of our territories, and I am thankful to Mr. Sarma that he was kind enough to assure us that so far as the nothern part of India is or what he calls the Hindustani-speaking parts of India are concerned, in his judgment there is not much need for extensive changes. I can assure him that if he ever thought there was such a need, he would be met with the strongest possible opposition all over northern India. So far as we in the United Provinces are concerned, therefore, and I say the same thing of the Punjab also, we are not prepared to enter into an academic discussion of this character. If it really does concern his part of the Presidency let him bring up a concrete case before us and then we shall be better able to judge of that case on its own merits. If he were to ask my candid opinion about Andhra, I would say that while I was prepared to sympathise with him in his aspirations I would like to have more materials before me before he could expect me to vote, though so far as sympathy was concerned he could have plenty of it from me. Therefore, I submit that we have absolutely no materials before us to decide either the fate of Andhra, or of Sindh or of Sylhet. I think it is all unreal and I am afraid that advantage will be taken by some, who are not wholly favourable to our aspirations after reforms, of this particular Resolution, and instead of the country and the government giving their undivided attention to the question of reforms our energies will be dissipated over a fruitless and endless controversy affecting the division of the country into so many fractions. I therefore very strongly deprecate the introduction of a Resolution of this character at this juncture. I sincerely hope and trust that Mr. Sarma will see his way to withdraw this Resolution and divert his energies in behalf of his own province in his own council if it is possible to effect that object there, instead of asking for a vote from us in this Council. My Lord, I have very little more to say than this, that I really do not understand why there should be a redistribution of provinces at all. We have during the last fifty or sixty years since the administration of the country was taken over by the Crown got on very well with the condition of things as they have been. What we want is not the redistribution of provinces, but a more effective and a more representative government, and I do not see that Mr. Sarma is at all justified in creating difficulties in the way of the realisation of that object. On these grounds I very strongly oppose Mr. Sarma's Resolution."

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

4-44 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee :—" My Lord, I confess to a sense of embarrassment in having to speak on this Resolution. On the one hand, it embodies a principle which, subject to certain reservations to which some of the speakers have already referred, may be accepted by us. On the other hand, I cannot think of a moment more inopportune for starting a discussion of this kind which may smother under the dust of a heated controversy those great constitutional reforms upon which the future of India so largely depends, and for the satisfactory solution of which the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State is here in our midst amid the grateful acclaim of an expectant public. My Lord, a great writer has observed that politics is the science of opportunities. I am bound to say that Mr. Sarma's Resolution is in direct contravention of this dictum. In ordinary times if the atmosphere was clearer, relieved from the conditions with which we are confronted to-day, I for my part would have been prepared to accept his Resolution. Indeed, it has been accepted by the Government of India in one notable instance, namely, in connection with the modification of the partition of Bengal in 1911. When we the people of Bengal found that the partition of our province was inevitable, not indeed from our standpoint but from the point of view of our rulers, we then urged that at least the Bengali-speaking population should be held together and reconstituted under one and the same administration. That view prevailed; it was accepted, substantially accepted, by the Government of Lord Hardinge, and the partition of Bengal was modified accordingly. My Lord, I use the word 'substantially' advisedly, for there is at the present moment, as my Hon'ble friend, the representative for Assam, has referred to, there are certain areas with a very large Bengali population to be counted by millions which stand outside the Presidency of Bengal. The Government of India are under a pledge by the terms of the concluding paragraph of the despatch of the 25th August 1911 to reconsider the question of their inclusion when the final settlement comes. The Durbar was held in 1911; to-day is the 6th of February 1918; a settlement has not yet been arrived at. The promise has not been redeemed. But my Lord, at this particular, this psychological moment, we have no desire—I speak on behalf of the people of Bengal—we have no desire to agitate about this matter, to stir the public mind, which is preoccupied with graver considerations. We are content to wait trustfully, wait in the firm confidence that the Government will redeem its promise, or at any rate the responsible governments which are to follow will, by reason of their closer contact with and greater control by public opinion, be in a better position to deal with these difficult, knotty and complicated problems.

" My Lord, I am in sympathy with that part of the Resolution of my Hon'ble friend which says that these provinces should be reconstituted upon the basis of the same language for purposes of self-government. I think provinces so constituted would be helpful. But at the same time I hold that such a constitution is not indispensable to and should not form a condition precedent to the inauguration of responsible government. There are European countries where parliamentary institutions have been in vogue for generations together and which are divided by wide differences of race and social institutions. Take the case of the great Austro-Hungarian Empire with its populations of Germans, Slavs and Magyars. Take Turkey which has Semitic and Aryan populations professing different faiths and speaking different languages, and at the same time practising different social observances. My Lord, Your Excellency has been pleased to enjoin on us the development of a calm atmosphere for the discussion of the constitutional issues which are now before us. We have tried our best and I think the Anglo-Indian communities have done the same to follow Your Excellency's mandate in this matter. But, my Lord, it is not only necessary that we should have a calm atmosphere for the discussion of these great constitutional issues, but I think that such a condition of things is essential for the satisfactory working of responsible government in its initial stages. But, my Lord, if my Hon'ble friend's Resolution is accepted a veritable apple of discord would be thrown into our midst for there are no classes of questions under consideration which are more calculated to excite the fiercest passions than boundary disputes. I have a friend who spent 3 lakhs of rupees in claiming compensation for a few feet of land situated on the border of his estate. He lost his case and he deserved to lose it. What is true of individuals is true of communities. My Lord, this Council will have a vivid recollection of the bitter and angry passions awakened by the partition agitation. These passions and feelings were natural. I remember on one occasion discussing this matter with Lord Minto. He was not in favour of an unsettlement of a settled fact. He said 'Mr. Banerjee, if my County had been distributed in the way your Province has been my feelings would have been the same as yours'. This Council will remember the riots that took place in France not many years ago over the distribution of a particular Department. Therefore, I appeal to my Hon'ble friend to withdraw his Resolution. Let us for the moment concentrate our attention on the question of responsible government and how to attain it, let us do all we can towards the realisation of this object and towards helping Mr. Montagu and His Excellency the Viceroy in formulating a scheme which will command the universal acceptance of the country and satisfy all legitimate aspirations. Let us not be diverted from this main issue by side considerations of this kind. My friend has referred to certain circumstances which he thinks should determine the question whether in a particular area there should be a linguistic basis. He says the people must be numerous, further that there should be a strong volume of public feeling in favour of the redistribution. As my friend behind me has just remarked there is a strong body of feeling in opposition to this. How will you determine this question? What I say is that as soon as you start an enquiry of this kind in any particular area that would constitute the signal for strife, for conflict, for controversy, for agitation, for bitterness. I ask my friend is he prepared to disturb the prospect of responsible government that is opening up for us by the weird spectre of redistribution of territory? We know what it is in Bengal. We know what fierce, what bitter and angry passions were evoked. Men lost their heads, they could think of nothing else, they could dream of nothing else, they could speak of nothing else. Would he like an agitation of that kind to wreck the fair prospects of self-government? I appeal to him most earnestly to withdraw the motion. Let responsible Government be established, I hope it will be within a measurable distance of time, and then it will be time enough for those responsible Governments to take up and decide matters of this kind in a way that will be satisfactory to all parties concerned, because they will control public opinion, they will know what public sentiment is, and they will know that their positions of responsibility, of trust and power will depend on the volume of public opinion. Postpone the consideration of this Resolution for the present, for once responsible Government is established, then there will be time enough to renew this question, to discuss it and to deliberate upon it. That is my earnest appeal to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma."

4-55 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Your Excellency, I am in sympathy with a great deal of what the Hon'ble Mover of this proposition said in advocating this Resolution. The idea of a compact area with a homogeneous population dwelling in it is certainly the most propitious condition that we can imagine for the success of representative Government. But in India I fear that while a compact area may be realised, it is not so easy to realise a homogeneous population. When the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma was speaking of a common language, I think he was attributing to it that small matter of virtue which belongs only to the very much larger matter of homogeneity of other interests. I dare say to him that perhaps he will find more in common with me, although about 500 miles separate our residences, than he will find in common to be with himself and his neighbour whom I can easily conceive, and I think, your excellency, any political arrangement which brings him and me together on a common platform in a common council is not necessarily an inferior arrangement as a means of promoting the common welfare of the population to an arrangement which will bring him and that particular neighbour to whom I was referring on a common platform. For after all language is the only bond of a common nationality. I am quite willing to concede that the present distribution of provinces is neither logical nor conducive to the full success, as the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution has it, of responsible Government. But have we a clean slate upon which to write? History has made it impossible for us to revise these things as mere logic would dictate. If we were Frenchmen or any other people, who are, it seems, very fond of working on logical bases, we might go about doing things in a logical way, but it is utterly inconceivable that we should now erect ideal principles according to which to redistribute the provinces and proceed to work them out. Besides, Your Excellency, there is an apprehension that since the beginning of the Andhra movement I have always entertained,—and, I think, I should be doing wrong to myself if I do not state the fact as plainly as language can do,—I have always held that in the history of this country if we omit two or three brief periods, there has been a continuous period during which the idea of the whole of this country being one nationality, one political unit, was clearly lost by the populations dwelling within it. Since the advent of the British Empire we have had that large notion growing vividly in our minds, and I am unwilling at any time to encourage any notion that is likely to imperil the further growth of that idea.

"Now, I think, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution, carried to its logical conclusion, will probably result in the imperilment of this great idea, and I will proceed to indicate the considerations that seem to me to meet that very problem. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma being carried away, I am afraid, by the provincial thought, proceeded to lay down the somewhat perilous proposition that it would be well in these small provinces with a common language in them to make the vernacular the language of the legislature and of the Government. Therein, I am afraid, he was unconsciously putting his finger on the most dangerous aspect of this whole question. Now if we developed our provinces in such small areas and cut them off by means of their vernaculars from the larger life of the country, for after all difference of language does constitute a barrier to the free flow of public life—if we were to do that, should we not be rendering the different provinces somewhat strangers to each other? I am afraid there is a good deal of danger in that. I am disposed sometimes to think that there was a great deal in the suggestion that a high official made to me that if responsible Government were granted to India, it shall always be coupled with the condition that for at least the space of 20 or 30 years English should be the language of the various legislatures and of the various Governments. For the idea, as I have said above, of an Indian nationality, the idea of the whole of this country being able to draw patriotism on the largest scale, depends to a very considerable degree on the vote that we are prepared to give to the only vehicle of western civilization in this country, namely, the English language. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, I am afraid, overdrew his provincial picture when he thought it possible to cultivate this idea by means of provinces each cultivating its own vernacular. More than that, I am very diffident indeed of setting up in this country innumerable little States; 18 or 19 seemed to Mr. Sarma a small number. It is to me a very formidable number. I think the resources of the central Government, the federating Government, will be taxed to the uttermost in managing a large body of small states each perhaps developing to an inconvenient degree an independent will of its own and a parochial patriotism and a shallow view of life of its own.

"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma said that he would make all these changes depend on the consent of the people. I am very glad he made the statement, but I am glad not from his point of view but from mine, for it is perfectly certain that the changes that he advocates will be attended with much more difficulty and popular opposition in the new regime than in the present.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.] [Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

"A strong central Government like the one that now obtains in this country is much more competent, is much more favourably situated for carrying out drastic changes in the machinery which exists at present than the popular Government that hereafter will take its place. I am therefore very glad that Mr. Sarma conceded that all this should depend on the will of the people, or when the will of the people is thus obtained, I think the chances are that the verdict will be against his proposition than in favour of it, and for this reason which I will now proceed to outline as it has not been stated clearly. Our idea is that every province should hereafter be governed by the higher type of Government; not merely the Congress, but other people as well have asked that every province in India should be governed in future by a Governor and an Executive Council. It is a very costly system of administration. Do we think it possible that every little province constituted on a linguistic basis will be able to sustain this very costly administration?

"The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma knows as well as I or anybody else the tremendous drain that is going to be made of the wealth of this country in various directions. We have got to provide for our defence, and I am afraid the Commander-in-Chief of the future day will ask for sums that will stagger us. Then the large schemes of popular development that the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma advocates no less than others, education, medical relief and so on will require very considerable sums, and the services both in the lower and higher grades are also making very vehement calls on the public finance. We must, therefore, take great care before we enunciate large propositions which will add to the financial difficulties of the future.

"There is one other aspect of the question that has perhaps not been touched upon at all, and that is this. Even now there are provinces which are unable to carry on without help from the revenues of other provinces. We are now thinking of re-arranging the financial system of the country so that there may be as sharp a distinction as possible between Imperial and Provincial finance. Whether that is to come or not is in the future, but for the moment many people are envisaging that advance. Now I should ask, if there were to be numerous provinces each wanting very large sums for its administration, there are bound amongst them to be several who will be unable to meet that demand from their own resources. They will, therefore, have to depend upon other provinces for the means of carrying on. Now if we say that the will of the people is to determine this matter, it will not merely be the will of the people who constitute themselves into new provinces; it will also be the will of the people who may have to pay for them, and the question then will be complicated in a way which perhaps the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma does not yet contemplate. Take, for instance, the little district of Malabar. Now Malabar has a population that speaks a language called Malayalam which is not spoken in any other district of the Madras Presidency. What is to happen if we carry this principle to its full conclusion with regard to that district? Will it consent to be handed over to Travancore where Malayalam is spoken? Such a proposal, if made to the people of Malabar,—the Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair will bear me out in this—will be met with derision if not with indignation.

"I am perfectly willing to grant that in the case of the Andhra country, there are circumstances which place it on a different footing and it might ultimately be advantageous to constitute it into a separate province. But the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has not confined his Resolution to the Andhra province; he has travelled over a wider area and asked for the reconstitution of the whole country.

"Now, with regard to the general aspect of the question, there is only one remark with which I will conclude. Within the experience of each one of us there have been remote villages where occasionally for the treatment of some complaint in the house of a wealthy landlord a famous physician from abroad has been brought in. If the physician's wages were not exorbitant, we all know how other people with diseases of long-standing, curable and incurable, come crowding round him and ask him 'please attend to this, please attend to that.' Now it seems to me that the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State is in the position of this physician. He has come here to deal with a problem of huge proportions. His difficulties are very great; every one of us realises them. Are we going to embarrass him and distract him and worry him with problems which in themselves are of secondary importance? Are we justified in such a crisis in putting upon his back a burden that no human shoulders can bear? I would ask the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma to forbear from complicating the situation. When our responsible Government comes, whether it comes at the end of 20 or at the end of 30 years, then you can come up with your proposal and chip and chop the provinces as you please. But now let us walk warily so far as the re-arrangement of the provinces is concerned."

5-10 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—"My Lord, I confine my remarks only to Madras. It was said that the Tamilian does not want a separate Telegu province and that he, having the upper hand in administration and having the power and authority, does not want to lose the power he enjoys. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri's remarks confirm this point of view. I belong to the Tamil districts and the Telegus, to whom the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma belongs, want to cut away from us, and the Uriyas in their turn want to separate themselves from the Telegus. It is uncharitable to tie down even a wife or brother, who dreams of a paradise in separation; how uncharitable far more will it be to tie down a province against its will? The Andhras exhibit a strong feeling on the matter, so much so that new posters, new dramas and new literature spring up every day. I do not think the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has gauged public opinion correctly. If a referendum on the subject were a deciding factor, then I am afraid the proposition would be unanimously carried. When I happened to proceed to Madras from Calcutta in the train that just preceded the special carrying Your Excellency and the Right Hon'ble Mr. Montagu, there was a good number of posters that showed their strength of feeling. It is not only a matter of feeling but they demand separation from a national point of view, as has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. They say if a Government is established on a linguistic basis, they may have in the vernacular district courts, a high court, a national university and that the executive work will be conducted in the vernacular. Though we do not see such things in a Government exclusively governing a linguistic area like Bengal, such an ideal is worth an attempt More than the Andhras, the Uriyas have good cause to complain. Their districts are divided among the three provinces of Bihar, Bengal and Madras. It is but just that they should be grouped and amalgamated with either Bengal or Bihar.

"On the whole, I beg to accord my support to this Resolution."

5-14 P.M. The Hon'ble Saiyyed Nawab Ali Chaudhry:—"My Lord, I have full sympathy with the first part of the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's Resolution and as for the other portion I am sorry I cannot fully agree with him The re-arrangement of provincial areas on a language basis should not be the only criterion. I would like to put in a claim for the consideration of other points as well. If the Hon'ble member's suggestion is to be logically followed, some Provinces such as Madras, Bengal, Bombay and Central Provinces have got to be cut up into several parts to correspond to the number of important languages spoken, and each of them has got to be peopled by men speaking only one particular vernacular; while Bihar, United Provinces, the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Provinces, the whole tract having a common Urdu speaking population, will form one administrative unit. Race, creed, temperament, the physical configuration of the country, its revenue system and its administrative tradition should receive attention on any redistribution of provincial areas.

"I represent a part of the country, where the people speak Bengali though not the Sanscritized form current among some sections of the community in Calcutta. But the Eastern Bengalis are mainly Muhammadans and their vocabulary has been substantially influenced by Persian and Arabic words from time immemorial. Even the language of the Hindu population of Eastern Bengal is different from that of the Western Bengal. The vernacular text books are different in the two parts.

"The temperament of the Eastern Bengal people has been described by competent authorities as very different from that of Western Bengal. In Eastern Bengal the land is one of the great waterways which affect the habits of the people and introduce their own peculiar engineering and sanitation problems. The land revenue system also differs in some essential features. In whatever direction one looks one cannot help acknowledging the fact that the Eastern portion of Bengal is naturally, racially, administratively and to some extent linguistically, quite distinct from Western Bengal and as such has a claim for separate administration.

"My Lord, when Eastern Bengal was severed from Western Bengal, the neglect from which it had previously suffered was transformed into rapid progress. Under present conditions that progress has sadly slackened and expenditure is once again largely concentrated upon regions which are under the more immediate eye of the Provincial Government.

"My Lord, my excuse for dwelling on these facts is that it should not be supposed that a re-arrangement of provincial areas on a purely language basis, is always likely to be conducive to the best interest of the people, and further that circumstances are conceivable in which an arrangement on such a basis will actually militate against 'success for self-governing institutions.' which the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma aims at.

"Moreover as Mr. Lionel Curtis asked. 'Can we really look forward to a United States of India within the British commonwealth under which Sindhi and the Canarese speaking people are tied and bound into the same self-governing unit as the Marhatta.' . . . ? 'Are the Tamil and Telugu peoples of Madras to be given no separate institutions of their own . . . . ?"

"My Lord, I have to add one word in connection with Sind. Of the population of this little province, 75 per cent. is Muhammadan, but by tacking it on to Bombay its Muhammadan population becomes 20 per cent. and its importance as a Muhammadan province has been altogether lost. Similarly with regard to Eastern Bengal, we have about 67 per cent. of the Muhammadans who become 52 per cent. and lost their individuality as an important community by being merged in Western Bengal.

"My Lord, I earnestly appeal to the Council to bear in mind that the interests of Eastern Bengal cannot be best promoted by being linked to those of Western and that in any future revision of the provincial areas Eastern Bengal and Sylhet should be given a separate administration.

"I have received a message from Sylhet saying the Mussalman's of Sylhet strongly protest against union with Calcutta, but welcome association with East Bengal. The Muhammadan members of the Assam Council are unanimous on this point."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—"My Lord, I had prepared an eloquent speech on this occasion. I do not propose to deliver it, because I think that every aspect of the question on which I was going to touch has been dealt with with far greater eloquence by other Members of this Council and the time is late. I will only say that my blood, my Bombay blood, boiled when the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi suggested that Sind should go back to the Punjab, and I was a little bit surprised at the Hon'ble Member for Assam suggesting the partition of his own province. The attitude of the Government in this matter, my Lord, is neutral. They decided to allow officials to vote and speak as they please, but will not be bound by any vote that may be recorded.

6-20 P.M.

5-21 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—" My Lord, since the Hon'ble the Home Member representing Government has declared that the attitude of the Government is neutral, and officials are free to vote according to their own conviction I feel in a very happy position because I think I might be able to influence the Council: otherwise I could not have. As the fate of this Resolution, my Lord, is to be decided by a vote of this Council—and not by Government decision as usual, to begin with I welcome this departure and hope that we shall follow this course in other matters on future occasions—now my Lord, I wish to put my reasons before the Council.

" It is quite obvious—and I think it must be obvious to every member here for the debate has gone on for 2 or 3 hours—that the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma has brought this Resolution simply because he wants to gain some popularity in his own province. For nobody has yet supported him, except one Hon'ble Member. Why he should have brought this Resolution at the present juncture, I cannot understand. What is his Resolution? I say it is a most mischievous Resolution. I entirely agree with the Hon'ble Member who represents the Punjab Government in every word that he said pertinent to this Resolution. Now, what is the Resolution? If the Council will pardon me for reading a portion of it, this is what the Resolution says:

" This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council the redistribution of provincial areas and the constitution of provinces where necessary to secure complete success for self-governing institutions in British India."

" Now, where are the self-governing institutions in British India for which you want to secure complete success immediately. They are yet in the womb of time, and you don't know what they are going to be. That is the very thing at which His Majesty's Secretary of State for India and His Excellency the Viceroy have been labouring for the past three months. To my mind, this Resolution is putting the cart before the horse. If the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma was really aware as to what the proposals which His Excellency mentioned in his speech to-day are going to be and that we are going to have responsible government in this country; if that had been decided by the Government and if the Hon'ble Member were in the secrets of the Government, I could quite understand his hurrying about it and saying 'I want this thing to be considered now also.' The problem of constitutional reform and reconstruction is big enough without taking up the question of Redistribution of provinces.

" Then, may I know what is his reason for bringing this Resolution at this juncture? The only reason I can discover is that the Hon'ble Member wants to secure some popularity in his own district of Andhra, and I resent that and I say such a thing ought not to be allowed in this Council. This Resolution ought to be thrown out by the vote of the Council though I hope the mover will withdraw it. If the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma listens to the most passionate appeal made to him by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjee, even he will not vote in favour of it but will withdraw it. In any case, I say this Resolution should be thrown out.

" But, my Lord, the question does not rest there and if this Resolution is accepted by this Council to-day, you will throw a regular bomb-shell all over the country. But I do not wish to detain this Council any longer, as enough has been said, because the hour is late and I trust that the Council will throw this Resolution out. I am very glad that some of the Officials who have spoken, spoke against this Resolution and rightly spoke against this Resolution."

5-25 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—" My Lord, I am not surprised at the turn the controversy has taken or at the amount of heat which has been expended in the course of the arguments by certain Hon'ble Members. I still feel that Hon'ble Members have failed to appreciate the point of view from which I have approached the question and have totally failed to give any reasons whatever to oppose my Resolution beyond relying upon sentiment, prejudice, and fears. My Lord, there is one section which tells us—and this is led by the officials—' We do not know what the reforms are going to be. Why this academic discussion? Consequently there is no use of giving any serious attention to it.' I am convinced by the arguments that have been advanced that they have not given any serious consideration or any consideration whatever to the merits of the Resolution. I have proceeded upon the footing of the declaration of the 20th August last. Responsible Government in India is the goal, and some power, whether large or small, will be put into the hands of the people. The question, therefore, is as to whether that power can be wisely exercised, can be exercised in favour of the people and for the benefit of the people in the provinces as they are constituted at present. That is the question at issue. Of course if no self-governing institutions are to be planted in this country, it is another matter; and even then there would be reason for a change; but that is not the object of my Resolution. I say that if you wish to promote self-governing institutions in the country there is no alternative but to accept my Resolution. So there is not much necessity for me to deal with those members who are afraid of the very words 'self-government' and 'self-governing institutions' and wish to be a thousand miles away from the use of those unfortunate terms in the case of India.

"Then come some of our friends who sympathise in an abstract way with the doctrines that I have tried to enunciate here and who advocate changes in their own provinces but who are terribly afraid as to whether in the complicated controversies that may arise the reforms themselves will not be delayed and postponed. I have endeavoured to show that the question of reform is entirely distinct from the question of the redistribution and the constitution of the provinces. There is no necessity for me to repeat the remarks which I made towards the close of my address. What the powers are going to be, and how the councils are going to be constituted is a matter totally different from this, as to how the people exercise those franchises in the various provinces. So there seems to me to be really no difficulty whatever to be apprehended in the matter of government or anybody mischievously taking advantage of any differences of opinion which may exist on this question.

"I think it is beneath my dignity to answer charges of the kind that have been levelled against me by Mr. Jinnah for lack of argument, and for lack of thought. He might choose to call other people names and think that he has advanced his cause by such a procedure and I think I need not pursue the matter further.

"The point that I put in my Resolution is this, if you give the people power how are they going to exercise it in Councils in which the members won't understand one another. The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri tells us that he believes in the doctrine that the language employed in the Councils, Provincial as well as Imperial, must for some time to come, say 20 or 30 years, be English. It is there that he differs from me. I demur to that doctrine. I say it would not be representative government, it would not be self-government if you shut out of your councils men who have a stake in the country who are equally intelligent with the Engish educated section but who unfortunately do not happen to be acquainted with the English language. The field must be wide open to every one who can think and in whom the people have trust. And how can a Province, how can a Government, how can a Legislative Council conduct its proceedings with men who do not understand one another, that is the problem that I place before the Council. I am sorry to say that not a single member has chosen to answer that, except Mr. Sastri who tried to solve the problem by saying 'Let English be the language.' Of course, if English is going to be the language, certainly the problem would not be so urgent, but I differ from him on that point. If I am right and he is wrong, the only logical conclusion to which one can come is that along with the grant of self-governing institutions you must proceed to determine the areas where the peoples representatives will be able to understand one another. Then it was said that you would be increasing the number of provinces enormously. We have at present 14 some of them no doubt very small. The only real additions would be three or four, and even that would be so only if the people desire it. I have also stated distinctly that they would have to pay for it. If all these conditions exist and the people are willing, I do not see any objection whatsoever to the Council agreeing to the proposition put in that guarded form.

"My Lord, the point really is that there is an apprehension in many quarters that the spirit of nationality which is a plant of slow growth and which has been growing steadily in our midst would be deprived of its sustenance if there should be a division in the manner suggested by me. If there is any truth in that remark, if there is justice in that apprehension certainly I should bow to my friends and withdraw my Resolution. But on the other hand I think that the removal of provincial jealousies, the removal of causes for hatred and discord would promote amity and peace between the various peoples living in the country, and on substantial questions of economic welfare they would unite, where they have no reason to differ from one another; the development of the feeling of nationality far from being interfered with would be promoted by the means that I have suggested. Even under the constitution that I have proposed there would be a certain section of other communities intermixed. Therefore, that very intermixture and intercourse between the communities would still continue as it does at present without the disadvantages and the drawbacks which are attendant on the present system, which was not intended for representative institutions but for bureaucratic control.

"It is said that we want only a type of government of the highest character and that it is not likely that these small people will be able to command that. I do not see what virtue there is in having at the head of your office a man on Rs. 10,000 when the work does not require that. If they want a government of such an expensive type let them choose it. I have not asked in my Resolution that they should be compelled. Where they can bear the cost, where they are willing to do so, then accord them the government they care to have in order that they may make progress peacefully and harmoniously. It is important that the Government should at an early date, without prejudice to the announcement of reforms, undertake this enquiry.

I believe it would be impossible to work the institutions of this country in some parts, I do not say in all parts, without an enquiry of this description. Some people seem to think that I have brought forward the question for the sake of the Andhras, I have not done so. The reason why I have advocated it is because I believe it to be necessary that the people should be placed in a position to work representative institutions successfully unfettered in the choice of their representatives. If there is any danger in the policy I have proposed let the Government reject it and we shall know where we are and make such progress as we can. I feel, that even if I am alone, that I should like the Resolution put to the vote"

The motion was put and negatived.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday the 20th February, 1918.

(Referred to in answer to Question No. 5.)

Orders issued by local Governments and Administrations regarding the attendance of teachers and students at political meetings.

MADRAS.

Madras Government G. O. no. 559-Home—Education, dated the 1st May 1917.

The attention of the Government has been drawn to the attempts which have of late been made to bring students in schools and colleges under the influence of a political propaganda. His Excellency the Governor in Council is strongly of opinion that, in the interests both of educational advance and of the youths themselves, it is unwholesome and undesirable that students shall be involved in such discussions, and he has arrived at the conclusion that the time has come when action should be taken to deal with this tendency. His Excellency in Council believe that to this end the parents and guardians of the students in question can give valuable aid by using their influence against the practice of students taking part in political agitation, and he trusts that they will realize the grave responsibility which lies on them in this respect. It is necessary also that the educational authorities should use their powers in the same direction. The disciplinary regulations which are contained in Chapter VIII-A. of the Madras Educational Rules already contain certain directions on the subject. It has, however, been represented to His Excellency in Council that the directions in this chapter are insufficient to meet the present situation and that it is necessary to supplement them by further instructions. The Government, therefore, direct that no undergraduate student in any college and no pupil in any school shall be permitted to take part in public political discussions, to attend political meetings, to join any political association or to take part in any movement with which it is, in the opinion of the educational authorities, undesirable that persons still in statu pupillari shall be associated. His Excellency in Council directs that heads of colleges and schools, whether under public management or otherwise, shall strictly enforce these directions. In doing so they should have regard not merely to the declared purpose of a meeting, but also to the speakers who will address it.

Madras Government G. O. no. 1531-Home (Education), dated 3rd December 1917.

Representations have been made to the Government of various college authorities that while they are in complete agreement with policy underlying G. O. no. 559, dated 1st May 1917, namely, the desirability of preventing the participation of students in politics, the terms of the Government Order as regards the attendance of undergraduate students at political meetings are unduly rigid and deprive Principals of the discretion which rightly belongs to heads of colleges.

2. His Excellency the Governor in Council recognizes the force of this criticism and, while maintaining the policy of the Government Order, he has come to the conclusion that this can best be secured by entrusting its enforcement to heads of colleges who will exercise their discretion in the circumstances of their respective institutions. He has accordingly resolved to commit to heads of colleges this discretion believing that these authorities will loyally carry out the wishes of the Government, and that in so doing they will receive in full measure the support of parents and guardians of students.

BOMBAY.

Government of Bombay, Educational Department Circular no. 1405, dated the 7th June 1917.

It has recently come to the notice of Government that students from schools and colleges have latterly been attending political meetings in large numbers. Such attendance is contrary to the rules regarding the participation of students in public meetings laid down by Government in connection with the maintenance of discipline in schools and colleges. It is the desire of Government that these rules should be strictly observed at the present time by pupils of all educational institutions, whether Government, aided, or unaided but recognised. The Director of Public Instruction should accordingly be requested to invite the attention of all heads of educational institutions to the following documents containing the rules referred to, which are reprinted as accompaniments to this circular:—

(1) Government Resolution no. 2395, dated the 30th September 1908.

(2) Circular to masters of primary schools in the mofussil printed as an accompaniment to Government Resolution no. 2396, dated the 30th September, 1908.

(3) Government Notification no. 1570-A., dated the 4th August, 1909, publishing general rules of discipline for Government schools.

2. Government particularly desire that school and college students should not be permitted to attend meetings which are organised by Home Rule leagues or at which home rule is to be advocated. Proved instances of the breach of the rules or connivance at their breach by the heads or managers of educational institutions will be taken serious notice of by Government.

Resolution of the Government of Bombay, Educational Department, no. 2395, dated the 30th September 1908.

His Excellency the Governor in Council observes with extreme regret that the advance of education in this Presidency, towards which Government contribute largely from the resources of the Province, has been accompanied by relaxation of discipline and a lowering of the standard of manners in schools and colleges. This has lately culminated in flagrant offences against school rules, while complaints of the rudeness and discourtesy of boys in public are becoming too frequent.

2. His Excellency in Council feels certain that no parents can wish that there should be a breaking up of family life, that authority should be disregarded and that the way to anarchy should thus be prepared. These are the necessary results of any weakening of that discipline which the wisdom of the East has always recognised to be the indispensable preliminary to a right use of the independence of manhood. It is in well governed families, schools and colleges, and there only, that youths can be trained to the duties and responsibilities of citizenship. There only can they learn the habits of obedience, mutual respect, tolerance, self-control, self-sacrifice and devotion to a common good which are vital to the existence of organised society. Where these lessons have not been learnt, there can exist only a mob of individuals knowing no law but inclination, no good but personal gratification and self-aggrandisement, and unable to rise to a conception of national progress. This is one of the most certain lessons of history, and its truth has never been questioned in India, where it has been powerfully re-inforced by religious sanction.

3. The traditional feeling of boys towards their guru in this country has always been one of respectful awe, and the attitude of children towards their parents and elders has always been one of implicit obedience carried on even into mature age. It must be the fault both of parent and of guru if the reverence accorded to them even a quarter of a century ago is now being lost.

4. His Excellency the Governor in Council is convinced that the growing laxity of discipline and disregard of authority are in some measure due to the tendency on the part of boys and students to associate themselves with political demonstrations. Whatever may be the merits of any political propaganda, there can be no question that the participation in it of youths in the state of pupilage is gravely injurious to the progress of education. Not only are immature minds impressed with ideas before powers of judgment have been acquired, but the mental excitement thus induced is necessarily prejudicial to an orderly process of learning. In the words of Dr. Edward Caird addressed to the students of Balliol College, Oxford: "To undertake such work would be to anticipate life in such a way as to hinder your preparation for it." These words express a universal truth, and the Governor in Council has come to the conclusion that, in the interests of educational progress, which are now plainly suffering, the incursions of boys and students into political affairs must be checked.

5. When boys live in hostels, the responsibility of the parent is for the time suspended, and that of the master is complete. In day-schools, the master is responsible during school hours, and at other times the parent There must, therefore, be co-operation between master and parent. Nowhere in the past has there prevailed a more attractive type of manners and a higher standard of courtesy than in Indian households. Both masters and parents are well aware of this. They know the sentiments with which they were inspired, and the outward forms of respect that were exacted from them, when they were boys. The Governor in Council expects that they will do their utmost to inculcate the same high tone of feeling and standard of behaviour in their own children and pupils. This is manifestly demanded alike in the interests of the parents, of the boys and of the country as a whole.

6. The Governor in Council is, therefore, determined that breaches of discipline in schools, and lawlessness, rudeness, and discourtesy in or out of school shall not be tolerated in schools maintained or aided by Government, and any measures which managers or masters may take to enforce authority and to check the growing laxity of manners will receive the fullest support.

7. Masters are too prone to believe that their success is to be measured by the number of boys in their schools. This is an entire mistake. Rude, undisciplined and disobedient boys should be ruthlessly weeded out. Boys taking part in seditious or disorderly proceedings should be expelled. In their own schools and in those which they aid, Government attach much more importance to quality than to numbers.

8. Inspecting officers will be directed to pay surprise visits to schools, and to warn masters, if necessary, that they are not acting up to the standards required by Government. It is expected that the managers of aided schools will recognise that they ought to maintain the same standard of discipline that Government will exact in their own schools, and that the acceptance of aid from Government implies a general willingness to fulfil as far as possible the requirements of Government. There is no obligation to contribute to the support of institutions which are not rendering effective service to the people.

9. The Governor in Council believes that good would result from more frequent consultation between managers of schools and Government officers both of the Educational and the Revenue Departments. Parents also should be called into council as much as possible, and the objects of Government should be explained to them. The Government will endeavour to provide, in their own institutions, as high a standard of education as financial conditions permit, and will continue their aid to other schools and colleges. It must, however, be clearly understood that hostility to Government is incompatible with retention of students in the former and with grants to the latter.

10. In all Government and aided secondary schools, His Excellency requires a strict observance of the following conditions:—

(1) Strict regularity and implicit obedience must be exacted in class.

(2) Any reported or observed objectionable conduct out of school must be sternly punished.

(3) Parents must be given to understand that they cannot dictate to managers, but that the managers have a right to say on what conditions they will admit or retain boys in their schools. A great deal of the prevailing laxity in schools comes from the fatal oriental habit of yielding to importunity.

(4) The present habit of appearing both in class and in public in dirty and untidy dress must be suppressed. Decent native clothes are very cheap and are easily kept clean.

(5) Politeness and courtesy must be inculcated, and any approach to rudeness or ungentlemanly speech or conduct should be punished.

(6) Such papers only as Government from time to time sanction shall be admitted to reading rooms of schools and hostels or subscribed to by students.

(7) No school-boy shall attend or take part in the organization or conduct of any public meeting of any kind.

11. The above rules will apply to all schools and colleges, Government or aided, except that college students may attend public meetings with the previous permission of the Principal, to whose discretion it shall also be left what papers are admitted into the college.

12. It is expected that the managers of aided primary schools in large centres will give effect to these rules so far as they are applicable in their case. Separate instructions will be issued to mofussil school-masters.

Circular to masters of primary schools in the mofussil printed as an accompaniment to Government Resolution no. 2396, dated the 30th September 1908.

To Masters of Primary Schools in the Mofussil.

1 The Sarkar has heard that some of you disobey the rule which forbids you to go to political meetings or speak in public on politics. You must obey the rule.

2. You are not to take newspapers into school or to allow any one else to take them in.

3. Some of your boys are often rude to people in the streets. It is your business to teach them to be well-behaved and to punish them if they do not obey you.

4. You are to try to persuade parents to make their boys obedient and polite, and to make them regular in attendance at school.

5. When political meetings are held you are not to allow your boys to go to them, and you are to try to persuade parents to help you in keeping them away from them.

6. You are to make your boys be as clean and tidy as possible.

Government of Bombay, Educational Department notification no 1570-A., dated the 4th August 1909.

His Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to approve the following rules of discipline for Government schools :—

General Rules of Discipline for Government Schools.

[N.B.—A copy of these rule is to be given to the parent or guardian of each boy on his first admission to the school.]

1. Parents or guardians who send their boys to Government schools must understand that by so doing they agree to delegate to the head master and the educational authorities the control which they are entitled to exercise over such boys in all matters connected with such schools and that in all questions of school discipline both inside and outside the schools the decision of those authorities is final.

2. Every application for admission or withdrawal should be made to the head master by the parent or guardian of a boy in person or by letter. Applications for admission must be accompanied by a leaving certificate from the school last attended.

3. The school fee must be paid monthly in advance on the day fixed for that purpose. If a boy wishes to leave the school his parent must give notice of his intention before the end of the month; else the fee for the following month will have to be paid,

4. The head master will exercise his discretion in admitting a boy or retaining him in the school. For breach of the school rules a boy may be fined or otherwise punished at the discretion of the headmaster.

5. Boys are required to be regular and punctual in attendance. Leave of absence should be applied for either in person or by a note signed by the parent or guardian and it will lie with the head master to grant or refuse such leave. If a boy is absent without leave he will be required to bring a note from the parent or guardian explaining his absence, but it will be for the head master to decide whether the reason assigned is sufficient.

6. Parents or guardians will be held responsible for any damage done by boys to any part of the school property.

7. Boys are required to be clean and tidy, orderly and respectful, both in class and in public. Rude, disorderly or other objectionable conduct out of school will be punished.

8. No boy is to attend or take part in the organization or conduct of any public meeting of any kind, or, without the express permission of the head master, in the collection of any fund.

BENGAL.

Bengal Government letter no. 233-T. Edn., dated the 16th May 1917, to the Director of Public Instruction.

The Governor in Council has had under consideration the action to be taken in connection with the association of college students and school pupils with the recently inaugurated Home Rule agitation, and I am directed to convey the following instructions on the subject.

2. Apart from the aspirations and ideals underlying the formation of the Home Rule League, its immediate result has been the initiation of an active political propaganda, with which it is undesirable that youth pursuing their studies at school or college should be associated. His Excellency in Council, therefore, considers it necessary to direct that no boy attending a Government or aided school and no student in a Government or aided college, whether studying for a degree or engaged in post-graduate studies, should join the League, either as an associate or as a member. Under the rules of the League schoolboys are ineligible for membership, but students can apparently be admitted as associates for the purposes of study, etc.

3. These instructions should be read in supersession of my letter no. 1573, dated the 2nd December 1916.

UNITED PROVINCES.

United Provinces Government G. O. no. 444-XV-861-A., Educational Department, dated the 18th May 1907, to the Registrar, Allahabad University.

I am directed to enclose a copy of the Government of India, Home Department, letter no. 387, dated the 4th May 1907, with copy of its enclosure, for the information of the Senate of the Allahabad University.

2. I am to say that, in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor, some of the students in Allahabad have been taking a more active part in political meetings than is desirable, and that the present attitude of certain students there is such as to demand the very careful attention of the University authorities. The Lieutenant-Governor trusts that no need will arise for enforcing the penalties which the Government of India refer to, but it is essential that any attempt to convert colleges into centres for the dissemination of political doctrines of any kind should be sternly repressed.

3. As regards Government schools and colleges, I am to say that instructions are being issued to the Director of Public Instruction for the guidance of Principals and head masters of Government colleges and schools, and should any action by the University be desired in respect of these institutions, you will be addressed hereafter.

United Provinces Government G. O. no. 445-XV-861-A., Educational Department, dated the 18th May 1907, to the Director of Public Instruction, United Provinces

I am directed to forward for your information a copy of a letter (with its enclosures) which has been addressed to the Registrar of the Allahabad University on the subject of the active participation of teachers and students in political movements.

2. I am to say that the Government colleges are by no means free from blame in the matter and that it has come to the notice of the Government that certain students have attended political meetings and made inflammatory speeches. The principals of these colleges must be careful to see that their students do not offend against the principles laid down by the Government of India. The head masters of Government schools must also see that these principles are observed in their respective institutions.

PUNJAB.

Punjab Government circular no. 3350-11-S. B., dated the 30th July 1917.

An unsatisfactory feature of recent meetings convened in Lahore to discuss political subjects has been the increasingly large attendance of students. The young require special protection against those who appeal to them to join in agitation by flattering them as patriots, as defenders of their religion, and as saviours of their country, and thereby sow the seeds of indiscipline and anarchy which may have lamentable results in the near future. This is no imaginary picture. Within the last few years some scores of schoolboys and students, often belonging to loyal and respected families, have by means of such insidious appeals been perverted and drawn into sedition and rebellion. Some of these have been convicted by the Courts and sentenced to severe penalties, some are languishing as prisoners or suspects in an exile of their own choosing, while some under healthy home influences and surroundings have realised the error of their ways. In the interest of the community as a whole, and especially of the rising generation, it is essential to prevent the recurrence of tragedies which have already brought ruin and shame on many homes.

2. The policy of the Government of India in regard to the connection of schoolboys and students with politics was explained in a circular of 1907. That circular laid down that the association of schoolboys with politics was harmful both to study and to discipline and should be prevented. Their teachers also were enjoined to avoid expressions of political opinion which might introduce into the immature minds of their pupils doctrines subversive of their respect for authority and calculated to impair their usefulness as citizens and hinder their advancement in after-life. That policy, which all sensible men must approve, still holds good.

3. It is recognised that college students are entitled to a greater degree of liberty than schoolboys. The students of to-day will be the citizens of to-morrow; they are bound to play a large part in the economic, intellectual and political development of the country, and their mental training should be such as will assist them to form broad and sound ideas in regard to the matters with which they may have to deal hereafter. It is, therefore, no part of the policy of Government to debar them from a reasonable and healthy interest in political matters. They have ready access to newspapers and periodicals, and there is much in the college courses which is intended to inform their minds on such subjects and develop their interest in them. But it is generally admitted by those who are most deeply interested in the welfare of students that they are fitted neither by age nor experience to take an active part in politics. The views of the late Mr. Gokhale on this subject are entitled to the greatest weight. Addressing a gathering of students, at Bombay, he expressed himself as follows :—" The active participation of students in political agitation really tends to lower the dignity and the responsible character of public life and impair its true effectiveness. It also fills the students themselves with unhealthy excitement, often evoking in them a bitter partisan spirit which cannot fail to interfere with their studies and prove injurious to their intellectual and moral growth. The period of four or five years, which most young men spend at college, is all too short a time for the work which properly belongs to it, namely, preparation in knowledge and character for the responsibilities of life. Surely it is not too much to ask our students to exercise a little patience and self-restraint during this period and refrain from action in politics till after they have completed their studies and taken their place in the public life of the country."

4. This advice was given in 1909, and subsequent experience of the evils that have resulted from the participation of students in political movements fully confirms its wisdom. It is a matter of common knowledge that many parents now hesitate to send their sons to colleges in Lahore, the centre of political life in the Punjab, from the fear that they may be drawn into one or other of the various political movements.

It may be argued that attendance at political meetings does not necessarily involve taking an active part in politics, but experience shows that it is usually the first step towards such participation, and that the atmosphere of such meetings is likely to create unhealthy excitement and a partisan spirit—to repeat the words of Mr. Gokhale—in immature minds which hear only one side of the case and are not yet trained to see that there are two sides to most questions.

5. The present time is one of special difficulty ; and in one high educational institution in another province, not under the control of Government, the managing body have thought it advisable to prohibit not only the students but the staff from taking an active part in political meetings. The Lieutenant-Governor sees no need for such action in the Punjab. He is confident that the staff of the different colleges may be relied on to exercise due discretion and to avoid anything which might set a bad example to the students He further relies on principals and professors to use their authority and influence to discourage their students from reading literature of violently partisan or inflammatory nature and from attending political meetings during term time, on parents and guardians to take similar action during the college vacations, and on the good sense of the students themselves to co-operate loyally in a policy which is intended not to restrict their out-look or hamper their progress but to ensure development on reasoned and healthy lines which will fit them to be worthy sons of their own country and loyal subjects of the King-Emperor.

BIHAR AND ORISSA.

Office Memorandum from the Director of Public Instruction, Bihar and Orissa, dated the 22nd October 1914

(1) Any student on the rolls of a Government or Aided College, who wishes to join any club or society outside the college, shall obtain the approval of the principal before doing so. Breach of this rule will be regarded as a serious offence. Permission will ordinarily be granted by the principal on presentation of a written and duly signed request from the student's father or natural guardian.

(2) No club or society may be started or maintained in any Government or Aided College without the approval of the principal. Suitable members of the staff of the college will be selected by the Principal as honorary members of all such college clubs and societies, and will be required to interest themselves in their progress and welfare. No person, who is not at the time a member of the college, shall be a member of any such club or society, or shall address meetings of such, save at the invitation of a person duly authorised by the principal.

Circular no. 40, dated Ranchi, the 23rd October 1914.

Copy forwarded to all Principals of Colleges, for information and guidance.

Office Memorandum from the Director of Public Instruction, Bihar and Orissa, dated the 22nd October 1914.

The following additions to the general rules for secondary schools on pages 167—173 of the Rules and Orders of the Education Department, Bengal, are authorised :—

30. Any pupil on the rolls of a Government or Aided School who wishes to join any club or society outside the school shall obtain the approval of the headmaster before doing so. Breach of this rule will be regarded as a serious offence.

31. No club or society may be started or maintained in any Government or Aided School without the approval of the headmaster. Suitable members of the staff of the school will be selected by the headmaster as honorary members of all such school clubs and societies and will be required to interest themselves in their progress and welfare. No person who is not at the time a member of the school shall be a member of any such club or society, or shall attend meetings of such, save at the invitation of a person authorised by the headmaster.

Circular no. 41, dated Ranchi, the 23rd October 1914.

Copy forwarded to all Divisional Inspectors of Schools. The Inspectresses of Schools, the Headmaster of the Ranchi Zila School, the Principal of the Bihar School of Engineering, and the Lady Principal of the Ravenshaw Girls' School, for information and guidance.

Office Memorandum from the Director of Public Instruction, Bihar and Orissa, dated the 22nd October 1914.

The attention of heads of colleges and of Government and Aided Schools is called to Sir Herbert Risley's circular (Circular no. 332, dated May the 4th, 1907, from the Government of India in the Home Department, pages 346-8 of the Rules and Orders of the Education Department, Bengal) which lays down that school boys may not attend political meetings whilst, though college students may attend such meetings as a general rule and provided that they so conduct themselves as not to bring themselves into undesirable notoriety, they may not take any active part in their proceedings. Discretionary power to prohibit attendance is thus left with the principals of colleges. Further the circular insists upon the principle that colleges exist for the purpose of education, not as centres for the dissemination of political doctrines of whatever character, and points out that a member of the staff who encourages his pupils to attend political meetings abuses his position. The above circular was supplemented in Mr. Hallward's confidential circular no. 92—94, dated November the 25th, 1912, by instructions to the effect that the enrolment of students as "volunteers" in connection with such meeting would constitute on their part "taking an active part in the proceedings." These orders should in future be strictly observed, and breach of them must be regarded as a serious offence.

2. From time to time doubt arises as to whether a meeting is political or not. In all such cases the decision so far as the students or scholars of his institution are concerned, must be with the principal or headmaster, whose permission to take part or to attend, as the case may be, must be obtained beforehand. If the principal or headmaster requires further information as to the objects of the organisation of the meeting he should apply for the same to the local executive authority.

3. Nothing in these rules precludes a principal or a headmaster, in consultation with the President or Secretary of his governing body or committee, from prohibiting his pupils from attendance at any meeting which they deem unsuitable or unseemly.

Circular no. 42, dated Ranchi, the 23rd October 1914.

Copy forwarded to all Principals of Colleges, all Divisional Inspectors of Schools, the Inspectresses of Schools, the Headmaster of the Ranchi Zila School, the Principal of the Bihar School of Engineering, and the Lady Principal of the Ravenshaw Girls' School, for information and guidance.

Circular from the Director of Public Instruction, Bihar and Orissa, no. 36, dated the 27th July 1917.

I have the honour to draw your attention to my circulars nos. 40 and 42, dated the 23rd October 1914, and to request you to see that the instructions contained therein are enforced.

2. I have further to inform you that Government disapprove of the participation of any student in the Home Rule League movement and that principal and headmasters of Government and Aided Schools should bear this in mind when exercising the discretion allowed to them under these circulars.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.

Letter from the Director of Public Instruction, Central Provinces, to all Inspectors of Schools, Central Provinces and Berar, no. 1038, dated the 6th February 1917.

I have the honour to state that I am asked by the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner to draw your attention to the instructions conveyed in Major Plowden's letter no. 730-VI-1-35, dated the 26th June 1907, regarding the participation of students and schoolboys in politics, included as Appendix F. in the present Education Manual, and to remind you of your responsibility for seeing that these instructions are carried out.

2. According to these instructions the attendance of schoolboys at political meetings is absolutely forbidden. As it is often impossible for schoolboys to know beforehand the real character and purpose of a public meeting, the Chief Commissioner desires it to be laid down that in future no schoolboy should be allowed to attend any public meeting during term-time without previously obtaining the permission of the headmaster of his school. Any breach of this rule should be regarded as a serious offence against school discipline of which the headmaster must take cognisance. It will be the duty of the headmaster to ascertain the true character and purpose of any public meeting for which such permission may be desired. Where he feels any doubt he can institute enquiries among responsible persons. Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners are ready to give information and advice on such matters. But the final responsibility must rest with the headmaster and no headmaster, who cannot face this responsibility or act up to it for fear of consequences or any other reasons, can be regarded as fit for his position.

3. The instructions already in force make it quite clear that participation in any form of political agitation whatsoever or in arrangements connected with political meetings whether prior to or subsequent to such meetings is prohibited to the same extent as participation in political meetings. The further orders conveyed in paragraph 2 of this letter should consequently be regarded as applicable to all arrangements connected with public meetings of any kind.

4. These instructions refer only to occurrences during term-time. There is no desire to hold headmasters directly responsible for what their pupils may do during the vacations.

5. I request you to communicate these instructions without any delay to headmasters of all Government high schools and managers of all recognised high schools under private or municipal control in your circle and to emphasise their responsibility in this matter.

6. As it is evident from recent occurrences that the orders contained in paragraph 7 of Major Plowden's letter quoted above regarding measures to be taken in Government institutions for notifying the prohibition of attendance at political meetings have not been carried out in several Government schools, it is now necessary to make these orders even more explicit. A notice should be drafted in Vernacular and English to the effect that participation in any form of political agitation and attendance at any political meeting are absolutely prohibited in the case of schoolboys and that the headmaster's previous permission must be obtained for attendance at any public meeting or participation in any arrangements connected therewith. This notice should be communicated to the parent or guardian of every pupil now in the school and of every pupil who may subsequently be enrolled at the time of his enrolment. It should also be included in the school rules which in a well organised school are posted up where they can conveniently be seen by all pupils. The attention of managers of high schools under private or municipal control should be drawn to the instructions contained in this paragraph and, while leaving the authorities of such schools discretion as regards measures to be taken for notifying the general orders, you should lay due stress on their responsibility for such notification.

7. It is evident that if the general orders referred to in this letter are to be effective, adequate measures must be taken for the detection of pupils who disobey them. This should be emphasised, but the responsibility for devising and carrying out such measures should be left to the school authorities.

8. The instructions conveyed in Major Plowden's letter include high, middle and primary schools. The further instructions in this letter are intended primarily for high schools But it is in your power to apply them to other kinds of schools if you are convinced in any particular instance that such further application is necessary in the pupils' interest.

9. I wish you to let the school authorities know that we confidently look to them for cordial co-operation in measures that have been devised solely in the interests of their pupils. It must clearly be understood that the development of character, which is our primary aim, depends on the general discipline of school life, the nature of the methods of instructions and the vigour with which school games and other forms of school activity are prosecuted. The measures referred to in this letter have value only in so far as they safeguard pupils from forms of activity for which they are not fit and which may be disastrous in their consequences. It is for the school authorities to provide suitable outlets for the enthusiasm and vigour which we welcome in all school boys.

DELHI.

Letter from the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, to the Principals, Ramjas, St. Stephen's and Hindu Colleges, Delhi; the Headmasters, Government, Mission, Anglo-Arabic, Anglo-Vernacular Sanskrit, Bengali Boys and Ramjas High School, Delhi, no. 7426-Home, dated the 23rd August 1917.

I have the honour to address you on the subject of the participation in political movements by pupils at schools and colleges.

2. The policy of the Government of India in regard to the connection of schoolboys and students with politics was explained in a circular of 1907. That circular laid down that the association of schoolboys with politics was harmful both to study and to discipline and should be prevented. Their teachers also were enjoined to avoid expressions of political opinion which might introduce into the immature minds of their pupils doctrines subversive of their respect for authority and calculated to impair their usefulness as citizens and hinder their advancement in after-life. That policy, which all sensible men must approve, still holds good.

3. It is recognised that college students are entitled to a greater degree of liberty than schoolboys. The students of to-day will be the citizens of to-morrow: they are bound to play a large part in the economic, intellectual and political development of the country, and their mental training should be such as will assist them to form broad and sound ideas in regard to the matters with which they may have to deal hereafter. It is, therefore, no part of the policy of Government to debar them from a reasonable and healthy interest in political matters. They have ready access to newspapers and periodicals, and there is much in the college courses which is intended to inform their minds on such subjects and develop their interest in them. But it is generally admitted by those who are most deeply interested in the welfare of students that they are fitted neither by age nor experience to take an active part in politics. The views of the late Mr. Gokhale on this subject are entitled to the greatest weight. Addressing a gathering of students at Bombay, he expressed himself as follows :—"The active participation of students in political agitation really tends to lower the dignity and the responsible character of public life and impair its true effectiveness. It also fills the students themselves with unhealthy excitement, often evoking in them a bitter partisan spirit which cannot fail to interfere with their studies and prove injurious to their intellectual and moral growth. The period of four or five years which most young men spend at college, is all too short a time for the work which properly belongs to it, namely, preparation in knowledge and character for the responsibilities of life. Surely it is not too much to ask our students to exercise a little patience and self-restraint during this period and refrain from action in politics till after they have completed their studies and taken their place in the public life of the country."

4. This advice was given in 1909, and subsequent experience of the evils that have resulted from the participation of students in political movements fully confirms its wisdom.

It may be argued that attendance at political meetings does not necessarily involve taking an active part in politics, but experience shows that it is usually the first step towards such participation, and that the atmosphere of such meetings is likely to create unhealthy excitement and a partisan spirit —to repeat the words of Mr. Gokhale—in immature minds which hear only one side of the case and are not yet trained to see that there are two sides to most questions.

5. The present time is one of special difficulty; and in one high educational institution in another province, not under the control of Government, the managing body have thought it advisable to prohibit not only the students but the staff from taking an active part in political meetings. I am confident that the staff of the different colleges may be relied on to exercise due discretion and to avoid anything which might set a bad example to the students. I further rely on principals and professors to use their authority and influence to discourage their students from reading literature of a violently partisan or inflammatory nature and from attending political meetings during term-time, on parents and guardians to take similar action during the college vacations, and on the good sense of the students themselves to co-operate loyally in a policy which is intended not to restrict their out-look or hamper their progress but to ensure development on reasoned and healthy lines which will fit them to be worthy sons of their own country and loyal subjects of the King-Emperor.

APPENDIX D.

(Referred to in question No. 14.)

Circular No. 807, dated Simla, the 3rd October 1916.

From—A. E. GILLIAT, Esq., I.C.S., Under Secretary to the Government of India,

To—
- The Secretary to the Government of Madras, Revenue Department.
- The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department.
- The Chief Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces.
- The Revenue Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.
- The Revenue Secretary to the Government of Burma.
- The Secretary to the Government of Bihar and Orissa, Revenue Department.
- The Honourable the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces.
- The Honourable the Chief Commissioner of Assam.
- The Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara.
- The Chief Commissioner, Coorg.

I AM directed to invite a reference to paragraph 58 of the Report of the Committee on Co-operation in India in which it is recommended, in order to facilitate the issue of loans by Co-operative Credit Societies on short notice to meet urgent demands by members—

(1) that special arrangements should be made as now with Government Treasuries or police stations in places where these are close at hand for the safe custody of cash balances retained for the purpose, and

(2) that the special concessions obtaining in Bombay for withdrawals from Post Office Savings Banks, which are described in paragraph 12 (3) of Chapter IX of the manual for Co-operative Societies in that Presidency (copy enclosed) should be extended elsewhere

2. As regards the first recommendation, so far as it concerns Government Treasuries, I am to invite a reference to Mr (now Sir James) Wilson's letter No. 1249-268—2, dated 16th August 1905 (to the Government of Madras, a copy of which was forwarded to other Local Governments and Administrations with the endorsement from this Department No. 1250-59-268-2, dated the 16th August 1905), and to say that the existing orders may be acted upon as long as the prescribed safeguards are maintained. The question whether the cash balances of Societies should be kept at police stations is one which the Government of India leave to the decision of Local Governments and Administrations.

(Except Madras)

3. With regard to the second recommendation, I am to invite a reference to the note to clause (k) of rule 42 of the Rules for Depositors in Post Office Savings Banks which already enables Local Governments in consultation with the Postmasters General concerned to procure concessions for Co-operative Societies in their provinces similar to those in Force in Bombay.

Enclosure No. II.

No. 1249—268-2, dated Simla, the 16th August 1905.

From—J. WILSON, ESQ., C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Madras, Revenue Department.

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 567, dated the 17th June last, asking that Societies registered under the Co-operative Credit Societies Act, X of 1904, may be allowed the privilege of depositing their strong-boxes for safe custody in Government Treasuries.

2. The Government of India sanction the grant of the privilege in all cases in which the Local Government is satisfied that the society could not otherwise, except at unreasonable cost, arrange for the custody of its funds, and papers either with a Government Savings Bank, or with an approved banker, or in some other safe manner; on the condition that the concession may at any time be withdrawn should Government see fit.

3. I am to add that in considering whether there is room in the Treasury it must be remembered that accommodation should be reserved for a currency chest, whenever the Commissioner * of Paper Currency may desire to create one. Moreover, when the concession is given, the Society should be required to use a strong-box of moderate dimensions, with a good lock, sealed with a proper seal, and it should be warned that the Treasury staff must not be harassed by too frequent applications to open the Treasury. It is reasonable that the authorities of the Society should be required to keep in their own office the money required for current needs and only to deposit in the Treasury what will not often be wanted.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 9th February 1918.

Burma.—The week was rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice is nearly completed. Cultivation of spring crops and harvesting of white beans and other miscellaneous crops are progressing. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has fallen further to rupees 87 per hundred baskets and is much below normal. The market for white rice is weak at rupees 230 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Harvesting of pulses is practically finished and that of cotton is nearing completion. Harvesting of mustard, pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea, transplantation of spring rice and ploughing of autumn and winter rice and jute continue. Outturn and prospects of crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from one district. Fall in the price of common rice continues.

Bengal.—The weather continues to be rainless. The standing spring crops are suffering for want of rain and their prospects have been affected somewhat thereby. Harvesting of sugarcane, potatoes and early oilseeds and preparation of fields for the autumn crops continue. The average price of common rice for the province has slightly fallen as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—There was no rain during the week. Threshing of paddy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Oilseeds are being harvested. Preparation of lands for the next season's crops has commenced. Standing spring crops and vegetables are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in two districts, fallen in four and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from fourteen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—No rain fell during the week. Irrigation and weeding of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane and preparation of land for sugarcane continue. Slight damage by frost to arhar and other crops is reported from some districts. Harvesting of peas has begun. Standing crops and agricultural stock are doing well. Prospects are good. Fodder is still dear in places. Prices are rising slightly.

Punjab.—The weather was dry. Rain is badly wanted everywhere for standing spring crops. Pressing of sugarcane continues in some districts. The yield is normal to good. Condition of standing wheat and other crops is average to good, but unirrigated crops in some districts are suffering from cold and drought and are below average. Toria is being harvested in parts of the west, the yield being normal. Stocks of food grains are generally sufficient. Cattle are healthy but fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices are stationary and range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in south-eastern districts where they are between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat :—Rawalpindi 7¼, Ambala 7¾, Lahore 8, Ferozepore and Lyallpur 8¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain fell in one district. More rain is urgently wanted throughout the province. Prospects of spring crops are good. Sugarcane is being pressed and gur made. The outturn is average. Wheat :—Peshawar 7⅞ and Dera Ismail Khan $9\frac{1}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Prices are stationary. There is nothing else noteworthy.

Kashmir.—The week was generally rainless. Spring crops are in average condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal.

Rajputana.—The weather was cold. Standing crops are being irrigated. Spring crops, prospects and agricultural stock are good. Prices are rising.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was nil. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather continues to be clear. Nights and mornings are still cool but days are getting warm. Some damage to crops has been caused by frost at a few places in northern districts. Spring crops, especially wheat, have suffered for want of rain but spring prospects are generally fair to good. Cattle are in good condition. Prices remained almost stationary.

Feudatory States :—The condition of standing crops is generally satisfactory.

Bombay.—Standing crops are good except in parts of Sind where they have been damaged by frost and rats. Spring harvesting continues in parts of Deccan and Karnatak. Cotton picking continues in Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar, Nawabshah, West Khandesh, Dharwar and Kathiawar. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Spring crops have suffered from blight and excessive rain in parts. Late rice is fair and is being weeded and will shortly be sown. Cattle are healthy. Prices of grains continue high.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee and harvesting of rice continue. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are steady.

The 30,054 deaths from plague reported during the week ending the 2nd of February represent an increase of 13 per cent. over the plague mortality of the previous week. More than a third of these deaths occurred in the United Provinces where thirty-nine out of the forty-eight districts reported plague deaths. Bombay with 7,319 deaths is second on the list of severely infected administrations: here the disease is most severe in the Kaira district and in the adjacent Baroda State. Rajputana reported 4,409 deaths, 946 fewer than in the previous week: here Jaipur is the worst infected state.

During the month of January the reported deaths from plague in India approximated 114,000. Only once before has this number been exceeded, viz., in 1905 when the January plague mortality was 144,000: in 1904 the corresponding figure was 94,000 and in 1911, 92 000. In spite of this ominous fact one can state with a fair amount of certainty that the present outbreak is unlikely to prove as disastrous for India as a whole as were the epidemics of 1903-04, 1904-05, 1906-07, or even 1910-11.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

EDUCATION.

Simla, the 11th February 1918.

RESOLUTION THAT THE TWO SCHOLARSHIPS TO BE AWARDED IN 1920 BE PLACED AT THE DISPOSAL OF THE PUNJAB AND PATNA UNIVERSITIES.

RESOLUTION.

The claims of the University established under the Patna University Act 1917, (Act XVI of 1917), to participate in the benefits of the six scholarships established under the Government of India (Home Department) Resolution no. $\frac{1}{45-57}$, dated the 12th February 1886, have recently been urged on the consideration of the Government of India and they have decided that, in supersession of the arrangement laid down in their Educational Resolution no. 399, dated the 1st May 1916, the two scholarships to be awarded in the year 1920 shall be placed at the disposal of the Punjab and Patna Universities.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Governments of Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, the Punjab and Bihar and Orissa for information and communication to the authorities of the Universities concerned.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to the Governments of Bengal and Burma and the Chief Commissioners of the Central Provinces, Assam, North-West Frontier Province, Coorg and Delhi for information and to the Registrar, Calcutta University (through His Excellency the Rector) for information and guidance.

Ordered further, that a copy be forwarded to the Finance and Foreign and Political Departments for information and that the Resolution be published in the supplement of the Gazette of India.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques: any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

OFFICE OF THE TEA COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA.

NOTIFICATION.

Government Purchase of Tea for the United Kingdom.

SOUTHERN INDIA.

No. 3364 T. C.—Tenders are invited by the undersigned from Southern India Tea Companies and Tea Estates controlled in India (i.e., concerns the directors or proprietors of which are resident in India) for the supply of black tea for the United Kingdom up to the 31st May 1918. The total quantity required, including War Office requirements from the 1st January to the 31st May 1918, is approximately 40 per cent. of the total crop of 1917. Each estate may, therefore, tender any quantity up to 40 per cent. of its production in 1917. In the case of Southern India, however, where many new estates or extensions are coming into bearing, the total quantity to be taken will be equivalent to 40 per cent. of the 1917 crop, which is estimated to be equal to about 33 per cent. of the probable 1918 crop. Southern India concerns may, therefore, tender a quantity equivalent either to 40 per cent. of their 1917 crop or to 33 per cent. of their estimated 1918 crop, the actual tea supplied in either case being of either the 1917 or the 1918 crop or of both estimates of 1818 production will be passed by the Advisory Committee. If an estate can supply more than the above quantity the fact should be stated in the tender. The percentage taken will include all tea shipped to England from Indian or Ceylon ports on private account on and after the 1st November 1917, which will be taken over by the Food Controller at the contract rates. It will also include all tea subsequently consigned to the Food Controller under interim arrangements pending the conclusion of contracts with estates. Only black tea will be taken. The percentage will apply to all grades of black tea produced, including clean dust, estates being required to supply 40 per cent. of the total production of each grade in 1917, each invoice containing, as far as possible, the usual proportions of each grade. In the event of any estate being unable to supply the full required proportion of every grade manufactured, this fact should be stated in the tender, and any adjustment in price necessary will be made before the contract is concluded. Southern India estates tendering 1918 teas, manufactured within the period of this contract, would be required when manufacturing such teas not to alter previous methods of plucking but to maintain the previous proportion of each grade and to mill all large leaf teas. All teas tendered will be liable to examination by experts in India, and, if the quality is not up to the previous standard of manufacture of the estate, to rejection or acceptance at a lower cost, such reduction being arranged by the undersigned in respect of concerns controlled in India and by the Food Controller in respect of concerns controlled in England. Garden weights will be accepted by the undersigned, but the teas will be weighed on arrival in England by the Customs and any adjustment in payment necessary will be made by the Food Controller through the Tea Commissioner. All teas will, also, be inspected in England and claims made by the Food Controller for damage in transit or defective packing. The usual system of packing, including the quality of the tea boxes and tea lead, must be maintained and boxes must be in sound condition before acceptance for shipment.

The contract price, which will be f. o. b. at the port of shipment, will be calculated as follows :—

I.—Estates selling on the London market.—The average London auction price realised in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913 less ·90 of a penny for intermediate charges and cess and plus one halfpenny for increased cost of production at rate of exchange 1*s*. 4*d*.

II.—Estates selling on the Calcutta or Colombo market.—The average Calcutta or Colombo auction price realised in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913, plus one halfpenny or half an anna for increased cost of production and plus cost of shipping (i.e., cost of shipping at Calcutta or South Indian ports), and minus sale charges, and other Calcutta or Colombo charges. In order to obviate the labour of making detailed calculations in the case of each concern, the undersigned has decided that as regards tea sold in Calcutta and Colombo a net deduction of ·08 of an anna per lb. may be made to cover the difference between the cost of shipping and sale charges.

III.—Estates selling partly on the London and partly on the Calcutta or Colombo market.—The average sale price realised in both markets in the years 1911, 1912 and 1913 with the additions and deductions specified in I and II above.

IV.—E[illegible]s selling their teas on markets other than the London and Calcutta or Colombo markets, and partly on outside markets and partly in London or Calcutta and Colombo and estates with no pre-war sales.—The prices paid f[illegible] similar teas.

The average for the three years should be calculated by dividing the total sale-proceeds by the total crop for the three years, the result being worked out to two places of decimals of a penny or an anna, as the case may be. Where a concern consists of two or more estates each manufacturing its own teas, separate figures should be furnished for each estate. The figures submitted should, if possible, be certified as correct by a Chartered Accountant. In the case of concerns, the accounts of which are not audited by a Chartered Accountant, the figures of total crop sold and total sale-proceeds should, if possible, be certified by the Broker who sold the teas or by the Advisory Committee.

Teas will be paid for in India. Tea cess and (in the case of all tea except that consigned to the War Office which is exempted from the payment of export duty) export duty will be paid by the Food Controller and should be included in the bills of cost. The delivery of the amount contracted for will be taken in equal monthly instalments so far as freight arrangements permit, but, in any event, delivery in warehouse of the whole quantity will be taken and payment made on or before the 31st August 1918, payments made in August bearing interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the 1st August. Producers will be responsible for warehouse charges and insurance for one month after the date specified by the undersigned for the arrival of the tea at the warehouse, the undersigned paying warehouse charges after that period but not insurance charges, as no insurance will be effected on Government teas.

In order to enable the undersigned to conclude the contracts with estates, the following information in respect of each estate controlled in India should be furnished to him without delay, on a form which will be supplied on application to the Collector of Customs, Madras:—

(a) Area under tea in acres—

Actual 1917, Estimated 1918.

Mature tea.

Immature tea.

(b) Total manufactured crop—
Actual 1917, Estimated 1918.

(c) Percentage of each grade of tea manufactured in 1917.

(d) Total crop sold and market in which sold—
1911-1912-1913 separately.

(f) Gross average sale-proceeds 1911-1912-1913.
(i.e., total gross sale-proceeds for the three years divided by the crop for those years).

(g) Extra allowances and deductions to be made per lb. as explained above.

(h) Average price claimed in sterling or rupees, as the case may be.

(i) Quantity already shipped on and after 1st November 1917.

(a) On private account.

(b) Consigned to Food Controller.

(j) Port from which it is desired to ship the teas (i.e., Madras, Tuticorin, Cochin or Calicut).

(k) Name of agent to whom shipping orders should be sent.

Contracts for companies and estates controlled in England will be made in England by Food Controller.

* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice.

NOTE.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to Local Governments and Administrations, etc. They relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each province on the last (or nearest mart) day of each fortnight.

(The figures state prices in rupees per ten maunds)

NOTE.—The Indian price quotations are market, and not F. O. B., prices. The source of these quotations is the Prices Current published weekly by the Chambers of Commerce. The statistics for London are compiled from Reuter's telegrams.

* The reduced prices were fixed by the Royal Commission to millers commencing 17th September, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

Joint Stock Companies.

DECEMBER, 1917.

This month has seen considerable accretions to capital investments. There were 21 companies registered in December 1917, with an authorised capital of 13,62 lakhs, Bombay alone accounting for about R13,18 lakhs. For the nine months, April to December 1917, there were 183 companies registered, as against 121 in the corresponding period of the previous year. The authorised capital shows a great leap upwards. The authorised capital of these 183 companies was R22,33 lakhs as against R10,65 lakhs for 121 companies floated in the same period of 1916. The largest flotation in December was that of the Tata Industrial Bank, Bombay (R12,00 lakhs), followed by the Tata Oil Mills Co., Bombay (R100 lakhs), and by the "Pioneer and Civil and Military Gazette" registered at Allahabad as a private company with an authorised capital of R15 lakhs. The total figure of capital of the companies registered during this month is a record since January 1914, when many companies were registered under the old Act as the new Act came into force on 1st April 1914.

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 6 OF 1917-18.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE COTTON SEASON 1917-18.

In the Cotton Forecast published on the 18th December, 1917, the yield of the crop is estimated at 3,938,000 bales on an area of 23,768,000 acres, as compared with 4,628,000 * bales on an area of 21,212,000 acres, the final figures of last year. There is a decrease of 15 per cent in outturn. As stated in the previous issue of the return, cotton is coming in much slower than last year. There were 166,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 95,000 bales received in the spinning mills, from 1st September to 30th November, 1917, as against 368,000 bales and 97,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year a decrease of 55 per cent and 2 per cent, respectively. The figures for the Native States of Hyderabad, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, incomplete and have been excluded from this comparison.

* This figure represents the sum of net exports and consumption. Net exports abroad from September 1916 to August 1917 were 2,083,000 bales, mill consumption 1,795,000 bales, and the estimated extra-factory consumption 750,000 bales as accepted by the Bombay Cotton Trade Association.

PUBLIC DEBT.

Delhi, the 19th February 1918.

No. 80-A.—In pursuance of Rule 22 of the Rules made by the Government of India under section 14 of the Indian Securities Act, XIII of 1886, and published in the Gazette of India of the 7th January 1888, page 6, the following list is hereby advertised of Securities lost or destroyed, in respect of which an order has been made for payment of interest pending the issue of a duplicate Security, or for the issue of such duplicate Security. All persons, other than the respective claimants named below, who have any claim upon these Securities should communicate immediately with the Controller of Currency, the Treasury, Calcutta.

The list is divided into two parts,—Part A being the list of Securities now advertised for the first time, and Part B the list of Securities previously advertised.

N.B.—Under section 13 of the said Act, Government will be discharged from all liability in respect of these original Securities after the lapse of six years from (a) the several dates stated against them in the last column of the list, or (b) the last payment of interest on them, whichever date is the later.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 20th February, 1918 :—

No. 2 OF 1918.

A Bill to provide for the levy of a cess on indigo exported from British India.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide funds for the promotion of research in the interests of the indigo industry in India;

And whereas for this purpose it is expedient to levy a cess on indigo produced in India and exported from British India; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indigo Cess Act, 191 ; and

(2) It shall come into force on the first day of April, 191 .

Imposition of duty on exports of indigo and preparations thereof.

2. (1) There shall be levied and collected on all indigo produced in India and exported from any customs-port to any port beyond the limits of British India or to Aden a cess at the rate of [illegible] per maund of 82[illegible] pounds avoirdupois.

Provided that, where any preparation of indigo mixed with [illegible] other substance for use as a dye [illegible] so exported, the cess shall be levied on such proportion of the total weight of such preparation as the Governor General in Council may determine by rule under this Act.

(2) In this section the expression "customs-port" has the same meaning as in the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and the cess levied shall be deemed to be a customs-duty for the purposes of section 5 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1894.

VIII of 1878.

VIII of 1894.

Application of proceeds of cess.

3. The proceeds of the cess collected under this Act shall be applied to meet the cost of such measures as the Governor General in Council may consider it advisable to take for promoting research in the interests of the indigo industry in India.

Power to make rules.

4. The Governor General in Council may make rules consistent with this Act—

(a) for regulating the method of assessing, levying and collecting the cess;

(b) for prescribing the particular purposes to which the cess may be applied; and (c) generally for carrying out the purposes of this Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE reduction in the supply of synthetic dyes caused by the war has led to a temporary revival of the natural indigo industry and the Government have given careful consideration to the question whether this important industry can be re-established on a permanent footing. Considerable sums have been expended in the past both by Government and by the Bihar Planters' Association on scientific investigation into the methods of cultivation and manufacture of indigo, but many problems, involving considerable expenditure still remain to be solved. It is thought reasonable that the industry should contribute towards the cost of investigating these problems, and, as cultivation is diffused over several provinces, the imposition of an export duty appears to be the most suitable method of levying such a contribution. In the draft Bill it is accordingly proposed to levy a cess on all indigo exported from British India. As there is no body or association representing the industry as a whole to which the expenditure of the cess could be entrusted, it is proposed that the proceeds should be received and expended by Government.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 20th February, 1918:—

No. 3 of 1918.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Coinage Act, 1906.

III of 1906.

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Indian Coinage Act, 1906; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Coinage (Amendment) Act, 1918.

(2) It shall come into force on such date as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct.

III of 1906.

Amendment of section 4 of Act III of 1906.

2. In section 4 of the Indian Coinage Act, 1906 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), the words "and (d) an eighth of a rupee, or two-anna piece" shall be omitted.

Amendment of section 5 of Act III of 1906.

3. In sub-section (2) of section 5 of the said Act, for the third and fourth items in the table annexed to the proviso, the following shall be substituted, namely:—

" Quarter-rupee.	Seven-thousandths.	Three-thousandths."

Substitution of new section for section 6 of Act III of 1906.

4. For section 6 of the said Act the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

Nickel coins.

"6. The following nickel coins only shall be coined at the Mint for issue under the authority of the Governor General in Council, namely:—a two-anna piece and a one-anna piece."

Amendment of section 7 of Act III of 1906.

5. In section 7 of the said Act for the words "one-anna piece shall be sixty grains Troy," the words "two-anna and one-anna pieces shall be ninety and sixty grains Troy, respectively," shall be substituted.

Amendment of section 12 of Act III of 1906.

6. In sub-section (2) of section 12 of the said Act the words "and eighth of a rupee" shall be omitted.

Substitution of new section for section 13 of Act III of 1906.

7. For section 13 of the said Act the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

Nickel coin when a legal tender.

"13. The two-anna and one-anna nickel coins specified in section 6 shall be a legal tender in payment or on account for any sum not exceeding one rupee at the rate of eight and sixteen for a rupee, respectively."

Saving of the provisions of Act III of 1906 in respect of silver two-anna pieces.

8. Nothing in this Act shall apply to silver two-anna pieces which may have been issued prior to the commencement of this Act, and the provisions of the said Act shall apply to them as if this Act had not been passed.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

This Bill provides, by an amendment to the Indian Coinage Act, 1906 (III of 1906), for the replacement of the silver two-anna piece by a nickel coin of the same denomination. The further issue of silver two-anna pieces will accordingly be discontinued as soon as the provisions of the Bill have been brought into force by a notification of the Governor-General in Council under clause 1 (2), and nickel two-anna coins will be issued in their stead. The silver two-anna coins issued previously to the commencement of the Bill will, however, continue to be legal tender as at present for payments up to one rupee.

Season and Crop Prospects for week ending Saturday, 16th February 1918.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice have been completed in most districts. Plucking of tobacco is progressing. Cultivation of spring crops and harvesting of beans, maize and other winter crops continue. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon is stationary at Rs. 87 per hundred baskets but is below normal. The market for white rice is weak at Rs. 227-8 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Harvesting of mustard and cotton is nearly finished. Pruning of tea, pressing of sugarcane, transplanting of spring rice and ploughing for autumn and winter rice and jute continue. Prospects and outturn of crops are generally fair. Price of common rice is practically stationary.

Bengal.—The week was practically rainless. Rain is needed for the growth of spring crops and for preparatory tillage for the next season's autumn crops. Harvesting of sugarcane and early spring crops is proceeding. The average price of common rice for the province has fallen by about 0·3 per cent. as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—The week was rainless. Threshing of paddy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Oilseeds and pulses are being harvested. Standing spring crops are generally doing well but rain is needed in several districts to improve prospects. The price of common rice has risen in three districts, fallen in two and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from twelve districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—No rain fell during the week. It is generally needed. Irrigation of spring crops and poppy, pressing of sugarcane and preparation of land for sugarcane and sowing of extra crops continue. Standing crops are doing well. Agricultural stock is in good condition but slight cattle disease is reported. Fodder is scarce or dear in 8 districts. Prices are practically stationary with a tendency to rise.

Punjab.—The weather was practically dry. Rain is urgently wanted everywhere for unirrigated spring crops which are suffering from drought in many districts. Pressing of sugarcane continues in some districts. The yield is normal to good. Condition of standing irrigated wheat and other crops is average to good and that of unirrigated crops is below average to average. Toria is being harvested in parts of the west, the yield being normal. Stocks of food grains are generally sufficient. Cattle are healthy but fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices are stationary and range generally between warning and scarcity rates except in some south-eastern districts where they range between normal and warning rates. Prices of wheat :—Rawalpindi 7¼, Ambala and Lahore 7¾, Lyallpur 8¼ and Ferozepore 8¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Slight rain fell during the week in two districts. More rain is urgently needed throughout the province. Prospects of spring crops are average. Sugarcane is being pressed and gur made The outturn is average. Wheat—Peshawar 7½ and Dera Ismail Khan 9$\frac{1}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—The week was generally rainless. Prices are rising. Spring sowings are in progress. The weather was cloudy.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet and cool. Cattle are generally healthy. Standing crops are in fair condition. Prices are normal.

Rajputana.—The weather was cool. Spring crops are being irrigated. Prospects of spring crops and agricultural stock are good. Prices are rising.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was nil. Winter rains are needed in Gwalior. Spring crops are being irrigated. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally good. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been clear and cool but days are warm. Condition of spring crops except wheat is generally good. Wheat has deteriorated for want of rain particularly in the Nerbudda Division. Harvesting of minor crops has begun in places. Prices show a slight downward tendency.

Feudatory States. Spring crops are faring well.

Bombay.—Standing crops are good except in Larkana and Thar and Parkar where they have been slightly damaged by frost and rats respectively. Spring harvesting continues in parts of Sind, Deccan and Carnatic. Cotton picking continues in Thar and Parkar, West Khandesh, Dharwar, Kathiawar, Cutch and Rewa Kantha. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—No rain fell during the week. Spring harvest has commenced. Crop especially juar suffered from blight or excessive rain. Outturn is estimated at 8 to 16 annas except in parts of Nander, Gulbarga, Bidar, Mahbubnagar, Nizamabad and Warangal where it is below 8 annas. Late rice is fair and is being weeded. Cattle are healthy. Coarse wheat sells at 5¼ to 6¾ seers per rupee in districts but juar sells at 4 to 5 seers only in Parbhani and Hingoli.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are good. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding. Outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally stationary.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice continue. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are fair to good generally. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. Condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are steady.

The plague deaths reported during the week ending February 9 were 1,144 in excess of the previous week's total. The United Provinces again comes first with 9,373 deaths, a decrease of 1,289; Bombay reports 8,086 deaths, an increase of 767, and Rajputana 5,500, an increase of 1,091. The relatively mild nature of the outbreak in the western districts of the United Provinces and in the Punjab is the most satisfactory feature of the last few plague returns; atmospheric humidity appreciably lower than normal in United Provinces West, during the months of December and January, has been most beneficial in retarding the spread of the disease. Should this state of affairs continue, the height of the present outbreak will be reached at a considerably earlier date than usual with a correspondingly earlier and more rapid decline in plague mortality.

All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) should be addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India applications should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

4. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

5. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

6. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

A Catalogue of maps corrected up to 1st January 1915 is available at Re. 1 per copy, together with a list of maps published during 1915.

All published maps are sold at the Map Record and Issue Office, Survey of India, Calcutta, for cash with postage prepaid.

Agents cannot issue maps on the Public Service except on cash payment.

The following is a list of the more important "General" and other maps which are available for the quarter ending 31st December 1917.

EXPLANATION.

All Maps from Surveys after 1905 called "Modern" are printed in 4 or 5 colours, i e., water forms in blue, towns and roads in red, forests and jungle in green, cultivation in yellow, hill contours in brown with shading to emphasize the hills, and other details in black.

All Maps from Surveys prior to 1905 are printed in black only or in black with hills in brown.

All Maps on scales 1" = 4 miles, $\frac{1}{1,000,000}$ or nearly 1" = 16 miles and $\frac{1}{2,000,000}$ or nearly 1" = 32 miles are printed in either one or two of the following editions, except those marked "Provisional Issue" which are from old surveys:—

(1) Layered edition, printed in colours with contours and graduated layer tints to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills. (Colour ribands along boundaries cannot be added to this edition.)

(2) Political edition, printed in colours with colour ribands along boundaries, contours to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills.

(3) Provisional issue, generally printed in black or in black with hills in brown. Colour ribands along boundaries are added by hand when required at an extra cost of 2 annas per sheet.

No. 1291 C. & I.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by Section 59 of the Punjab Excise Act, I of 1914, as applied to the Delhi Province, the Chief Commissioner is pleased to make the following amendments, with effect from the 1st April 1918, to the special conditions on the forms of licenses for the wholesale and retail vend of country spirit, prescribed by Notification No. 1315, dated the 25th February 1915, as subsequently amended :—

(1) Form No. L-13, condition 2, and form No. L-14, condition 1 (except the first sentence). Substitute :—

"The licensee shall obtain his supplies either from the Rosa distillery at Shahjahanpur in the United Provinces, or from any licensed distillery in the Punjab, or from a person licensed to sell country spirit by wholesale in any district in the Punjab or the Delhi Province, but not from any other source, provided that, if he obtains his spirit from any place beyond the limits of the Delhi Province, he shall not break bulk till the consignment has reached the Delhi Province and been compared by an excise officer with the pass which covers it."

(2) Form L-13, condition 6. Substitute :—

"The licensee shall sell spirit only to a person holding a license in form L-13, or form L-14 (license for retail bazar vend of country spirit), in any district in the Punjab or the Delhi Province."

No.1294-C. & I.—In exercise of the powers conferred on him by Section 58 (2) (d) of the Punjab Excise Act, I of 1914, as applied to the Delhi Province, the Chief Commissioner is pleased to amend, with effect from the 1st April 1918, rules 5 and 6 of the rules regulating the import, export and transport of liquor, issued in his Notification No. 7296-C. & I., dated 11th November 1915, as amended subsequently :—

"5. Country spirit may be imported from any distillery in the Punjab, or from the Rosa distillery in the Shahjahanpur district of the United Provinces, or from a wholesale licensed vendor in the [illegible]njab, but not from elsewhere.

6. Coun[illegible]irit, upon which duty has been paid, may be exported to any province or Nativ[illegible]dia."

No. 1327-C. & I.—In exercise of the powers conferred by sections 5 and 13 of the Opium Act, 1878 (I of 1878). and with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, the Chief Commissioner is pleased to make the following rules to regulate the manufacture, possession, import, export, transport and sale of morphia drugs in the Delhi Province, and to direct that they shall have effect from the 1st of April 1918 :—

1. These rules may be cited as the Delhi Morphia Rules, 1918.

2. In these rules, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "The Act" means the Opium Act, 1878.

(b) "Approved practitioner" means—

(i) any person registered as a medical practitioner under the Medical Act, 1858, and any Act of Parliament amending the same, or under any law for the registration of medical practitioners for the time being in force in any part of British India, or

(ii) any person registered as a dentist under the Dentist's Act, 1878, and any Act of Parliament amending the same, or

(iii) any person possessed of qualifications which render him eligible for registration as a medical practitioner or dentist, as the case may be, under the Medical Act, 1858, the Dentist's Act, 1878, and any Act of Parliament amending the same Acts, or under any law for the registration of medical practitioners or dentists for the time being in force in any part of British India, and approved by the Collector for the purpose of these rules, or of corresponding rules for the time being in force in any part of British India.

(iv) Any other person engaged in medical or veterinary practice and approved by the Chief Commissioner for the purpose of these rules or of corresponding rules for the time being in force in any part of British India.

(c) * * * *

(d) "Collector" means the Collector of Delhi for the time being, and includes any officer specially authorised by the Local Government to exercise throughout the province or in any specified area therein all or any of the powers of a Collector under these rules.

(e) "Licensed dealer" means a person who has obtained a license under these rules for the manufacture, possession and sale otherwise than on prescription of morphia drugs.

(f) "Licensed chemist" means a person who has obtained a license under these rules for the manufacture, possession and sale on prescription of morphia drugs.

(g) "Local Government" means the Chief Commissioner, Delhi.

(h) "Morphia drugs" includes all alkaloids of opium and their salts, and preparations containing any of these articles.

(i) "Prescription" means a prescription given by an approved practitioner for the supply of morphia drugs to a patient.

(j) "Province" means the territories for the time being administered by the Chief Commissioner, Delhi.

II.—Manufacture.

3. A licensed dealer or chemist may, subject to the conditions of his license, manufacture morphia drugs from opium or morphia drugs lawfully possessed by him.

4. A licensed chemist may, subject to the provisions of rule 20, dispense morphia drugs on prescription.

III.—Possession.

5. Any person may possess such quantity of morphia drugs as has been at one time dispensed and sold for his use in accordance with the provisions of rules 4 and 20, or of corresponding rules for the time being in force in any part of British India.

6. An approved practitioner may possess, for his use in his practice but not for sale, morphia drugs not exceeding in the aggregate 120 grains.

Provided that the Collector may, by special order, authorise any such practitioner to possess as aforesaid any larger quantity.

7. A person authorised in this behalf by the Collector by an order made [illegible]der rule 22 may possess such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be [illegible]ed in such order.

8. A licensed dealer or licensed chemist may possess such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in his license.

9. A person to whom a pass has been granted under these rules for the import, export or transport of morphia drugs may possess such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in his pass.

IV.—Import, export and transport.

10. Any person may import, export and transport such morphia drugs as he may lawfully possess under rule 5.

11. An approved practitioner may import, export and transport such morphia drugs as he may lawfully possess under rule 6.

12. A person authorised in this behalf by the Collector by an order made under rule 22 may import such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in such order, on an indent countersigned by a Chief Medical Officer or Civil Surgeon or Superintendent of the Civil Veterinary Department.

13. A person to whom a pass has been granted under these rules for the import of morphia drugs may import such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in his pass.

14. When a pass has been granted (a) under the rules for the time being in force in any part of British India outside the province, or (b) by the Resident or Political Agent in any Native State or Foreign Territory to bring morphia drugs from the province into such part, State or Territory and when such pass has been countersigned by the Collector in accordance with these rules, a licensed dealer may, subject to the conditions of his license, export such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner within such period and by such route as may be specified in such pass.

An indent for morphia drugs countersigned by a Chief Medical Officer or Civil Surgeon or Superintondent of the Civil Veterinary Department shall for the purposes of this rule be deemed to be a pass, and shall not require further countersignature.

15. A person authorised in this behalf by the Chief Commissioner by a special order made under rule 23 may export such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in such order.

16. A person to whom a pass has been granted under these rules for the transport of morphia drugs may transport such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in his pass.

17. Every person importing, exporting or transporting morphia shall comply with such general or special directions as may be given by the Chief Commissioner.

18. Nothing in these rules shall be deemed to permit—

(1) the import of morphia drugs—

(a) from any part of British India outside the province, unless the rules for the time being in force in such part relating to the export of morphia drugs have been complied with,

(b) from any foreign territory, unless the duty leviable at the place of importation under the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, or any other enactment for the time being in force, has been paid and the pass has been endorsed by the Customs Collector;

(2) the import, export or transport of morphia drugs by post.

V.—Sale.

19. A licensed dealer may, subject to the conditions of his license, sell, otherwise than on prescription,

(a) to a dealer or chemist licensed under these rules or under the rules for the time being in force in any part of British India outside the province,

(b) to an approved practitioner,

(c) to a person authorised under rule 22 of these rules or under any corresponding rule for the time being in force as aforesaid, morphia drugs not exceeding the quantity which such dealer, chemist, practitioner or person may lawfully possess. He shall maintain a written record of every such sale in such manner as the Chief Commissioner may direct.

20. A licensed chemist may sell morphia drugs on prescription, subject to the following conditions, namely :—

(a) He shall sell morphia drugs in such quantity and for the use of such person only as may be specified in the prescription.

(b) If the prescription does not bear a superscription by an approved practitioner stating that it is to be repeated, and at what interval of time it is to be repeated, and how many times it is to be repeated, he shall sell morphia drugs [illegible] only on such prescription, and shall retain the prescription ; provided [illegible] he shall first warn the person presenting the prescription that unless it bears such a superscription as aforesaid it will be retained.

(c) If the prescription bears a superscription as aforesaid, he shall enter on the prescription the date of sale and shall sign or seal the prescription ; provided that if it appears that morphia drugs have already been sold on the prescription six times or such number of times as the prescription is required to be repeated, or that the interval specified in the superscription has not elapsed since the prescription was last dispensed, he shall not sell morphia drugs on such prescription unless it is further superscribed in that behalf by an approved practitioner.

(d) Any other conditions that may be contained in his license.

He shall maintain a written record of every such sale in such manner as the Chief Commissioner may direct.

VI.—Approval, authorisation, licenses and passes.

21. (1) The Chief Commissioner may approve, for the purposes of rule 2(b) (iv) of these rules, any person engaged in medical or veterinary practice.

(2) The Collector may in like manner approve any person possessed of the qualifications specified in rule 2 (b) (iii).

22. The Collector may, with the sanction of the Chief Commissioner, by general or special order authorise any approved practitioner in managing or supervising charge of a hospital or dispensary to possess, import and transport such quantity of morphia drugs in such manner as may be specified in such order.

23. The Chief Commissioner may by special order authorise any person to export morphia drugs.

24. (1) The Collector may grant to any person a dealer's license permitting him to manufacture, possess and, subject to the provisions of rule 19, to sell morphia drugs.

(2) The Collector may grant to any person a chemist's license, permitting him to manufacture, possess and, subject to the provisions of rule 20, to sell morphia drugs ; provided that such license shall not authorise such chemist to possess a greater quantity than four ounces of morphia drugs.

25. The Collector or such other officer as the local Government may empower in this behalf, may grant to any licensed dealer or licensed chemist a pass for the import of morphia drugs not exceeding the quantity which such dealer or chemist may lawfully possess.

26. (1) When a pass has been granted (a) under the rules for the time being in force in any part of British India outside the province, or (b) by the Resident or Political Agent in any Native State or Foreign Territory to any person to bring morphia drugs from the province into such part, State or Territory, such person shall present such pass to the Collector, who shall enter therein the period for which the pass is to remain in force and the route by which and the person (if any) in whose charge the consignment is to be conveyed and the number and description of the packages, and shall countersign the pass.

(2) When a pass has been granted to any person under these rules for the import of morphia drugs from foreign territories, such person shall present such pass to the Customs Collector at the place of import, who shall enter therein the particulars specified in sub-rule (1) and shall countersign the pass.

27. The Collector or such other officer as the local Government may empower in this behalf may grant to any licensed dealer or licensed chemist a pass for the transport of morphia drugs not exceeding the quantity which such dealer or chemist may lawfully possess.

28. Subject to the provisions of the Act and of these rules, every license or pass under these rules shall be in such form and shall contain such particulars, and shall be granted by such officer, on payment of such fees, for such period, and subject to such conditions, as the Chief Commissioner may direct.

29. (1) Subject to any directions that the Chief Commissioner may give in this behalf, the officer who has granted a license to, or has by order approved or authorised any person under these rules may cancel or suspend such license or order,

(i) if such person has,

(a) failed to pay any duty or fee payable by him,

(b) by himself or by any servant or person acting on his behalf, committed any breach of the conditions of such license or order or of these rules,

(c) been convicted of any offence under the Act, or under the law for the time being in force relating to excise revenue, or of any criminal offence,

(ii) if it is a condition of such license or order that it may be cancelled or suspended at the will of such officer,

(iii) in any other case, after giving to such person fifteen days' notice, and shall cancel such license or order within fifteen days on receiving from such person notice that he desires to surrender the same.

(2) When such license or order has been cancelled or suspended as afor[illegible], such person shall forthwith make over to the Collector all morphia drugs in his possessi[illegible]

VII.—Disposal of morphia drugs and confiscated articles.

30. The Collector shall cause all morphia drugs confiscated under the Act or delivered to him under rule 29 to be examined by the Chemical Examiner or by such other officer as the Chief Commissioner may direct. If any such morphia drugs are certified by such officer to be fit for use the Collector may sell them to any dealer or chemist licensed under these rules or under any rules for the time being in force in any part of British India or to any person authorised by an order under rule 22 or any corresponding rules in force as aforesaid. The Collector may require any licensed dealer or chemist to purchase at such price as the Collector may direct any quantity of such morphia drugs not exceeding such quantity as the Collector may determine to be ordinarily saleable by him in two months. If any such morphia drugs are certified as aforesaid to be unfit for use, the Collector shall cause them to be destroyed.

31. The Collector shall dispose of all other things confiscated in connection with any offence relating to morphia drugs in such manner as he may think fit.

VIII.—Issue of subsidiary orders.

32. Subject to the provisions of the Act and of these rules, the Chief Commissioner may, from time to time, give such directions as he may think fit for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the rules.

IX.—Powers and duties of officers, appeals and revisions, and rewards.

33. The provisions contained in the rules relating to opium issued by the Local Government under sections 5 and 13 of the Act, shall, in so far as they refer to the powers and duties of officers, appeals and revisions and rewards, apply to the case of morphia drugs also.

X.—Exemptions.

34. The preparations specified in the annexed schedule may be transported, imported, exported, possessed and sold without restriction, provided that their import by sea shall be permitted only by means other than that of the post.

Chief Commissioner's Notification No. 1014 C. & I, dated the 7th February 1917, is hereby cancelled.

THE HON'BLE THE AGENT TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL IN CENTRAL INDIA.

NOTIFICATION.

Central India Agency, Indore, the 14th February 1918

No. 243-B.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 98 of the Regulation for the better administration of the Indore Residency Bazars, the Agent to the Governor General in Central India is pleased to prescribe the following rules :—

1. The following shall be the standard weights to be used in the Indore Residency Bazars, viz :—

15 Grains troy	=1 Masha
12 Mashas	=1 Tola
5 Tolas	=1 Chatak
16 Chataks	=1 Ser
40 Sers	=1 Maund

together with the following fractions and multiples thereof, namely, a half-chatak and two-chataks, a quarter-ser and a half-ser, a quarter-maund and a half-maund, and multiples of one maund.

2. The use or the possession, in circumstances showing that they are intended to be used, of weights other than standard weights by any trader, shopkeeper or weighman in the Indore Residency Bazars shall be an offence punishable on conviction by a Magistrate, with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

3. The Bazar Authority, or any person authorised by him in that behalf, may at all reasonable times enter into any market, shop, stall or public place used for weighments and inspect any weights in use or intended for use therein, and shall seize and produce before a Magistrate any which are not standard weights: and any Magistrate before whom any weights are produced shall, if he finds them not to be standard weights, destroy them or otherwise render them incapable of being used again and may confiscate them, in addition to imposing a fine for their use or possession.

4. These rules shall come into force on the 15th March 1918.

A. R. JELF,
First Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General in Central India.

A. Somerville, a clerk of his office, for the duration of the war.

2. The allowance will be drawn in addition to the pay or salary to which Mr. Somerville will be entitled from time to time for so long as he is attached to this office.

3. The extra expenditure involved during the current year will be met from savings in the allotment of this office under "25-A—Political—Political Agents—Establishment."

By order,

R. CHENEVIX TRENCH,

First Assistant.

ORDERS BY THE HON'BLE THE AGENT TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, RAJPUTANA.

NOTIFICATION.

Abu, the 14th February 1918.

No. 498—The following rules for regulating the supply in the district of Abu of paper of a standard pattern for judicial petitions and copies of judicial documents, the custody and sale of such paper, and the credit of the sale-proceeds to Government are published for general information :—

1. From the 1st April 1918, no other description of paper shall be used for copies of documents (whether in English or the vernacular) supplied to private parties by judicial officers, and from that date all petition-writers practising in the Courts of the district of Abu will be required to use this paper only.

2. In the case of copies supplied on payment of fees, the cost of the paper will be defrayed by the copyist ; in the case of copies supplied by Government free of cost, no charge will be made for the paper, but the paper used for such copies must be duly accounted for in the annual statement prescribed by rule V.

3. The District Magistrate, Abu, will carefully supervise the working of the arrangement in order to prevent vendors of the paper demanding more than the fixed price of three pies per sheet :—

I Paper required for judicial petitions and copies of judicial documents shall be obtained from the Stationery Depôt at Calcutta by Indents in the form prescribed for the supply of stationery. The indent shall provide for a supply of paper not less than the probable requirements of 12 months of the Courts situated in the district of Abu.

II. Expenses of carriage will be paid by the Indenting Officer out of the grant in the Budget Estimates of the Abu Leased area for judicial contingencies.

III. The rules which regulate the custody of stamps shall apply mutatis mutandis to the custody of the paper,

IV. The paper shall be sold to ex-officio and licensed vendors of stamps at Rs. 7-8-0 a ream for cash, for retail sale to the public at the uniform rate of 3 pies a sheet. Ordinarily not less than a quarter of a ream will be sold to an ex-officio or licensed vendor.

V. The receipts from the sale of the paper, calculated at Rs. 7-8-0 a ream, will be credited to Government under the head "Stamps," the commission of one anna in the rupee, which shall be allowed to licensed vendors, being debited to the same head. At the close of each financial year, a statement of the operations of the year shall be submitted by the Tahsildar of Abu to the District Magistrate, Abu, in the annexed form :—

Statement showing the receipt and consumption of petition paper during the year and the financial results of the year.

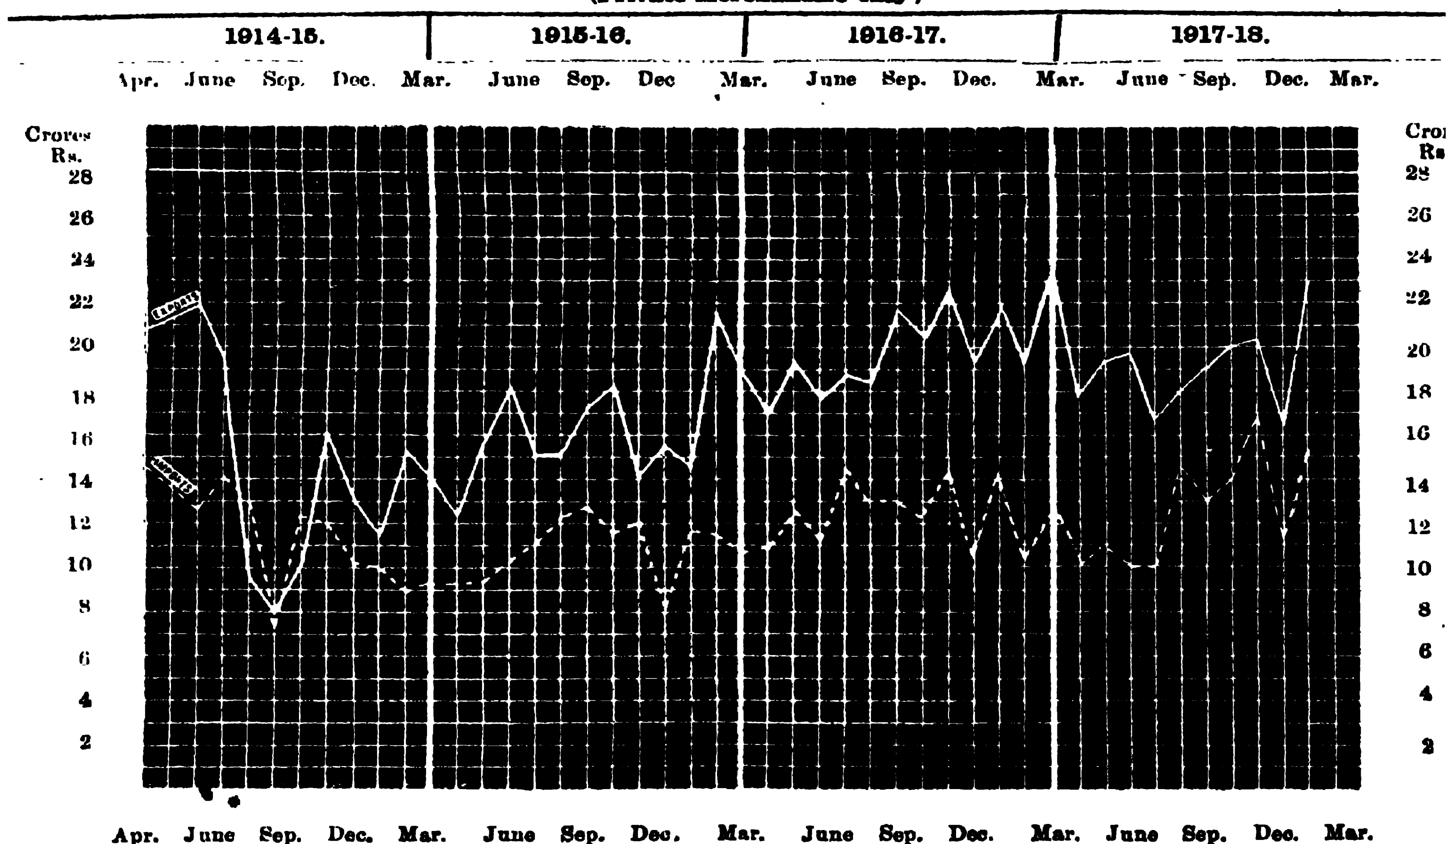
FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JANUARY, 1918.

REVIEW of the SEA-BORNE TRADE of BRITISH INDIA for the month of JANUARY, 1918, and for the ten months ended January, 1918.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.



FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING JANUARY, 1918.

The outstanding feature of the trade returns of British India for January, 1918, as compared with those of the preceding month, is that there was a considerable increase in total imports and exports. The total imports of merchandise were valued at over R15 crores as against over R11 crores in the preceding month, the value of the exports, including those of wheat, tanned cow hides, and other articles of national importance on Government account, at nearly R22 crores, as against R16 crores, and the re-ex ports at R1,06 lakhs as against R58 lakhs. Imports increased by 35 per cent, expor ts by 35 per cent, and re-exports by 84 per cent. As compared with January, 1917, the value of imports showed an increase of 8 per cent, of exports of 8 per cent, and re-exports of 46 per cent. A review of the ten months' trade of the present financial year will be found on page 292.

The chart showing the course of monthly imports and exports, including re-exports, from April, 1914, to January, 1918, is appended below :—

(Private Merchandise only)

The actual net excess of exports, including re-exports, over imports was R5,52 lakhs in December, 1917, and R 7,71 lakhs in January, 1918. The statement below shows the figures of imports and exports, including re-exports, during December and January of the years 1915-16, 1916-17, and 1917-18, and the actual net excess of exports over imports during the same periods :—

Trade by Provinces.

The total imports and exports, including re-exports, of private merchandise into and from the several maritime provinces during the month of January, 1918, as compared with those of December, 1917, are stated below :—

	Imports		Exports, including re-exports
	December, 1917	January, 1918	December, 1917	January, 1918

Burma	61	47	1,86	1,71
Total	11,34	15,31	16,86	23,02

Under imports, Bengal showed an increase of 28 per cent, Bombay of 50 per cent, and Madras of 153 per cent, while Burma showed a decrease of 23 per cent. Sind maintained last month's level. Under exports, Madras showed an increase of 106 per cent, Bombay of 64 per cent, Sind of 46 per cent, and Bengal of 19 per cent, while Burma showed a decrease of 8 per cent. These comparisons are with the preceding month (December, 1917).

Balance of Trade.

The following table takes into account the imports and exports of merchandise on private account only, as well as the value of wheat, tanned cow hides, and other articles of national importance exported on Government account :—

In the ten months ended January, 1918, the excess of exports over imports of private merchandise was R63,98 lakhs, as against R71,63 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1916-17, and R46,94 lakhs in 1915-16. As the publication of treasure figures has been temporarily discontinued, it is not possible to give here the net (private) exports from April to January, nor the net balance of trade in the same period. It may be of interest to note that the net (private) exports are considerably below those of 1916-17 and also below those of 1915-16. The balance of trade in the ten months is in favour of India, though not to so large an extent as in the corresponding period of 1915-16 and 1916-17.

The amount of Council Bills and Telegraphic Transfers paid in India in the ten months ended January, 1918, was R41,98 lakhs, of which over R2,14 lakhs were paid through the Gold Standard Reserve, R10,93 lakhs through the Paper Currency Reserve, and about R28,91 lakhs through the Treasuries. In the ten months ended January, 1917, the amount was approximately R37,52 lakhs, of which about R4,95 lakhs were paid through the Gold Standard Reserve, nearly R23,60 lakhs through the Paper Currency Reserve, and R8,97 lakhs through the Treasuries. In the ten months ended January, 1916, the amount of Council Bills paid was about R18,22 lakhs. As regards enfaced Rupee paper, about R12 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London, and about R31 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London, in the ten months, April to January, 1917-18, while in the corresponding period of 1916-17, over R44 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and nearly R76 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London.

Declared value per unit of selected Articles.

The declared values per unit of certain selected articles imported and exported during January, 1916, 1917, and 1918, are noted below :—

The customs duty figures are an index to the volume of the import trade only, since under exports jute, rice, and tea only are subject to duty. In the ten months ended January, 1918, the import duties increased to nearly R10,05 lakhs from about R8,23 lakhs in the ten months ended January, 1917, and the export duties rose to R2,58 lakhs from R1,95 lakhs. The grand total of gross Indian sea and land customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) in the ten months, April to January 1917-18, amounted to R13,59 lakhs, as compared with over R10,63 lakhs in the same period of last year.

Railway Statistics.

Railway statistics, like the import and export statistics above, are a valuable index to the general movement of trade throughout the country, and show that the earnings from 1st April to 2nd February, 1917-18, were R62,71 lakhs, as against R57,75 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1916-17, or an increase of R4,96 lakhs.

Trade of Aden during January, 1918.

The grand total value of the imports and exports of merchandise, by sea, into and from the port of Aden amounted to over R1,34 lakhs in the month of January, 1918. The value of the principal articles of imports and exports during January, 1918, was as follows:—

TARIFF VALUATION OF SUGAR.

The following statement shows in respect of each of the descriptions of sugar distinguished in the Tariff Schedule II (excepting molasses and all other kinds of sugar), first, the total imports into India in the month of January 1918, and the average value per cwt. as calculated on the returns received from the Customs Houses; and, secondly, a running total showing the total imports into India since the beginning of the year (1st October to 30th September) and the average net value per cwt. so far established. It is published in conformity with the procedure laid down in Customs Circular No. V of 1911, in order to enable merchants to compute the probable rate of duty for the year 1919:—

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN DECEMBER, 1917.

The object of the tables appended is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces, etc., and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi, and into the Madras ports during the month of December, 1917, and for the nine months, April to December, 1917, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1916. The statistics include foreign sea-borne and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and river-borne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, etc.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1916 AND 1917.

It will be seen from table I, that the imports by rail, river, and sea in December, 1917, as against the corresponding month of 1916, show (in round numbers) an increase of—

86 per cent in tea

(45,114,400 lbs. as against 24,275,600 lbs. last year),

68 per cent in gram and pulse

(92,000 tons as against 54,600 tons last year),

34 per cent in rice (including paddy)

(109,800 tons as against 81,800 tons last year), and

12 per cent in jute

(654,100 bales as against 583,300 bales last year).

The imports of raw cotton by rail, river, and sea into ports show a decrease of 47 per cent (273,700 bales as against 519,600 bales last year), due mainly to smaller exports from the Punjab and the Central Provinces and Berar. The decrease of 30 per cent (7,000 tons as against 10,000 tons last year) in the imports of rape and mustard seed is accounted for by smaller receipts mainly from the United Provinces. The imports of wheat (excluding wheat flour) represent a decrease of 24 per cent (63,500 tons as against 83,500 tons last year) owing to smaller exports mainly from the Punjab and the Central Provinces and Berar. The fall of 19 per cent (8,500 tons as against 10,500 tons last year) in the imports of linseed is due to decrease in exports mainly from Bengal, the Nizam's Territory, and the Central Provinces and Berar.

It will be seen from table IV (wheat, excluding wheat flour) that the principal sources of the imports in December, 1916, were the Punjab, the United Provinces, and the Central Provinces and Berar. During the corresponding month of 1917, the Punjab sent 20 per cent, the United Provinces 35 per cent, and the Central Provinces and Berar 16 per cent, of the total.

NOTE.—One bale of cotton or jute is equivalent to 400 lbs.
One maund is equivalent to 82⅔ lbs.
One maund of paddy is taken as equivalent to 25 seers of rice.

GENERAL RESULTS—NINE MONTHS' IMPORTS INTO THE PORTS FROM UP COUNTRY, ETC., THIS YEAR AND LAST YEAR.

The nine months' figures in table I show (in round numbers) an increase of—

87 per cent in gram and pulse
(633,500 tons as against 337,900 tons last year),

61 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(1,674,500 tons as against 1,041,700 tons last year),

11 per cent in raw cotton
(2,279,900 bales as against 2,049,500 bales last year), and

7 per cent in tea
(235,047,900 lbs. as against 219,314,000 lbs. last year).

The imports of linseed by rail, river, and sea into ports show a decrease of 61 per cent (123,100 tons as against 316,500 tons last year) mainly on account of smaller exports from Bihar and Orissa and the United Provinces. The decrease of 32 per cent (98,700 tons as against 146,100 tons last year) in the imports of rape and mustard seed is accounted for by smaller receipts chiefly from the United Provinces. The imports of jute into Calcutta show a decrease of 26 per cent (3,217,700 bales as against 4,333,400 bales last year), owing to smaller exports principally from Bengal. The fall of 3 per cent (755,200 tons as against 782,600 tons last year) in the imports of rice (including paddy) into ports is due to smaller shipments from Burma.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1917, AS COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS MONTH.

As compared with November, 1917, the imports in December, 1917, into the ports referred to above show (in round numbers) an increase of—

82 per cent in jute
(654,100 bales as against 360,000 bales previous month),

81 per cent in raw cotton
(273,700 bales as against 151,000 bales previous month),

45 per cent in linseed
(8,500 tons as against 5,900 tons previous month),

22 per cent in gram and pulse
(92,000 tons as against 75,300 tons previous month),

5 per cent in tea
(45,114,400 lbs. as against 42,937,600 lbs. previous month), and

1 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(109,800 tons as against 108,700 tons previous month),

and a decrease of—

34 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(63,500 tons as against 95,700 tons previous month), and

28 per cent in rape and mustard seed
(7,000 tons as against 9,700 tons previous month).

The statistics for December, 1916 and 1917, as also for the nine month ending December, 1916 and 1917, together with those for November and December, 1917, are summarised below :—

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 19, 1918.

Supplementary Memorandum on the WHEAT CROP of 1917-18 (for the period ending 15th February).

Since the publication of the First Wheat Forecast on January 29, 1918, revised estimates of area have been received from the Central Provinces and Berar, the North-West Frontier Province, Bengal, Delhi, and Ajmer-Merwara. Returns have also been received from two Native States in Rajputana and one State in Central India, for which provisional estimates were included in the First Forecast. The total revised area for All-India thus stands at 33,885,000 acres, as against 33,912,000 acres reported in the First Forecast.

The present condition of the standing crop is generally good, except in the unirrigated tracts * of the Punjab and of the North-West Frontier Province, in parts of Bihar and Orissa, and of Bengal. Rain is wanted in the wheat-growing areas. Damage by frost is reported from the Punjab and the Central Provinces and Berar and by rats in parts of Sind.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Punjab.—There has been no change in the estimate of area sown. Light rain fell in the third week of January in most districts and in the fourth week in the south-eastern parts. The weather is practically dry. The condition and prospects of the irrigated crop are good everywhere, and in the Canal Colonies are better than those of last year owing to a most ample water supply. The unirrigated crop in the central and western districts is, however, suffering from drought, and its condition is below average. Elsewhere, the condition of the unirrigated crop has hitherto been about average, but if no rain is received within a fortnight, the crop will be adversely affected everywhere by drought. Frost is doing considerable injury, which would be lessened if rain fell. There are indications that absence of cultivation in the last summer owing to heavy rains will somewhat diminish the outturn, especially in the sub-montane tracts. Rust is noticeable in certain districts.

United Provinces.—No change has been reported in the estimate of the area sown. Light rain was received in the western districts towards the end of January and was of some benefit to the unirrigated crop. On the whole, the condition of the crop is so far promising.

Central Provinces and Berar.—The area sown in the British districts is now estimated at 3,755,000 acres, which is 1 per cent below the estimate made in the First Forecast. The area in the Native States of Khairagarh and Nandgaon has been raised to 132,000 acres from 129,000 acres reported in the First Forecast. The combined area comes to 3,887,000 acres, as against 3,916,000 acres in the First Forecast. The weather has been clear and cool, and, although occasionally cloudy, there has been no rainfall. The present condition and prospects of the crop are generally fair to good, but rain is urgently required everywhere. Some damage has been caused in places by frost and the absence of winter showers.

Bombay and Sind.—No change has been reported in the estimate of area sown, but there is likely to be some expansion in Gujarat. The condition of the crop is good in the Presidency. In Sind damage by rats is reported in areas served by the Jamrao and Fuleli canals. In the middle and north Sind, the crop is generally doing well.

Bihar and Orissa.—No change has been reported in the estimate of area sown. Rain is badly wanted in most districts to improve prospects. The condition of the crop is reported to be fair.

North-West Frontier Province.—The area sown is now reported to be 1,214,000 acres, as against 1,182,000 acres in the First Forecast, or an increase of 3 per cent. The present condition of the standing crop is generally average, but rain is badly wanted throughout the province, especially in the unirrigated tracts in Bannu, where the crops are withering.

Bengal.—The area now estimated (124,000 acres is 1,000 acres more than that estimated in the First Forecast. The crop is generally suffering from want of rain, and, unless rain comes soon, the crop will be seriously affected.

Delhi.—The total area sown is now estimated at 60,000 acres, as against 55,000 acres reported in the First Forecast. The season has been favourable, and the condition of the standing crop is good. Rain is, however, badly wanted in parts.

Ajmer-Merwara.—The estimate of area sown is 17,000 acres, as against 16,000 acres in the First Forecast. The light rain of January was insufficient to benefit the crop. No damage is, however, reported.

G. FINDLAY SHIRRAS,
Director of Statistics.

* The unirrigated area under wheat is, on the average of the five years ending 1915-16, about 49 per cent. of the total wheat area in the Punjab, 51 per cent. in the United Provinces, and 72 per cent. in the North-West Frontier Province.

During the week ending March 9, the plague mortality of India was 165 in excess of that of the previous week. This insignificant increase is most satisfactory at a time of the year when diffusion of infection is usually most rapid. The decrease in reported plague mortality of 947 in the Bombay Presidency and 970 in Rajputana and an increase of 1,400 in the Punjab are the most noteworthy features of this week's statement. The considerable increase in mortality reported from Central India is more apparent than real, being due to the inclusion of belated returns from Gwalior and Indore.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 23rd March 1918.

Burma.—Slight showers fell in several districts in Upper Burma. Cultivation of spring crops is proceeding and reaping of miscellaneous crops is approaching completion. Standing crops are in good condition. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon remains unchanged and is below normal. The market for white rice is very weak at Rs. 220 for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable and generally favourable to standing crops. Harvesting of mustard has been practically finished and the outturn is fair. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea and ploughing for autumn and broadcast winter rice and jute continue. Sowing of autumn rice is going on. The outturn of sugarcane is fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—During the week there were light to moderate showers in most parts of the Province. More rain is urgently needed for agricultural operations and for the growth of the standing crops. Harvesting of spring crops is proceeding. Sowing of jute and autumn rice is going on. Cattle disease is reported from eight districts. The average price of common rice has fallen by about 1.16 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was fairly general over the Province. Pressing of sugarcane is approaching completion. Harvesting of spring crops, planting of sugarcane and preparation of lands for the next season's crops continue. Standing crops are generally doing well. The price of common rice has risen in five districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from 16 districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall was general throughout the Province. With a few exceptions it was beneficial to crops generally, though injurious to mango and mahua. Sowing and preparation of fields for sugarcane, harvesting of spring crops, irrigation of extra crops and extraction of opium continue. Standing crops have been damaged slightly by hail in places. Elsewhere they are flourishing. Agricultural stock is doing well. Fodder is still dear in places. Prices tend to fall.

Punjab.—Light to moderate rain was general and was useful. The fall was fairly heavy in the central and submontane tracts. Rain was yet in time for unirrigated crops which have greatly improved. The condition of wheat and other crops is average to good on irrigated and below average to average on unirrigated areas. Sowings of extra spring crops and sugarcane continue and are below normal to normal. Rapeseed is being reaped in some districts and the expected yield is below normal to normal. Cattle are healthy but fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices are generally stationary and range between warning and scarcity rates except in the southeast where they are between normal and warning rates. Price of wheat:—Rawalpindi 6¼, Lahore 7¾, Ferozepore 8¼, Ambala 8¾ and Lyallpur 9¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Beneficial rain fell throughout the Province. Prospects of spring crops are generally average. Sowings of tobacco, sugarcane and extra spring crops have commenced in some places and are proceeding normally. The price of wheat in Peshawar was 7¾ and in Dera Ismail Khan 9⅜ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Report not received.

Kashmir.—Report not received.

Rajputana.—The weather was cloudy and cool. Irrigation of spring crops is nearing completion. Harvesting is proceeding. Prospects are good. Cattle are in good condition. Prices are falling.

Central India.—Showers were received in Gwalior, Indore and Bundelkhand and hail storm occurred in the Alampur pargana of the Indore State. Spring crops are being irrigated and harvested. Lands are being prepared for autumn crops in the Southern States. The condition of standing crops and their probable outturn are fair to good. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. Scarcity of fodder is reported in some parganas of Gwalior. Prices are high.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been unusually cool for this season and occasionally cloudy. Four districts received light showers. Reaping of spring crops is in full swing and threshing has begun in several districts. The estimated yield is reported to be good in Chhattisgarh, fair in Berar except Amraoti, fair to good in Nagpur and parts of the Jubbulpore and Nerbudda divisions and poor in Seoni, Hoshangabad, Betul, Chindwara, Amraoti and the Harsud tahsil in the Nimar district. Prices of wheat and gram have fallen slightly.

Feudatory States :—Spring crops are being cut.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in parts of Sind, Thana, Kolaba and Kolhapur. Standing crops are in good condition except for slight damage by rain in parts of Karachi, by rats and insects in parts of Hyderabad, Thar and Parkar and by adverse winds in the Upper Sind Frontier. Harvesting of spring crops continues. Picking of cotton is progressing in Gujarat, West Khandesh, the Karnatak, Kathiawar, Baroda, Cutch and Kolhapur. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—Slight showers were received in parts of Nalgonda. Harvesting of spring crops continues. The condition of crops is as that reported last week. Late rice is in fair to good condition. It suffered from blight in parts of Nalgonda. Cattle are healthy. Prices of grains are practically unchanged but juar sells at 5 seers per rupee in the Parbhani and Bidar districts.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in good condition. Harvesting of dry and wet crops is proceeding with outturn fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally stationary.

Coorg.—The weather is hot. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice are nearing completion. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—The week was generally rainless. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowing of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. Prices are fairly steady.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Thursday, the 14th March, 1918.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 59 Members, of whom 52 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

The trade in goat and sheep skins.

1. "(a) Is it a fact that the entire Indian trade in raw goat and sheep skins has been captured by the American tanners and manufacturers, consequent on the Indian Government's embargo on tanned skins?

(b) Has the tanning of goat and sheep skins in Indian tanneries been prohibited with the object of increasing the production of tanned hides in those tanneries for War Office requirements?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative.

The export trade in Indian raw skins to the United States of America has been an important trade for many years. During the five years from 1909-10 to 19[illegible] [illegible] the average annual export was 548,259 cwts., of which the United States took [illegible] cwts.

[Sir George Barnes; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

From January to December 1917, the year in which the prohibition of tanning of skins in Madras and Bombay was enforced, exports from India of raw skins totalled 460,711 cwts, of which the United States took 370,942 cwts.

(b) The answer to the second part of the question is in the affirmative, except that the prohibition in question extends to the Madras and Bombay Presidencies only. The object of the prohibition is also to conserve for hide tanners the whole of the resources of suitable tanning bark, which are insufficient for the production of the full number of tanned hides required by the War Office."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

Government profiteering in leather.

2. "(a) Have the Government of India perused the following passage taken from an article, headed 'Government Profiteering' in the issue of Shoe and Leather Record, dated 3rd August, 1917, page 18 :—

'In the Memorandum on War Office contracts reviewed in the Record of July 6th, 1917, it was officially stated that East India kips which cost the Department 1*s.* 4½*d.* per lb. were sorted, the best taken for Army work and the rejection sold at 2*s.* 8*d.* per lb. We asked at the time whether this was profiteering, and we repeat the question. The truth which stands plainly revealed is that the demand for leather is so strong that there is an enormous margin between the cost of production, when properly controlled, and the price which the public can be made to pay. This is a fact upon which no public department should be permitted to trade.'

(b) Is it a fact that the margin between the cost price to the Indian Munitions Board in India and the War Office auction price in London of Indian tanned hides has increased since July last by more than 50 per cent.?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The Government of India have seen the article referred to in the first part of this question.

(b) With regard to the second part of the question, the Government of India have no detailed information as to the disposal in England of such tanned hides from India as have been found unsuitable for Army work. They understand, however, that the greater part of the non-Army selection hides are being utilized in the manufacture of standard boots in England, which are a war-time necessity, and that these hides have not for some time past been offered for sale by public auction."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

Purchase of tanned hides by the Munitions Board.

3. "(a) Does the purchase of tanned hides by the Indian Munitions Board go beyond the requirements of the War Office for Army purposes?

(b) If so, do Government propose to consider the desirability of ordering that all such excess purchases should be stopped?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) In reply to the first part of this question, the War Office requirements of tanned hides have not yet been reached, in spite of the phenomenal increase in tanning of hides in Indian tanneries. The Munitions Board is purchasing all selections and weights of tanned hides in Madras and Bombay, since the complete control of the outturn of the tanneries is essential to ensure the maximum production of leather suitable for Army purposes. Prices are so adjusted as to make it more advantageous for tanners to tan hides suitable for Army work than inferior selections.

(b) Government do not propose to discontinue purchasing non-Army selections, as the result of this would inevitably be a falling off in the quantity of leather suitable for Army work."

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Srinivasa Sastri ; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

Tanners of hides.

4. " Is it a fact that tanners of hides have been hard hit by the ruinously low prices offered to them and by means of the rigid assortments of their production for purposes of valuation ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The answer is in the negative. Government's inquiries show that a few tanners have recently failed to secure a profit, owing principally to indiscriminate purchases of raw hides; but they are satisfied that at present prices for raw hides and tanning bark hide tanners should be assured of good profits."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :-

Government control over raw hides.

5. " Is it a fact—

(a) That the Southern India Chamber of Commerce, Madras, sent the following telegraphic representation to the Government of India on the 17th August, 1917 :—

'Regarding order in writing, 19th June, requiring hides to be clean, fleshed and free from unnecessary material, Madras tanneries complain that the tanning of hides and buffs as now required works out to a loss of one rupee on each hide and that raw and wet hides at Cawnpore and Calcutta are not available at reduced prices. As it is, tanneries are turning out only half the quantities they were doing two months before. Therefore they ask either for an increase of two annas per lb. in the purchase price of tanned hides, or for the price of raw hides at Calcutta and Cawnpore being brought down by one rupee a hide. If neither arrangement is made immediately, they inform us that tanning operations will stop ; ' and

(b) that the Indian Munitions Board, in their telegram of 3rd September, 1917, replied as follows :—

'Your telegram 17th August, tanned hides. Question of further control raw hides prices is being carefully considered by Government.'

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether any reduction in raw hide purchases has since been effected as a result of the consideration promised ? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" The answer to the first and second portions of the Hon'ble Member's question is in the affirmative.

With regard to the third part of the question raw hide prices at the principal markets have been appreciably reduced as a result of Government control. So far from the Southern India Chamber's anticipation of a falling off in the outturn of tanned hides being realised, the actual outturn has more than doubled within the last year, and the present outturn is more than three times as great as before the introduction of the Government purchase scheme. Exports of raw hides in the same period have been greatly reduced."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

Tanning materials.

6. " With reference to the statement made by His Excellency the Viceroy on the occasion of the opening of the Madras Exhibition in December last, that 'Government is prepared to intervene more directly in obtaining for tanners their supplies at fair rates if the existing agencies are unable to deal with the situation,' will the Government of India be pleased to state how it is proposed to meet the difficulties of tanners in respect of the supplies and prices of raw hides and tanning materials ? "

[Sir George Barnes; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir William Meyer; Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur; Mr. G. S. Khaparde.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"Government is controlling prices and selections of raw hides at the two principal markets of Calcutta and Cawnpore; at the former through a Government Committee of firms, and at the latter through the Deputy Controller for Hides, Cawnpore. Large quantities of suitable hides have already been sent to Madras and Bombay from Calcutta for sale to Indian tanners at prices which should leave a large margin of profit.

The control of tanning materials is being effected at Bombay through the Deputy Controller for Hides, Bombay, who arranges for supplies for Bombay tanners, and at Madras through the Controller for Tanning Materials. The latter officer, with the assistance of the Madras Government, is arranging for a scheme of greatly-increased control of tanning bark resources."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

Duties and powers of the Auditor-General.

7. "Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence (if any) that passed between the Government of India and the Secretary of State on the question of securing independence of audit and the reconstitution and definition of the duties and powers of the Auditor-General?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"A copy of the correspondence* is placed on the table."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur, asked :—

Food grains used in the manufacture of alcohol.

8. "Will Government be pleased to state for each of the last five years—

(a) the total quantity of food grains used in the manufacture of beer and kindred liquor in this country; and

(b) the quantity of alcohol (in gallons) used for commercial and industrial purposes?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"There are no figures available which would enable me to answer the first part of the Hon'ble Member's question.

With regard to the second part, alcohol used for commercial and industrial purposes has only been shown separately in the statistics for the last two years. I am laying on the table a statement † of the amounts of rectified and denatured spirits issued in the various Provinces during the years 1915-16 and 1916-17, which I hope will give the Hon'ble Member the information he desires."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde asked :—

Income-tax cases reported in the "Tribune."

9. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following Income-tax cases published on page 6 of the issue of the Tribune, dated the 8th February, 1918:—

(i) The order of the Income-tax Collector in objection case No. 84-86 of 1917 in which the Collector, after noticing the fact that the objector produced no accounts alleging that he had none and disbelieving him on the strength of the statements of the Illaquadar and Lambardar, proceeds to discuss the objection with the following remark :—

'He has three sons and will not enlist one of them. He has also not subscribed to any war fund or war loan although he could easily do so.'

(ii) The order of the Income-tax Collector in objection case No. 43-170 of 1917 in which the Collector, after referring to the admission of the objector that he went towards Sind and did business there, proceeds to dismiss the objection with the following remark :—

'Up to date he has not helped even by a single pice any of the war or Red Cross funds. He has produced no accounts, and I cannot take his verbal statement as to his income. The Lambardars and Illaquadars testify to his income and I accept their version.'

(iii) The order of the Income-tax Collector in objection case No. 134-146 of 1917 in which the Collector, after stating the facts and holding that the assessment was made by the Tahsildar after careful inquiry, disposes of the objection with the remark :—

'He (the objector) is a miser and has not helped with a single pice in any war fund or loan. He says he has no proper accounts. It is clear he wishes to conceal his true income and will not therefore produce his accounts. Objection dismissed."

(iv) The order passed by the Income-tax Collector in objection case No. 21-42 of 1917 in which the Collector, after noticing that the objector is a Sahukar, has a fair money-lending business, has obtained decrees in Courts, but has not produced accounts and says that he has none, disposes of the case with the following remark :—

'The objector has so far not helped in any way towards the war and has not subscribed a single pice to any war fund or war loan. His objection is dismissed. He has not even given a 'Statement.'

(b) Do Government intend to ascertain whether the above objection cases have been correctly reported, and, if correct, to take any notice of the manner in which, and the propriety of the remarks with which, the said Income-tax Collector disposed of the same?'

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

"The Government of India have no information as to the facts alleged and the question should be put in the Legislative Council of the Punjab Government with which Government the detailed administration of the Income-tax Act in the Punjab and the control of Income-tax Collectors in that Province rest."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur asked :—

Ship-building in India.

10. " (a) Will Government be pleased to state what progress has been made in forming a Ship-building Branch of the Indian Munitions Board with a view to examine the possibilities of ship-building in India?

(b) Are Government aware that in his evidence before the Industrial Commission, Sir Vithaldas Thackersey said that the establishment of the ship-building industry was necessary to further Indian trade and industries after the war?

(c) Are ship-building concerns subsidised in Japan? Do Government intend subsidising ship-building concerns in India with a view to encourage the establishment of the hip-building industry? "

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

" (a) A Ship-building Branch of the Indian Munitions Board has recently been formed. It is in charge of an officer whose services have been borrowed from the Admiralty to take control, and who is now engaged in examining the possibilities of ship-building in India.

(b) The Government of India have not yet received the full evidence recorded by the Industrial Commission, but they understand that Sir Vithaldas Thackersey did express the view stated in the second part of the Hon'ble Member's question.

(c) The Government of India are not aware whether ship-building concerns are subsidised in Japan. Until they have received the report of the Controller of Ship-building, they cannot consider the last question raised by the Hon'ble Member."

Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea; Sir William Vincent.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Rule 12-A of the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules, 1915.

11. "Will Govérnment be pleased to place on the table all papers relating to the promulgation of Rule 12-A of the Defence of India (Consolidation) Rules, 1915 ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Government do not think it would be in the public interest to place on the table all papers relating to the promulgation of Rule 12-A of the Defence of India Rules, but I would like to give the Council some explanation of the circumstances in which it was introduced. Towards the end of 1915 it was found necessary to detain certain persons pending the issue of orders against them under the Defence of India Rules or Regulation III of 1818. Government, while recognising that this was essential, were of opinion that there was nothing specifically providing for it in the existing rules, and they determined therefore to introduce Rule 12-A in order to make it legal. If there is any further information on the subject which the Hon'ble Member desires, and I can, without divulging the contents of confidential papers give him, I shall be happy to do so if he will see me personally."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

Case of the hunger striker in gaol at Amraoti.

12. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following letter which appeared in the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 14th February, 1918 :—

'You are aware that one of the interned gentlemen (hunger-strikers) is in gaol at Amraoti. He is in a wretched condition. For a long time he refused to take any food, but when he became unconscious on account of fatigue artificial means were tried to feed him. For a time he pulled on and took food. The situation seems to have been very intolerable to him, for he actually attempted suicide. I am informed that on the 24th of this month (January) he contrived to hang himself. He was provided in his room with water, chair, and table and his clothes. He tied his dhoties to each other and, throwing them over one of the beams in his room, made a noose for himself. Then placing the chair on the table he stood on the chair and put the noose round his neck and kicked away the chair. That made noise, and attracted the watchman's attention. In the meantime the knot of the dhoti gave way and he fell on the floor with his hands and feet bound, almost unconscious. His life was however, saved. He is now removed to another cell generally used for murderers and convicts of that kind.'

(b) Are the facts as stated above substantially correct, and is it the case that the political detenu referred to attempted to commit suicide ?

(c) Has he been removed to a cell 'generally used for murderers and convicts of that kind' ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a), (b) and (c). The report in question is substantially correct. In consequence of his persistent refusal to take food the detenu's physical condition was considerably reduced, when, to save his life, resort was had to artificial feeding. He had abandoned his hunger-strike and his health was improving when he attempted to commit suicide. As he threatened to repeat the attempt, he was placed in a cell adjoining the condemned cells in order that the warder on duty there might be at hand to prevent him from doing so. Orders have issued for his removal therefrom, and arrangements are being made for his transfer to Bihar and Orissa."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea asked :—

"May I put a suplementary question ? Was any inquiry made as to the circumstances under which he attempted to commit suicide ?"

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir William Vincent; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir Claude Hill; Sir William Meyer.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" I am afraid I must ask for notice of the question. I have no doubt that inquiry was made, but I cannot remember the details on the subject."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

Agricultural implements

13. " (a) What is the number of improved agricultural implements sold in each Province during the last ten years ?

(b) Are Government aware that the demand for improved agricultural machines has increased, that the present supply is not adequate, and that the exorbitant prices of imported machinery are prohibitive ?

(c) If so, will Government take necessary steps to establish workshops in this country to cope with the increasing demand ?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" (a) A statement* is laid on the table giving the information asked for in part (a) of the question so far as it is available.

(b) It is true that the demand has increased, and that this increase, coupled with the growing scarcity of raw materials, especially iron and steel, has caused a general rise in prices.

(c) Government workshops for the manufacture of agricultural implements already exist in Bombay, Madras and the United Provinces, and one has recently been sanctioned in the Punjab Each of these Provinces employs an Agricultural Engineer, whose duty it is to supervise the manufacture of such implements, and the establishment of similar workshops in other Provinces must naturally await the appointment of Agricultural Engineers, regarding which I would invite the Hon'ble Member's attention to my reply to the question which he asked on the 6th of February. Government workshops cannot, however, attempt to supply the whole demand, and we may hope that the large expansion that may be expected in the future will be met by private."

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX BILL.

11-15 A.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, I beg to move that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to income-tax be taken into consideration.

" I referred at some length in my speeches on the 6th of February, when introducing the Bill, to the objects with which it had been framed and replied to some general criticisms which had been made. Since then, the Bill has been very carefully and fully considered in the Select Committee. The Committee has made a very clear and full report, and I think that we are greatly indebted to its members for their capable, willing and useful assistance. Also, in presenting the Committee's Report on the 5th of March, I made some supplementary remarks, chiefly by way of further explanation— a sort of popular exposition if I may so put it— of the new system which it is proposed to adopt in respect of revising assessments which have been made with reference to the figures of previous years.

" I have only one remark that I need make now It has been represented to me that it would be a very graceful concession to the soldiers and officers of the Indian Army who have won such special distinction as to have obtained admission to the Order of British India or to the Order of Merit, or to have received the Victoria Cross or the Military Cross, that the money allowances which accompany these distinctions should not be assessed to income-tax. I am most ready to accept this suggestion, and I propose to carry it into effect under the powers vested in the Government of India by clause 44 of the present Bill".

*Not included in these Proceedings

[Mr. Khaparde.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—"My Lord, I beg to move that this Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be republished.

"My reasons for proposing this are seven, and I shall proceed in their order. My first point is that this Bill was not sufficiently published and was not published in time to admit of the officers and public bodies concerned making their representations. The dates of publication are given at the end of the Report of the Select Committee and, trying to analyse those dates, I find that the students of the Government of India Gazette had only 101 days within which to study the Bill and make their representations on it. Others had a smaller number of days. I believe the Central Provinces, which is the province from which I come, had only 37 days within which to read this Bill and submit their opinions. If this was so in the case of officers, I humbly submit that public bodies would take a much longer time to think about it. They would not have the machinery readily to call a meeting together, nor would they be in a position to consider all these matters at one and the same sitting. The longest time that anybody had to think of this Bill was, as I said, 101 days, and the shortest time that they had to think of it was 37 days. That is for those who are students of English and who can read in English. As to those who depend on the vernacular entirely, it will be bound that the shortest time in their case was 15 days, and the longest time was about 46 days. It will be seen from the dates which are given at the end of the Report that the public had very little or in fact no opportunity of discussing this Bill, understanding its contents and taking a note as to its bearings on their interests. This is not a fact that I merely complain about; it will be found that the Punjab Administration also complains of the shortness of time given to them to think over this Bill.

"I do not propose reading the whole of it out, but from page 17 of the paper it will be seen that the Punjab Government say the Bill is of a very far-reaching nature, in the words of the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and so on, and yet the time allowed for obtaining opinions, for considering those opinions when obtained, and for formulating the views of Local Governments is, if the X'mas holidays be excluded, merely five weeks. 'It is obvious that in such conditions, and with the pressure of their urgent work, it is impossible for either the Local Government or its officers to give the subject adequate consideration, and the Lieutenant-Governor feels bound to point out the dangers attending legislation rushed through in this manner.' I submit, my Lord, that this is an expression of opinion as strong as anybody would like to make it, and the complaint of the Punjab Government is a general complaint. I have felt it myself and many people have felt it the same way. In fact there are telegrams received and letters received, all of them complaining more or less of the shortness of time allowed for consideration, and asking for more time. I should not have brought this amendment if I did not feel that the Bill is really of a very serious nature and having very far-reaching consequences. It might be said to begin with the cradle of a man and to end with his funeral; it covers him in all his activities and it deals with all possible conditions. This remark of mine can be easily seen to be justified when it is remembered that it concerns the joint Hindu family, that it concerns the taxability of a married woman, the taxability of a person following a profession. I do not know whether our incomes as we come here to attend this Council and get a few rupees a day, whether that does not come within one of these far-reaching sections. My Lord, this Bill is of a very far-reaching nature, not merely touching trade or agriculture, but even family life and marital relations; and a Bill dealing with all these conditions does require some amount of time for consideration. Then the next point which I wish to urge, and I hope it will be taken into favourable consideration, is that this Bill is of a very highly contentious character. As such I think it is not quite suitable to be discussed during war time. There is no urgency about it. There is no deficit that we have got to meet. Its object is not to raise money. That it does not seek to raise money has been stated both in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and also at the end of the Report of the Select Committee. So, obviously, it is a matter that can wait, and if it can wait, so much the better, because being of an unusual nature people would like to understand it more, and I am sure it will be found easier to work—if at all accepted in the end—that people have had discussions over it and people know where they stand. As it is, if my motion does not meet with the approval of Council and is not carried, you will be practically passing a Bill without the knowledge of anybody at all—at any rate, in the case of people depending for their knowledge on the vernaculars. The time that has been given is so short that it will practically amount to passing the Bill without the knowledge of the large majority of the people who have to pay under it; and in that way it will have all the disadvantages of legislation without knowledge. The people will entertain all sorts of misapprehensions about it; officers will find it very difficult to administer, and misunderstanding may arise. It is not desirable that all these things should take place. My Lord, highly contentious as the Bill is and liable to be misunderstood, it is complicated by a further fact, and that is, that even a philosophical mind will find itself puzzled in considering the various sections of the Bill. It is called an Income-tax Bill, and yet it seeks to tax property, and it really is a Property Tax Bill, and it is carried so far that even vacant houses appear to come within its scope. By the rules it is said that power will be given to executive officers and income-tax collectors to grant exemptions or to grant compensation and so on. So this is not only an Income-tax Bill, but it is also a Property Tax Bill. Now, a property tax, though at one time it was the favourite tax, is now condemned almost universally; and this combination of property and income-tax in one and the same Bill is rather puzzling, to say the least of it. There is a further objection I feel to it, and that objection is that this Bill seeks to move in something like an indirect manner. If it is intended that agricultural incomes should be taxed, then nothing like bringing forward a straightforward Bill, so to say, and giving time for people to look into the Bill and for this Council to consider it and pass it. But that is not the case. In this Bill it is not intended to tax agricultural incomes. In fact, it is said that they are not going to be taxed under section 4. As this matter will be discussed later on under one of my other amendments, I will not say any more about it here, except merely to say that this Bill is to a certain extent puzzling in its nature. The great object of this Bill is said to be to consolidate the law; and a further object is to improve the machinery. Now this machinery improving is something which always frightens me, as this is an age and a civilisation in which we bother about machinery too much. In fact, we know that for eating one ounce of food one generally requires some few tons of furniture; if you take into account all the knives and forks and plates and other things for eating one ounce of food, ten tons of furniture would be a very moderate estimate. In the same way, for collecting a few rupees you require a large machinery; and in the opinions that were circulated I find that various officers have complained that all these things will make a great deal of work, and the Commissioners will find it very heavy work getting through all the appeals that will be carried to them; district officers will be worried and the unfortunate Collector, or whoever it is who will deal with it in the first instance, will be burdened with civil and criminal inquiries of every sort touching on every department of life. So this is a Bill which, I humbly submit, will promote a great deal of inquiry and a great deal of work. One officer in Bombay—Mr. Shepherd is the name of the gentleman, I believe—says that the establishment necessary for administering the Act will be nearly trebled if not quadrupled ; and it is likely that three-fourths of the proceeds will go in working expenses, and only one-fourth be left, a sum which will be hardly worth taking into consideration. I may have to refer to this later on when I speak on another of my amendments ; but I only mention it here as a reason why this Bill should not be passed now. A further reason for demanding this delay is that this Bill has been amended very considerably in Select Committee. A new system has been introduced, as was briefly mentioned by the Hon'ble Finance Minister ; and the extent of it has been changed.

"There is also a summary procedure added, and I have to move an amendment that section 37 of the Act should be retained. So your Lordship will see that this Bill has been practically remodelled very considerably, and it is desirable that the world should know in what directions and in what points it has been remodelled. All these reasons put together I humbly submit make out a good case for this Bill being re-published and the public given further time to consider its details and its mechanism, and possibly also to make any observations even on its principle. For these reasons, my Lord, I humbly beg to move that the Bill be re-published. It is not a war measure and so there is no harm done in waiting a few months. This waiting a few months will have the advantage of informing the people concerned, and they will feel that at any rate they have been heard and their views have been considered before any decision was arrived at; whereas if the Bill is passed in the state in which it is at present, the people will have a grievance, it may be a wrong kind of grievance, but still a real grievance, that their views have not been brought before the Council and that those views have not been considered. With these remarks, I propose that the Bill be re-published."

11-32 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"My Lord, my Hon'ble friend stands forward as an advocate of delay on the ground that sufficient time has not been given for the consideration of this Bill. I think he made it a point of personal grievance that he had had only 37 days to read it himself. I would ask him how many days he would require for a really long Bill, re-casting, for example, the Indian Penal Code or the Civil Procedure Code. He said that in other cases there had been 101 days allowed, but even that does not meet with his satisfaction. He quoted with evident sympathy, a sympathy which, perhaps, I may say he always does not feel for Provincial Governments, the wail of the Punjab Government that they only had five weeks to consider the Bill. Well, I may say perhaps, without divulging confidences, that in our discussions on the subject of constitutional reforms, we have had now and then a representation from a Local Government that the time was rather short to consider these important matters; so I am quite confident that my Hon'ble friend, his state of mind being what it is, will presently move a Resolution that the scheme of constitutional reforms be postponed until all the Local Governments shall have had fuller time to consider it.

"I must point out that it is not as if this Bill has been newly sprung upon the Local Governments; they had been referred to so early as March 1917 on the subject of the revision of the existing Act. We only framed our Bill after most careful consideration of what the Local Governments and various other people said to us on this subject. So that it is not really a valid complaint that the Local Governments have not had time adequately to consider this Bill, in the shaping of which they themselves have had a very considerable voice. The Hon'ble Member referred to the Bill as dealing with a man's life from his cradle to his funeral. I have no doubt that when the Angel of Death appears to him, he will, in accordance with his action this morning, put in a protest on the ground that the time allowed to him had been much too short.

"Now he refers to this Bill as a new measure of a highly contentious character. He does not seem to be aware of the old Act. This Bill is a Bill to replace the old Act, II of 1886, the Act now existing, and to improve the machinery and clear up doubtful matters. Subject to one exception, which will undoubtedly be fully discussed in this Council, in regard to the way in which agricultural income is dealt with under clause 4, there is no new principle. My Hon'ble friend talks about measures to the detriment of the Hindu joint family. The Hindu joint family is provided for in section 3 of the existing Act. He complains of the provision for taxing houses as taxing property which is not income. What, of course, we tax is the income derived from house property, and, if my Hon'ble friend refers to section 24 of the existing Act, he will find that there is provision there for taxing income from houses. Well, as it is perfectly clear that if my Hon'ble friend had had to pay income-tax himself, he would have studied the law under which he was paying. I can only conclude that by some regrettable oversight on the part of the Central Provinces authorities he has not been asked to pay income-tax hitherto, and I trust that under the new Bill that oversight will be promptly repaired.

"He spoke also of the cost of collection as going to swallow up all the proceeds of the Bill. I have explained more than once that we are not introducing this Bill for the purpose of getting revenue, though we expect incidentally a certain amount of extra revenue from it, but we are introducing it in order to get a more just and equitable distribution of taxes; to remove those sore feelings that have been very much to the front whenever we have had under consideration any income-tax enhancement, that under the present machinery with its water-tight compartments and so on a man who is honest, and puts up his accounts readily, pays more than the man who does not. We want to remedy that and to make our procedure as equitable and uniform as possible. I certainly agree with what the Bombay official whom the Hon'ble Mover quoted said, that as income-tax grows more complex—and it does naturally grow more complex with the commercial and industrial development of the country—you must have a larger income-tax staff. But that is not a source of loss to the public exchequer. What we found in Bombay, for instance, was that the special Income-tax Collector has paid his cost over and over again by increased collections, and at the same time has kept on very good terms with the commercial community.

"Then the Hon'ble Mover talks of the way in which the Bill has been altered. Well, if you look at the portions of the Bill now printed in italics, it certainly does seem at first sight to have been subjected to considerable alteration. But any one who studies the Bill will see that the real amount of alteration is not large, and such alterations as have been made uniformly not to the detriment of the tax-payer but to his advantage. Wherever we have made alterations in Select Committee, it has been to help the assessee, to remove grievances which were put before us.

"Then as regards the question of the year of assessment, as one might call it loosely, and the way in which a man's assessment should be calculated, the existing Act provides for that. It says 'You pay primarily on the basis of your takings of the year before, but in certain circumstances you can get it re-adjusted.' We wanted originally to make this more simple, by saying 'Pay each year on the takings of the year before.' That, however, provoked a good deal of criticism from the commercial classes. So to meet the views of those who would be most affected, we have practically restored the principle of the existing Act. Only whereas section 33 of the existing Act is a one-sided measure, which was only to the benefit of the assessee and in no way to the benefit of the Government, we have provided for a re-assessment which will enable us to be just to both parties. And recognising that that system of assessment in two stages, as one might call it, would not be desirable for small folk, we have made a special provision for such cases by means of a summary procedure.

"I suppose my Hon'ble friend realises that, if his motion is accepted, it would mean that the Income-tax Bill could not possibly be taken up this Session, and that therefore it would not come into effect as regard the coming year, 1918-19. If there was anything in it which would justify an adjournment in this way, I would not oppose it, but, as I maintain most emphatically, there is nothing to justify such an adjournment; on the other hand, the commercial public have much to gain by the new Bill which is generally admitted to be a material improvement on the old Act in regard to greater clearness and the greater uniformity it lays down in regard to methods of assessment and so on.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde wants to give the public a fresh opportunity for putting in objections. I may tell him that the public, or some members of the public, will always object to any taxation, especially income-tax taxation, so that however much you may remodel your Bill, even if you got an absolutely perfect enactment, you will still find some persons criticising it.

"For these reasons, my Lord, I am unable in any way to accept the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde's amendment."

[Sir George Lowndes; Mr. Khaparde.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

11-43 A.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"My Lord, I should like to add one word to the remarks of my colleague Sir William Meyer. It seems to me that there is a point of principle involved in my Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde's speech. As it appears to me when this Council has had a Bill before it and has referred it to Select Committee by a unanimous vote of the Council—I believe Mr. Khaparde was present at the motion and he certainly did not object—I assume he voted for it. In these circumstances, I say, it is impossible to move now to re-publish the Bill, except on the sole ground that the Committee has so altered it that it is not the same Bill that was published before. There can be no other reasons. The reason he gives that there should be more time to consider the Bill appears to me, if I may say so, bad. The Council has considered it and has ordered the Bill to be referred to Select Committee, and it has been considered by the Committee. The only rational ground on which, I suggest to the Council, my Hon'ble friend could ask for the re-publication of the Bill after it has been to Select Committee is that the Bill as it emerges from Select Committee is not the same Bill that went in there. The Select Committee on this Bill was a particularly large and particularly strong one; they unanimously recommended that re-publication was not necessary, and I venture to think the Council, under such circumstances, would be very wise to follow the advice of their Committee."

The motion to re-publish was put and negatived.

The motion that the Report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration was then put and agreed to.

11-45 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—"My Lord, my next amendment is to move :—

'That in clause 3 (1) for the words 'under this Act' the following shall be substituted :—'under the provisions hereinafter contained in the Act'.

The clause will then read :—

'Save as hereinafter provided, this Act shall apply to all income from whatever source it is derived if it accrues or arises or is received in British India or is under the provisions hereinafter contained in the Act deemed to accrue or arise or to be received in British India.'

"At first sight it may appear that my amendment is merely verbal substituting a few words for others, and that also struck me, but it will be seen that the few words that I propose to substitute for those in the existing Act are of a far-reaching character. It is like this. In Madras, the question was raised whether income earned outside British India and not remitted to British India is liable to be taxed at all under this Act. The Advocate-General gave the opinion that it was liable to be taxed, and the Board of Revenue was of opinion that it was not liable to be taxed. The matter appears to have been represented to the Government of India, and they gave two rulings, saying that income would not be taxed and should not be taxed, and words 'under the present Act' leave this point vague. The word that makes the difficulty is the word 'deemed'. The words 'deemed under this Act' and 'deemed under the provisions hereinafter contained in the Act' would make all the difference; 'deemed under this Act' would be an expression that would be general, and were it allowed to stand the provisions of this Act would be left aside and only the policy of the Act would be considered. Whereas if the provisions were specifically mentioned and referred to, then whoever holds that income earned outside British India but not remitted to British India is still liable to be taxed, would have to bring it under one or other section of the Act. That makes the difference. I am advised and myself think that if these words are introduced, it would be clear that incomes earned outside British India would not be taxed, whereas if these words are left vague, it would be a matter of contention and perhaps of a reference to Courts hereafter. My experience is that these cases are likely to arise because people living in British India and doing a little business here sometimes have jagir lands or inam lands in adjoining Natives States. In these cases oftentimes the income in Natives States is so small that it is seldom remitted to British India, and the people who live there manage to exist with what they earn from jagir and inam lands, whether that income is again to be included under the income-tax is the question. There are two cases pending in the High Court of Madras and there are likely to be more. I should like the point made clear in this way, and perhaps this amendment, which really looks verbal, will have real significance to Government. I recommend this amendment to the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—" My Lord, when I first read the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde's amendment, I confess I was of the same opinion as he said he was when he read his own amendment, that it was merely a verbal one. I have every sympathy with anyone who wishes to make an Act clearer, but I am afraid I am still of the same opinion. There is no deep-laid plot to get rid of an iniquitous Madras decision as to what income is taxable and what is not. I really cannot see that any difference is made by the proposal to substitute for the phrase 'under this Act' the words 'under the provisions hereinafter contained in the Act.' I think that it amounts to the same thing, but if it will really give any pleasure to my Hon'ble friend, then I suggest in the spirit of compromise that we split the difference, and instead of saying 'under this Act' that we say 'under the provisions of this Act' I think that is a fair concession. It will be just half of the words and, if I may say so, the whole of the sense." 11-50 A.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde:—" Sir, I accept the words 'under the provisions of this Act' as suggested by the Hon'ble Member."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—" My Lord, I beg to move the small amendment which stands in my name in clause 3 (2) (viii) for substituting the word 'or' for the word 'and.' It is a very small thing and I will explain it in a moment. 11-53 A.M.

" The clause as it stands reads thus:—

'Any receipts not being receipts arising from business or the exercise of a profession, vocation or occupation, which are of a casual and non-recurring nature and are not by way of addition to the remuneration of an employee.'

" I may be wrong, my Lord, but my view of the clause as it stands is that it provides that receipts shall be exempt from the operation of income-tax if they satisfy two conditions. In the first place, the receipts must be 'casual and non-recurring.' This is exactly in accordance with the English practice which is not to tax casual profits as distinguished from ordinary business or professional profit. But, my Lord, the clause imposes another condition which you do not find in England. It is this that the receipts 'are not by way of addition to the remuneration of an employee.' That is to say the insertion of the word 'and' restricts the operation of exemption to one class only, namely 'employee.' The same receipts which will be exempt in the case of an employee will not be exempt in the case of a merchant, a zemindar or professional man. I do not see, my Lord, any cogent reason in favour of this differentiation. I propose to amplify the scope of the exemption so as to make it applicable to all, and this will be effected by substituting 'or' for 'and.' This is my amendment, my Lord, and I trust that the Government and the Council will see their way to accept it."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—" My Lord, in the spirit of reasonableness to which my Hon'ble friend referred just now and which is observed by this Government, I am quite ready to accept the word 'or' for the word 'and' after the words 'non-recurring nature'". 11-54 A.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur:—" My Lord, I beg to move a small amendment that in clause 4 (1), the words from 'but 11-55 A.M.

[Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

the net amount' to 'under this Act' in the Income-tax Bill be omitted. While we are indeed very thankful to Government for recognising as heretofore the principle that agricultural income should be exempted from the scope of the Income-tax Act, I regret to find that an amendment which we moved in the Select Committee for the omission of the latter part of clause 4 was not accepted by the Committee I am, therefore, obliged to move this amendment that, in calculating an assessee's income from other sources, his agricultural income should not be taken into account. Unless this amendment is accepted, the result of the inclusion of the agricultural income into the aggregate income of an assessee from other sources would be to raise the rate at which assessment would be made on non-agricultural income. It would have an indirect effect on the income of zemindars though it would not tax them directly, and, therefore, I say that considering the very small gain that it would bring to the public exchequer, it is not proper to create a feeling among the zemindars that they are going to be taxed in an indirect way. There is also this feeling that it is a thin end of the wedge, if I may use that expression ; that it is something like a feeler in order to ascertain whether the zemindars are prepared for a new provision which is anticipated in the shape of a tax upon the agricultural income. Under these circumstances, considering the very small gain that would accrue to the public exchequer by the adoption of this procedure, my humble request is that the Government would be well advised to ignore it altogether. The zemindars are fighting not so much on account of any heavy burden this innovation would impose on agricultural income, but on the question of principle underlying it. Their contention is that, having exempted agricultural income from the operation of the Act, you should not attempt to touch it in an indirect way. However, the indirect effect, I must distinctly mention, the indirect effect so far as agricultural income is concerned would be so small that it would be unwise on our part to raise the cry about the inviolability of the permanent settlement.

"I may incidentally mention that if it is considered proper, as suggested also by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde, to impose a direct tax on agricultural incomes, it would be much better to consult public opinion and the opinion of the zemindars. Not only the Government would be quite justified in imposing the tax, but I am sure considering the exigencies the zemindars would acquiesce in such a proposal. Therefore my suggestion is if there is any idea to tax the zemindars it would be much better to take public opinion before taxing agricultural income in an indirect way.

"Another effect of this indirect attempt to tax agricultural income, I fear, would be that it would go to discourage some of the zemindars who are inclined to embark on commercial and industrial enterprises. Take, for instance, the case of a zemindar whose zemindary income is, say, Rs. 2,25,000 a year and his income from commercial or industrial pursuits is Rs. 25,000; he would be called upon to pay an income-tax and a super-tax on Rs. 25,000 at the rate of four annas in the rupee. If that income which arose from his zemindary had not been taken into account then he would have been called on to pay only at the rate of one anna in the rupee. At a time when India cries aloud for the development of industries and commerce, we can hardly contemplate with equanimity the prospect of landholders fighting shy of industrial enterprises. With the Munitions Board attempting to give an impetus to the existing industries and the Industries Commission collecting and sifting information about the industrial potentialities of this country, new hopes have filled our hearts and new aspirations have sprung up about the industrial regeneration of the country. The landholding classes have realised the responsibilities that their wealth and position in the country have imposed upon them and instances are not wanting in which zemindars like my esteemed friend to my left (Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi) have come forward to be pioneers if not captains of industry. This is certainly not the proper time to impose a fresh tax on agricultural income and thereby dissuade a large, influential and well-to-do section of the people from taking part in the industrial and commercial development of the country.

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur; Sir William Meyer.]

"With these few words I beg to move that the latter part of clause 4, commencing from 'but' and ending 'under this Act' should be omitted."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"My Lord, perhaps if I rise now it will make the subsequent course of the debate more clear. I congratulate my Hon'ble friend on his rather novel appearance as the champion of the landed interests. I had always looked on him as rather a pillar of commerce! And I may also point out that he has proposed to leave out only one portion of the clause, so that the second portion of the clause would still remain. 'Agricultural income,' he will have it, 'shall not be chargeable to income-tax,......but in any province in which a basis has been definitely laid down for the assessment of such income for the purpose of cesses, ... net agricultural income for the purposes of this Act shall be ascertained on that basis, etc.' 12-2 P.M.

"But I will not lay stress on that because, I think, it is perfectly clear that what my Hon'ble friend means..."

The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"May I interrupt? If this portion of clause 4 is omitted, then the second portion will go out of itself."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Well, the Hon'ble Member did not say so. However, I do not want to raise a mere technicality, and of course one understands that the whole of clause 4 is really obnoxious to the Hon'ble mover. The reasons for putting forward this clause were set forth in the Statement of Objects and Reasons on the Bill in my speech of the 6th February introducing the Bill, and my further reply speech on that date, and in paragraph 7 of the Select Committee's Report. There can be no question of breach of faith quâ the permanent settlement or land tenures generally, since as I indicated in my speech on 6th February, incomes from land were directly assessed in the early sixties. At present, however, we are not doing anything towards direct assessment, but merely providing that, where a man derives considerable income from land and at the same time has income from other sources, he shall not in respect of the latter income get the advantage of favourable low rates of taxation which were intended only for those who are not well-off. As I explained on a previous reference to this matter, that question has come to the front in connection with the gradation rates at which our income-tax has been levied in the last two years. In other words, the rich man, looking to his wealth as a whole, must not get the benefit of a special rate of taxation provided for the benefit of the poor man. An instance of what might happen in this way was given in paragraph 7 of the Select Committee's Report, where it was shown that without this clause a man with a large agricultural income and small receipts from other sources might pay on the latter at the rate of 4 pies intended for the poorest class of assessees. I will add an instance of a less extreme description. If a landholder, having a lakh of rupees from land, has Rs. 10,000 other income, under the present Act he would pay Rs. 312½ on the latter at the 6 pies rate. It is now proposed that, having regard to his landed income, he should pay Rs. 625 at the rate of one anna in the rupee. There is no taxation on his agricultural income as such. He merely pays at an equitable rate on income which is not agricultural. I am not impressed by the Hon'ble Mover's wail that if we taxed the landlord on what he derives from industrial enterprises at the same rate at which we tax other citizens, he would not invest in industrial enterprises. We always hear that sort of thing when there is any taxation proposed. We heard a good deal about it in connection with the Super-tax Bill last year. In England, they heard about it constantly in connection with their successive revisions of income-tax. We are always told that the would-be investor is such a touchy person that if you put a little extra tax on him, he would rather not invest at all, but let his money lie idle. I give the investor, whether he is a landlord or not, credit for more sense. If he sees there is a profit to be made or if he has a patriotic interest in some local industry, he will not be deterred because he pays the same rate of income-tax on his profits as other citizens do. It will be observed too, from clause 4 (1) that even in determining the gradation rate in respect of taxable income, we leave out of account all agricultural income not exceeding Rs. 1,000, so that we thereby sweep away the mass of ordinary ryots and tenants. It is only in the case of a really well-to-do agriculturist that his agricultural income in excess of Rs. 1,000 will be taken into consideration.

"It has been suggested that clause 4 is a prelude to a tax on land. It is nothing of the sort. I indicated in paragraph 60 of my speech introducing the Financial Statement for the current year, 1917-18, that the Government might possibly in future have to raise more revenue from land. I cannot pledge the future at present, but if we had wanted to do this in present circumstances, we should have done it in a direct way. As, however, I indicated in introducing the Financial Statement for 1918-19, we do not want to impose any further taxation at present. This proposal has no reference to increase of taxation, but is brought forward merely as a matter of equity to improve the machinery of our existing Act, and to prevent the rich man getting the benefit of a poor man's rates on taxable income, because though his taxable income as such may be small, he has a larger amount of non-taxable income. As I said in my speech of 6th February, one of the objects we have had in view here, as in other matters, is to remedy unequal assessment on persons of equal means: no more no less. This furnishes an answer to a suggestion that has been made to me privately that this clause should be understood to be a war measure only. That is quite impossible. It is a part of the permanent machinery of the Act which will apply with equal justice, war or no war. If the Government had wanted more money for war purposes, we should have asked for that money direct.

"It has also been suggested to me that, as a counter concession, a promise should be made to reduce hereafter the income-tax rates in Schedule I. That is out of the question for the reasons stated in paragraph 33 of the Select Committee's Report. The existing rates must continue at present. The question of altering them hereafter in one direction or another must be left to the Government of the day as a budgetary matter, we cannot touch it now.

"Reference has also been made to the services that landholders have done and are doing for us in various ways, in connection with recruiting, for example. I fully appreciate those services, but I would remind my Hon'ble friends of the land-owning classes that it is a question of noblesse oblige; that property has its duties as well as its rights. Nor have the Government been unmindful of the interests of the landholders. I would remind the Council that from 1905-06 onwards, we have relieved them by sweeping away the patwari and famine cesses, and village service cesses of various kinds.

"It has been suggested to me that the action of Government would be misinterpreted as a beginning of an attack on agricultural incomes. I have already given reasons to show that nothing of this sort is intended; and as regards the political effects of the measure, I may say that, although the Local Governments were duly consulted, not one of them took exception to the proposal on equitable or political grounds. Indeed the measure was actively suggested by two of them.

"But, my Lord, in view of the opposition which has been excited among representatives of the landowning classes, the Government have determined to leave this matter to the free decision of the Council. We emphatically hold, as I have said, that the proposal is one which is absolutely just; that if the Council throw it aside, they will lend themselves to the charge of preferring the interests of the rich to those of the poor, and stereotype a system under which a rich man deriving the bulk of his income from land, the taxation of which as such is outside the purview of the Bill, is also to get an unfair advantage in the matter of gradation rates over a poor man whose income is all, or almost all, of a taxable character. As I have said, we propose to leave these considerations to the Council. There will be no cracking of the Government whip, and though officials can speak and vote, they will do so with full liberty of conscience. They can approve or disapprove of the proposal according to their own judgment."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis:—"My Lord, my position in regard to this amendment is clear from the Note of Dissent subject to which I have signed the Report of the Select Committee. Mature consideration only confirms the suspicion that in the evolution of legislation, to which we are accustomed in India, the provision now sought to be embodied in clause 4 may sooner or later, in spite of present assurances, lead to the imposition of the income-tax upon agricultural incomes also. The clause easily lends itself, as stated by the Hon'ble Mover, to such an expansion, and few Finance Members will be able to resist the temptation of exploiting such a productive source of revenue, however opposed that policy may be to the policy followed by Government for so many years past My Lord, I again repeat what the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur has said, that if Government want to have such a clause as a war measure few landlords, with all their record of sacrifice and patriotic zeal in the great cause of the Empire, would have opposed it, even though acquiescence would have involved the abandonment of a principle and cherished right for the time being.

12-12 P.M.

"Now, my Lord, agricultural income has so long been, directly or indirectly, excluded from calculation in operations under the Income-tax Act, not from any misconception about the scope and meaning of the provisions of that Act. The Hon'ble the Finance Member reminded the Council the other day that agricultural income was liable to assessment under the Income-tax Act of the early sixties of the last century. If that income then was expressly excluded from computation in the later Act of the eighties, the exclusion, it cannot but be said, was provided for advisedly, and must have been based upon some sound principle. It does not, also, appear that there was any criticism of such an exclusion when that exclusion was made. It is, moreover, quite clear that on the present occasion, when this provision has been inserted, those who have done so do not seem to have been very happy when they made it. They felt the impropriety of their action and, with a view to allay suspicion, have expressly premised this clause with a provision that agricultural income as such will not be assessed to income-tax. I am glad that in putting this clearly in the clause they have not only repeated but confirmed the practice hitherto followed. When the exclusion was first made the consideration that was then paramount in their minds was that, apart from other considerations, it would have been imprudent to tax India's greatest, nay, chief industry, agriculture, when it already pays tax in the shape of revenue and cesses. It must also be borne in mind that it was immediately after the Mutiny that agricultural income was taxed. It was a time of exceptional difficulty; and it was, with a view to meeting extraordinary expenditure, that this was done, and it was taken off as soon as the necessity had disappeared. No serious attempt has been made, my Lord, to demonstrate how the principle of exclusion is unsound So far as can be gathered from the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and the discussions since its introduction, two considerations appear to underlie the clause. In the first place, the adoption of the principle of graduation in assessment is supposed to have so changed the situation that the exclusion involves inequalities in assessment and hardship upon the other classes; in the next place, the inequalities are so great that they would lead to public clamour. Now, in judging of the position, Hon'ble Members will bear in mind that abstract principles, however just or sound, are not the determining factors in legislation. Laws must be suited to the genius, habits, and traditions of the people, and must in all cases be modified by special circumstances. In order to secure public co-operation, they should likewise follow the lines of least resistance. It is a point worth consideration that the existing provision about exclusion of agricultural income is justified by the fact that India is an agricultural country. It was this provision which probably reconciled people to the income-tax, as otherwise the bulk of the people who pay the land-revenue and cesses would have been doubly taxed. It offered some protection to the 80 per cent. of the people, and has been appreciated by them. A graduated scale of income-tax cannot possibly be responsible for inequalities of assessment of a graver nature than those very often possible under the existing law. It is also worthy of note that the principle of graduation has been embodied in our Income-tax Act from the first. The rates were 4 pies per rupee for smaller incomes and 5 pies for larger incomes. And it is remarkable that not a voice was heard against a system under which such inequalities were possible and for a certainty were noticeable—inequalities as is obvious, far greater than any which the development of the principle of graduation can cause. The new scale has been in operation for two years. And yet how many complaints about unequal assessment have been heard during this time? There has never been any public clamour, except perhaps against the whole imposition and the lowness of the minimum. The apprehended hardship to the general tax-payer cannot justify a departure in policy—when even if there is any hardship at all—it is so little felt that nobody has even thought of complaining about it publicly before now.

"My Lord, clause 4 is also to be condemned for the cogent reason that it defeats the object of Government as set out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. We are assured that the object is not to tax agricultural income, but the clause will have the sure effect of taxing, indirectly it is true, but taxing all the same, such income. The difference between the lower rate charged upon non-agricultural income at present and the higher rate to be charged under the new provision by taking into account agricultural income is an indirect tax upon agricultural income The broad fact cannot be disguised by any subtlety in argument. In business practice this excess rate will have to be deducted from income for which it becomes assessable, and thus defeats the principle carefully laid down and repeated in the first part of the clause that agricultural income will not be assessed. If it is deducted from the other income, then the tax is subject to the anomaly that the assessee will be made to pay more than what others similarly circumstanced will have to pay.

"My Lord, the tax is also objectionable on account of the fact that ascertainment of agricultural income, even for the purposes of fixing a rate, will lead to much greater harassment and inquisitorial inquiry than the ascertainment of non-agricultural income, and will be a constant source of trouble and harassment to the assessees, whose number, according to the present Bill, will be much greater now than before. It is remarkable how harshly this system of inquisitorial proceeding works in Prussia. Reinach, in a discussion in the French Chamber of Deputies in 1908, stated that in Prussia they have been obliged to resort, for purposes of inquiry in connection with income-tax assessment, to an intolerable espionage and a degrading system of informers. They interrogate caterers, neighbours, servants, children; they keep account of the dinners that are given and of the cigars that are offered to the guests. It is with a view to save people from such obnoxious inquiries and to minimise the worries from income-tax assessment of such a large class as the agriculturists, who already periodically suffer from the harassment of settlement staff at the time of every settlement, and who already pay land-revenue and cesses, that I beg to support the amendment"

12-20 P.M. The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh:—"My Lord, in rising to extend my whole-hearted support to the amendment moved by my Hon'ble friend, Rai Bahadur Sita Nath Roy, I cannot help expressing my regret on the contentious provision embodied in the latter portion of section 4 (1) of the Bill and on the controversy which it has given rise to. I am glad the responsibility of framing this provision in a consolidating Bill does not rest upon any of the non-official Members of this Council, and I could only wish that the Government would have been better advised not to have made a departure from the principle they have been adhering to, by initiating in the above-mentioned section a new method—rather a novel method—of determining the rate of assessment on assessable incomes of agricultural and landowning classes. It will show in what direction the wind is blowing, and will agitate and open the eyes of those who as a class, I should say, a most important, serviceable and loyal class in this country, have been slumbering under a sense of self-complacency that justice will run on its even course, and that the protection of their rights does not require any exertion on their part for their maintenance. They have implicit confidence in the sense of the justice of Government and are still under the impression that no agitation is needed to obtain it.

"My Lord, in 1886, while introducing the License Tax Amendment Bill, Sir Auckland Colvin quoted a passage of Sir John Strachey, which runs thus :—

'It would be hardly possible to maintain the cesses on the land if the tax on the trades were abolished. It might be more possible to defend the abolition of cesses on land and the maintenance of the tax on trades,' and then said 'what was said by Sir John Strachey in 1880 is equally applicable now.' My Lord, in 1918, we are told by the Hon'ble Finance Member in charge of the Bill that 'Even if we were to tax agricultural profits now—which we are not proposing to do—it would be a mere question of expediency.' Mark what a change! A marvellous change! In fact quite a reversal in the policy within a period of 31 years.

"My Lord, the objectionable portion of section 4 (1) has given rise to much anxiety and uneasiness and will be a cause of discontent to the land-holders if allowed to stand in the Bill when it passes into Law. The very day when the Bill was introduced in this Council, serious objection was taken to this provision, and since then that opposition had still more gained strength by the facts that have come to light from the Financial Statement and by the strong disapproval with which it has been received by our constituencies

"It is said, my Lord, that the Bill does not aim at raising money but in effect it does, and at a time when no special necessity for such an addition to our finances has been definitely shown to the Council. We have not to face any deficit this year, and it is expected that no financial difficulties will have to be met next year. I will not dilate more on this point as the inadvisability of adding more burden upon the shoulders of the people, whether by direct or indirect taxation, under these circumstances was forcibly urged upon the Council when the Bill was introduced.

"My Lord, I will not at present say anything whether land is sacred and should remain immune from further such like imposts and whether the land revenue is land tax or rent These are subtle questions requiring the ingenuity of political economists for solution. But I cannot refrain from stating one fact—a bare fact—and inviting the attention of the Council and your Excellency's Government towards it. It is this that the landholding class—no matter whether of temporarily settled or of permanently settled areas—do claim strongly and rightly that no direct or indirect encroachment can justly be made upon the customary margin of profits that they were enjoying before the advent of the British rule and that was implicity or explicitly guaranteed to them by the engagements into which they entered with the Government. I will not enter into that history. It is a long story Now, my Lord, the above mentioned provision of the Bill does encroach upon that right. My Hon'ble friend will urge that it is not proposed to add any tax on land, I fail to comprehend how, when agricultural incomes will be taken into account in determining rates of assessment, it is not taxing land, indirectly though it may be. Had this been a War measure we would have submitted to it without raising a voice because we are pledged, and in our own interest, to loyally co-operate with the British Government in bringing this war to a victorious end; but this is not the case. The Bill, which we are about to pass, will stand on the Statute-book permanently.

"My Lord, a great principle is involved in the section above referred to, and I feel I am justly entitled to beg the Council to accept the amendment that has been moved. It is not in the interest of big landholders that I am speaking. Small and petty landed proprietors, whose number is very considerable and even tenants and cultivators would be affected more adversely and harshly by the said provision than big Zamindars. Even heavily encumbered proprietors will not escape from the purview of the section. Petty proprietors realising the unreliability and the vicissitudes to which their properties are subjected, have begun to enter into other professions and businesses as well. It would be an easy matter for assessing officers to bring to the prescribed minimum their agricultural incomes by adding together the rents they realise from their tenants and the estimated value of their agricultural produce from their sir lands under their cultivation for assessing their non-agricultural incomes with higher rates than otherwise they would have been assessed. Similar will be the fate of tenants and cultivators. Big proprietors may better be left out of consideration because they are gradually becoming an eyesore to the socialistic tendencies of the present age. Is it not in-explicable, my Lord, that on one side the Government prompted by the beneficent motives of duty affords relief through the agency of the Court of Wards to encumbered proprietors and on the other side by the above mentioned section will add the burden of taxation over them ? I am afraid and my fears are based on the experience that I have of such matters that the said provision will give a good handle to patwaries, kanungos, and others to harass the people of the rural areas by over-estimating the profits of agricultural produce in order to make non-agricultural incomes liable to be assessed by higher rates.

"I admit, My Lord, that land was taxed under the Income-tax Act of 1860, and similar might have been the case in subsequent Acts My submission is, and on strong grounds, that the principle of levying income-tax on land was a wrong principle, and the Government themselves changed it and rectified that error in 1886 by the Income-tax Act of that year. Unless there be any special, emergent and imperative necessity, my further submission is that it will be improper for the Council to repeat a bad precedent of 1860 which the Government themselves have discarded in 1886.

"I may, in passing remind the Council that 1886 was a deficit year, while this is a surplus year. In that year the Government were under the urgent necessity of augmenting their resources. But on the consideration that every bit of land was taxed with land-revenue and cess, even under those circumstances justice prevailed and the incomes from land were deliberately excluded from further taxation under the Income-Tax Act.

"My Lord, whenever the question of levying any further tax on landholders arises, it is more than often forgotten what further unavoidable charges besides revenue and cesses they have to meet from their incomes, and what services they have to render to the State entailing still further calls upon their purse

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has laid great stress on equalising the rates of assessment on landholding classes with those on other assessees. I am afraid the Hon'ble Member has not paid due regard to all these considerations. The argument of equity and justice pressed so forcibly and ostensibly in support of this provision does not hold good. Was there no thought paid to equity and justice when agricultural incomes were excluded from the purview of the Income-Tax Act of 1886? That Act, too, provided for a graduated rate of assessment From the speech delivered by Sir Auckland Colvin at the time of introducing that Bill from which I have already made a quotation above, it is apparent that that Act was passed to make rates equitable. Land is separately taxed with land-revenue, and the income arising therefrom is only an income accruing after the payment of a tax or rent or by whatever name it may be called, and so an Income-Tax Act ought not to apply to such incomes either directly or indirectly. Are not the cesses and rates on every land owner, from the smallest to the biggest, a kind of income-tax in another shape ? If that is not so, I question the justice of their levy. In the end, with due respect I must express my surprise for there being no provision in the Bill for determining the rates of assessment of the assessable incomes of those who may have large properties and incomes outside British India.

"My Lord, will things be allowed to come to such a pass as far as the land owning classes are concerned as to make the old Indian saying more or less applicable that eight pumpkins for sale and 9 tax gatherers to take one each."

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi, of Kasimbazar.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi of Kasimbazar :—" My Lord, I beg to accord my heartiest support to the amendment which is now before us. It appears to me that two quite different principles have been sought to be incorporated in section 4 of the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to income-tax The section begins by stating that 'agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax,' but it continues to lay down the provision that 'such income in excess of R1,000 which has been received by an assessee in the previous year shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income otherwise chargeable to income-tax under the Act'. Now, my Lord, I beg to state that these two are not consistent propositions, and should not find a place in any Act which does not seek to cast to the winds the elementary principles of jurisprudence. Sir William Meyer cannot in the same breath and in the same section of an Act exempt agricultural income from the operation of the income-tax, and also include it within the other incomes of a person for the purpose of raising the rates at which such an assessee should be called upon to pay the tax in question. It is no statesmanship to blow hot and cold at the same time. If Sir William Meyer or the Government of India are anxious to tap anybody's agricultural income, they should do it in a more frank and straightforward manner rather than by laying down a proposition, to begin with, to the effect that such incomes shall not be chargeable to income-tax. My Lord, in a country like India, a straightforward policy always appeals, and every man who has any large agricultural income would be only too glad to come forward to help the State at a time of difficulty if only the Government would want it in the right way. But Sir William Meyer distinctly has given us to understand that he does not intend to raise money or revenue by this new Act Then why, my Lord, should an income which is to be exempted on principle from the income-tax be made to swell the figures, though in a very indirect and inadequate way, of that tax? Underlying the section in question there run, therefore, two conflicting ideas which can neither be reconciled nor justified. Their juxtaposition in the same Act would be a blot on our Statute-book.

12-34 P.M.

"My Lord, my second reason for supporting this amendment is based on the higher ground of equity. We have been told, my Lord, that this Act has been framed only with a view to consolidate the law on the subject, to remove inequalities in the incidence of the income-tax, and to re-adjust existing anomalies and differences. My Lord, in bringing agricultural income within the purview of the Act for the purpose of determining rates of assessment, the authors of this Act have evidently forgotten two very important conditions of Indian life. One is that agricultural income does not at present possess any immunity from taxation, for, in addition to the payment of the necessary land-revenue, which in some parts of the country comes to nearly 50 per cent of the actual income, it is also chargeable to road-cess and public works cess and some other minor cesses, and, as such, it does not escape from contributing towards the cost of the administration, and there is therefore no injustice to remove when it is not directly chargeable to income-tax. Agricultural income, from time immemorial, has been associated with many heavy and onerous domestic and social liabilities in the economy of Indian life, while incomes from the professions, trade, commerce or industries are comparatively free from them and are not chargeable to any other Imperial or Provincial tax. That makes a world of difference in India, and should be duly taken-note of by all men who are entrusted with the task of making legislations for us. Far from removing any unwholesome privilege, the Act would only be adding to the burdens of an already too overburdened community. In that sense, section 4 seeks to violate a golden rule of equity and can claim no moral justification. The second important condition of Indian life which the framers of this Act seem to have overlooked is the tradition of inviolability which has prompted and inspired owners of permanently settled estates in the country to turn, in the language of Kaye, the author of a very interesting history of the East India Company, large tracts of waste and forest lands into cultivated areas, and to free, as the late Mr. Rames Chandra Dutt so clearly proved, whole provinces from the grip of periodic famines. My Lord, I myself do not think that the Bengal Regulation I of 1793 is such a sacrosant document as, for reasons of state, cannot be tampered with, but if it has at all got to be treated as any other ordinary law of the land, let it be done on very sufficient grounds and in a very straight and frank way.

"My Lord, in section 4 of Lord Cornwallis' famous Regulation of 1793 occur the following words: 'no alteration will be made which they (the Zamindars, etc.), have respectively engaged to pay, but they and their heirs and lawful successors will be allowed to hold their estates at such assessment for ever.' My Lord, I will not try to read into this clause any interpretation of my own, for the words 'will be allowed to hold their estates at such assessment for ever' cannot be twisted to bear any other meaning than Lord Cornwallis had of them in India and Pitt in England. The understanding behind the words is too serious to be lightly thrown away for the purpose of an indirect and insufficient assessment or under cover of removing inequalities or adjusting incidence of taxation.

"My Lord, three important points emerge out of the discussion on this subject. The one is that agricultural income enjoys no such immunity from taxation which may be construed into a grievance by any class of people in this country The second is that section 4 contravenes some of the most well-known principles of jurisprudence and equity, and the third is that it treats with very scant courtesy one of the most important charters given by some of the earliest founders of the Indian Empire to men of my class. I would, therefore, ask the treasury benches to be so good as to accept the amendment now before the Council, and remove the sense of uneasiness which has exercised our mind for some weeks past over this unfortunate section" 12-48 P.M. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul:—"My Lord, in offering a few observations on this amendment, I may at the very outset point out that I do not belong to the permanent settled areas. Hence, I refrain from touching on that aspect of the question as to how it would affect the landholding classes there. I come from the temporary settled areas, and I think it to be my duty to convince this Council as to how unfairly the operations of this Act will affect those residing in such areas. With due deference to what has fallen from the Hon'ble Finance Member in his reply to the Hon'ble Mover, I beg to submit that I am still left unconvinced of the cogency of his arguments.

"It is unfortunate, my Lord, that the Government should have seen their way to insist upon retaining this clause which is of so controversial a nature, at this time of strain and general anxiety. The whole body of landholders from one end of the country to the other are opposed to it. Since the introduction of this measure, we have received a number of letters, representations and telegrams from the various bodies representing the interests of agricultural classes in this country. They are all unanimously opposed to this clause on principle and they strongly press for its deletion. They regard it as highly prejudicial to the agricultural and industrial interests of the country and think it most inequitable. I further wish to point out to this Council that this is not merely the opinion of the interested agricultural classes, rather this is what has been clearly urged by some of the respectable Chambers of Commerce who have given expression to their opinion in a similar strain. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce state that 'the policy adopted in the Bill cannot be justified by any principle of equity. The Committee strongly protests against the principle of bringing the agricultural income in any way within the purview of this Act.' They further go on to state that 'the Committee have observed with satisfaction that people having large agricultural incomes have been extending their activities to industrial and commercial lines. The action of the Government as proposed in the Bill will have a chilling effect on such activities and restrict their extension on other than agricultural lines.' Similarly, the Southern India Chamber of Commerce express as their deliberate opinion that it will be neither just nor expedient to subject him (cultivator) to the vexatious interference and inquisition of income tax officers, a course which in our opinion is bound to aggravate agrarian discontent.

"My Lord, after having received definite and clear opinions like these from altogether disinterested bodies, and after the emphatic protests entered at the time of the reference of the Bill to the Select Committee, not only by the Landholder members of this Council, but also by our talented friends representing other interests, such as the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea and Mr. Khaparde, this objectionable clause would be deleted from the Bill by the Select Committee, and it is a matter of keen disappointment to us all that the same has not been done. The Select Committee has thought it fit to retain this clause on the ground that 'It is a necessity, if graduated income-tax is collected on an equitable basis.' The Hon'ble Finance Member has reiterated the same argument just now. With regard to this I have only to point out that with a view to be fair and just to one interest, you should not be unjust to the other. So far as the agricultural income is concerned the principle of graduated amount is already applied to it automatically in the temporary settled areas. At the time of the fixation of rents and revenues, the persons holding different kinds of lands have to pay varying rates according to different soil—units, fixed by the Settlement Officers. The owners and occupiers of inferior lands have to pay a less amount for the same area than that paid by the holders of superior ones. Then, again, the tenants and landholders are classified according to their financial conditions under different heads, namely, A, B, C, and D and the average rate arrived at is reduced in the case of such tenants and landholders as are not in good condition. Is this not a fact? Is this not in itself a graduated scale? Let any one acquainted with the working of the Settlement machinery contradict this and I shall bow to his decision. When the wealthier landholders have already to pay higher rates than those who are not so well-off, I fail to understand how could the same income be fairly taken into account again for the purpose of graduating the income-tax in the case of taxable incomes.

"My Lord, I hope the representatives of other interests in this Council will not object to the deletion of this clause. They will not please forget, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Maharajah of Kasimbazar, that we the agriculturists including Zamindars and Tenants have already to part with more than 50 per cent. of our agricultural profits to the State, in the shape of land-revenue and have further to pay other cesses, such as Education cess, Road cess, and Post Office cess. Can any one say that the proceeds from these imposts have been utilized solely for the benefits of the agriculturists? Is it not a fact that a substantial portion of these go to add to the comforts and conveniences of other classes and have the cultivators ever grudged that? Thus in view of the the fact that landholders have already to pay more than other classes and that they have various other obligations to discharge towards their poorer tenants during the time of famine and distress which others have not, is it not a real hardship to them that they should be compelled to pay more than other business-men, simply because of their agricultural incomes? Well, my Lord, we are again and again being reminded that the agricultural incomes will still continue under exemption; they will only be taken into account for the purpose of determining the rate of assessment on the taxable income and the landholders will not be losers, and this is what we are unable to understand: Will not a landholder business-man have to pay an additional rate over and above what would be paid by a non-landholding business-man? To illustrate this an instance may be given of two persons—A and B both carrying on the same business and deriving the same income, say Rs. 10,000, of these A happens to be a landholder, with a gross agricultural income of Rs. 50,000. Under the present income-tax, both will have to pay at the same rate and the same amount, namely, Rs. 468 at 9 pies per rupee but under the proposed Bill A, who is a landlord, will have to pay Rs. 3,750 at the rate of one anna per rupee, while B, who is not a landlord, will pay Rs. 468 only. Thus, although agricultural incomes are said to be exempted, yet in fact they have been indirectly taxed to the extent of Rs. 3,282 nearly 7 per cent. of the agricultural profits and this is what we take a very strong exception to, as a matter of principle.

"I have to say one word more as regards the aspersions cast against the landholders with regard to our attitude of opposition towards this particular clause of the Bill. It is said that at this time of trial, when the Empire is involved in a deadly struggle; and stands in need of more money, the landholders are unwilling to accept this clause, as they do not wish that their pockets should be affected. Well, my Lord, I emphatically say that it is not so. So far as the Statement of Objects and Reasons of this piece of legislation can reveal, this Bill has not been introduced as a war measure to raise more funds. But if that be so, let the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill state frankly that he wants more money for the exigencies of the war, and I on behalf of my landholder friends here in this Council and outside will assure him that a statement to that effect will disarm all oppositions and we will be prepared to subject ourselves to as much additional burdens, as may be necessary, for the successful prosecution of the war. But it is because we honestly believe that this is not a war-measure, because we think that the introduction of this novel principle is merely a thin end of the wedge and has come to stay permanently in the Statute-book, and because we notice that it has already caused a great mischief by creating alarm amongst the agricultural classes that we have opposed it, and we earnestly hope that the clause will be deleted even at this belated stage."

12-58 P.M.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Saiyed Allahando Shah:—"My Lord, the amendment proposed by my friend the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur has my fullest support. The last portion of section 4 which provides that agricultural income above Rs. 1,000 shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income otherwise chargeable to income-tax, will form a source of hardship and harassment to the agriculturists. The net agricultural income of the zamindar represents his net profit after he has paid a heavy land-tax on his gross income. As it has already been taxed once, it should not be taxed again. Besides, the income-tax officers are generally strict in their assessment. They being generally Revenue Officers, zamindars are afraid of them and would not dare to appeal against their assessment. The measure thus, my Lord, will prove to be a source of harassment for them. Generally the zamindars for want of purchasers store their produce to avoid consequent loss which will accrue to them by selling it at very low rates, and sell it only when the rates are favourable. It often happens that in this way they suffer also a loss. Their necessities are numerous and when the Government demand is pressing, they sell their produce at whatever rates they can get for them. I am afraid that this transaction of the cultivator will be considered by the income-tax assessing department as trade transactions, and this ordinary income from the sale of produce of land will be considered as the zamindar's income from business sources, and he will thus be liable to income-tax on it, thereby adding to the already overburdened and meagre means of the tiller of the soil. The zamindars in my part of the province are a class of persons who have not benefited from the Sarkar on auspicious occasions, such as the Coronation Durbar of the King-Emperor, and they are always liable to enhancements of land-revenue on the occasion of every periodical settlement which comes after every ten or twenty years. The zamindars generally being ignorant and illiterate do not appeal against assessments, and whatever tax is levied or whatever they lose in the sale of the produce of land they accept it resignedly. I commend their condition to your Lordship's notice, and in strongly supporting my Hon'ble friend's motion, beg to submit it for your Lordship's acceptance, and trust it will be accepted by Government so that zamindars may not have any anxiety or harassment at the hands of income-tax officials."

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Sastri.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Sastri :—" My Lord, my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shukul made an appeal to those in the Council who represent interest other than the landed interest. I do not represent the landed interest, but what other interest I represent it is difficult even for me to say. I own no land and pay no land-tax. I make no income which comes within the Hon'ble the Finance Member's sweep. I pay no income-tax. I contribute, so far as I can see, nothing to the State except a certain amount of agitation, which I am firmly persuaded is entirely wholesome. Yet I do not wish, like many who have not, to deprive those that have of what they have or any part of it. I wish to be just to everybody. Looking at the Bill with an impartial eye, I am unable to discover that it violates any pledges given by Government or that it presses unduly on the landed interest. Agricultural incomes have been long exempt from income-tax and under the Bill as I see it they will be still exempt from the income-tax. But it is asserted that they are indirectly taxed. Are they? I am honestly trying to find out whether agricultural incomes are even indirectly taxed. I am unable to persuade myself that the answer is a fair affirmative. What I find under the Act is that people who have incomes from two sources, one of them agricultural, have their income reckoned in a certain way and the effect of it is that on their taxable income they will have to pay income-tax at a higher rate than if they had no agricultural income. Now, my Lord, that does not mean that agricultural income is indirectly taxed. It is merely taken into calculation. It does not mean that a landlord who has other income will be obliged under the new Act to take anything out of his agricultural income. The worst which will happen to him, even if the highest part of the Schedule is applied, is that he will have to pay under the taxable non-agricultural income one anna in the rupee. Now it seems to me that it is no justification for saying that the agricultural income is indirectly taxed. But perhaps what is meant is this. Although it has not been stated, in my search for the truth I am endeavouring to put it to myself in this way. Perhaps what they mean is that the State has a certain claim on sources of income, and when that claim is satisfied, the State has to ignore what is left of that source of income. If agricultural incomes once pay to the State what is required of them, whether in the permanently settled or in the temporarily settled areas, then when the land-tax has been paid, the Government ought entirely to ignore the balance of the income that is left over; Government have no right to think of it at all. That is to say, when a man has paid in respect of his land, whatever is due to the State, he must be considered to have no agricultural income at all for other taxation. Well, there may be something in that, and I have not heard from the Hon'ble the Finance Minister any reply to that argument. If we say that agricultural incomes are indirectly taxed, it seems to me to be an over-statement of the case. But if the case is as I have stated now that even in respect of the income-tax Government has no right to consider the agricultural income in respect of which the State demand is already fully satisfied, there has been still no answer to it. But although the answer to it has not been given, it occurs to me that there has been surely a certain amount of inequality in the working of the income-tax which the amendment under the Bill now seeks to remedy.

"I think, my Lord, the equity of the case requires that the amendment suggested by the Hon'ble Finance Minister in clause 4 should go through. And in respect of agricultural incomes I am aware that the landlords here have put it to us clearly that if the State is in real need of money, or if the money raised from them under the Act is going to be applied to purposes like primary education or local sanitation which they have at heart as much as anybody else, they would have no objection to the tax. Their objection seems to receive additional force because it is made part of the income-tax, and how income-tax is spent nobody seems to know precisely because it forms a part of the general revenue. Now to these objections it is very difficult to give a satisfactory answer, but I reckon, my Lord, that it will be difficult to give a satisfactory answer in respect of any taxation to which people object. The Hon'ble Finance Minister referred to the way in which all taxation is resisted by people who have to pay it, and one remembers the way in which landlords in England resisted the super-tax when it was imposed a few years ago, using expressions like spoliator, plunderer, confiscator, and many in the enjoyment of princely incomes, who never knew what to do with their incomes, were heard to say in both Houses, 'well, all our incomes are taxed away by Mr. Lloyd George.' Now we have not heard to-day, I am happy to think, grievous exaggerations of that kind, and I am in a position to pay a compliment to my landlord friends that in their protests to-day they have shown a great deal of moderation. I say I appreciate that; but notwithstanding my appreciation, I am unable to sympathise with their standpoint. I still think that as they are in a position to pay more than others, the State is laying no undue burden on them in asking that their agricultural incomes should be merely taken into account when the amount of their taxable income is reckoned up."

1-3 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah:—"My Lord, I entirely agree with Mr. Sastri that the landholders have put their case before the Council with great moderation. Nobody desires that the landholders, or the zemindars, because they happen to be rich or because they happen to have plenty of money, should be taxed or attacked in season and out of season, for raising the revenue, but, my Lord, I must on this occasion speak out my own conviction with reference to clause 4. It seems to me, my Lord, that the provisions of clause 4 have been very much misunderstood by the landholders who are my colleagues in this Council and also outside.

"It is said that the Government is not frank. It is said that you are not going at this business in a straight manner; it is said that it is a breach of faith and breach of Permanent Settlement and violation of what was said by Lord Cornwallis Well, my Lord, I cannot support any of these allegations. As far as the question of the Bengal Regulation and Permanent Settlement is concerned I shall deal with it later on, but I see no want of frankness, I see nothing but straightforward business. Here is the Bill, clause 4 speaks for itself The Government have placed it before us and the country. Any one who reads that clause can see at once what the object of it is. Of course I do not wish, my Lord, to be a champion of the Government, but I think, in fairness it might be said that clause 4 is very clear, and what does it mean? It means a very simple thing indeed. It says, in the first instance, that agricultural income is not chargeable to income-tax. That does not mean, if I may remind my Hon'ble friends there, that the agricultural income is not chargeable for ever, it only means under this Act and nothing more. But while making that clear, otherwise it may lead to some confusion or it may drag in the agricultural income also, it says, "but it shall be taken into account for the purpose of assessing income," other than agricultural income, so as to get a higher rate. Well now, in the Statement of Objects and Reasons annexed to the Bill it is made very clear as to what the object of this clause was. It says this—

> 'But with the present system of income-tax gradation, under which an assessee's rate of assessment increases in accordance with his means, it is obviously equitable that in assessing the rate on which a person should pay on his non-agricultural income, his income from agriculture should be taken into account. Otherwise a wealthy landlord possessed also of some non-agricultural income might pay on latter at rates intended only for the poor.'

Accordingly the Bill provides for the 'inclusion of net agricultural income' in 'total income.' Therefore the object of this clause is a very simple one. The normal rate of income-tax under this graduated scale is one anna, but a concession is made in a graduated scale in favour of the poor, and if you look at the scale, which is given in the Bill, it is clear how it runs. You start with 4 pies in the rupee and you go up to one anna according to the income varying from Rs. 2,000 to 25,000. The whole object of that is that the normal rate is one anna, but there is a concession made in favour of the poor. Well now I have not yet heard first of all why the zemindars, who get large incomes, should not pay at the normal rate of one anna, and that is a question which the oponents of this clause 4 have got to answer. It is not correct to say that they will have to pay super-tax as far as I understand this Bill. The question of super-tax is not touched by clause 4.

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah.]

All that they will be liable for under the Act would be to pay at the rate of one anna at the very most and nothing more. Therefore, my Lord, it seems to me that the Bill, looked at from that point of view, and that is the only point of view it seems to me it is, to use the words of the opponents, in consonance with the principles of jurisprudence and equity and not opposed to them at all. But grave fear in the minds of my Hon'ble colleagues here is that this is, as it were the thin end of the wedge, and that it is doing something indirectly which you dare not do directly. Well, now, my Lord, if this is equitable, if this is just as I have already explained that in my opinion it is, what is the answer to it? On what ground can this be resisted? The ground that is put forward in the first instance is that agricultural income is not taxable, and therefore what you cannot do directly, you should not do indirectly. Now is this so. Is land not taxable?

"Now, my Lord, I may remind the Council that in 1860 the Income-Tax Act was passed, and that Act included income derived from land, which was taxed directly. I wish this question had not been raised by the zemindars and I wish that they had not put their case so high as they have done. But as, my Lord, they have done it, I think an answer is necessary, and I will point out that when that Act of 1860 was passed the Government, who then had before them the Regulation of 1793 took this position. This is what was said on behalf of the Government by Mr. Sconce; I refer to the proceedings of the Council in 1860 'Now in the first place he would ask the Council to look to the terms of Regulation I of 1793 which legalised the settlement of estates in Bengal. The declaration made by this law was this, that the zemindars, their heirs, and successors should hold their estates for ever at the assessment which by the Settlement they had engaged to pay; and the clear purpose of this declaration he took to be that the re-assessment of the estates in question was for ever barred: Regulation I, of 1793 undoubtedly was an ample and complete guarantee that no re-settlement of the estates referred to in the Law should ever take effect; but, on the other hand, it seemed to him that the Law gave no guarantee that the proprietors of those estates should never be called upon to aid in the relief of the future necessities of this Government, by contributing according to their means or incomes. It was almost superfluous to say that no such provision was contained in Regulation I of 1793 which, he might repeat, did no more than perpetuate the Revenue Settlement which had been already executed.'

"Then, my Lord, he further goes on to say—

'But it seemed to him that the arguments relied upon to support the claims of zemindars to be exempted from the present Bill pointed more to the rights vested respectively in the State and in zemindars previous to the Permanent Settlement than to that Settlement itself; for example, in the petition presented to this Council by the proprietors of Permanently Settled Estates, it was stated that the revenue paid to the Government was a deduction made from the gains of landowners; and again, in the 20th paragraph of the same petition, that the tax (that is, the revenue) was taken from the landowner for all time, and was a permanent diminution of his property and capital. The right asserted by the zemindars in these words seemed to him to go to the root of the matter. Was the revenue assessed a tax in the sense here asserted, that is, a deduction charged upon the profits or gains of zemindars and diminishing their gains to the same extent, or was it levied in virtue of a substantive and paramount title vested in the State? The Law of 1793, he thought, left no doubt on this point. Let him refer the Council first to Regulation 19 of 1793, of which the first words were these, that—

'By the ancient law of the country, the ruling power is entitled to a certain proportion of the produce of every beegah of land, demandable in money or kind, according to local custom.'

'Here obviously the right to revenue from land was said to be inherent in the State and not to be a deduction by way of tax from the profit of the proprietor of land, and the Council will find the same fact brought out in still stronger light in Regulation VIII of 1793.'

"Now, my Lord, if this position is a correct one, then the argument that has been advanced, and rather emphatically advanced, namely, that the Government of this country has no right to tax agricultural income, cannot stand, because it is quite clear that in 1860 it was so done. Then, my Lord, it does not stop there. This Act of 1860 ceased to operate in 1865. As I understand, my Lord, that the Income-tax Act is really brought into operation because the State requires money and this is one of the modes of raising the revenue which the State requires, as soon as that necessity disappeared the Act ceased to operate in 1865. Then, my Lord, in 1867, the Act was again brought into operation, and that Act excluded agricultural income. But again in 1869 what is known as the Certificate-tax Act was converted into a general Income-tax Act and that again included agricultural income...."

[Mr. Muhammad Ali Jinnah ; Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"Did that Act exclude agricultural income?"

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"No. The 1867 Act excluded agricultural income, but the 1869 Act included it again.

"Then, my Lord, it seems that again there was no Act in operation for some time. But in 1877 the License-tax Act was brought into operation and then in 1886 that License-tax Act was amended and the Income-tax Act of 1886 came into operation. Therefore, my Lord, one of the arguments which was advanced by my Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Kassimbazar, namely, that this was a violation of the Permanent Settlement, cannot stand. The next argument, with which I have already dealt, was that clause 4 is opposed to the principles of jurisprudence and equity, and cannot stand. His next argument was that this will give no immunity to the agricultural income, which really comes to the same thing. Therefore, my Lord, I submit that no case has been made out on that ground at all.

"Then it is said that if this Bill comes into operation there will be a tremendous harassment caused to the landlords in the working of the Act. Well, my Lord, so far as that is concerned, I see that an amendment has already been made in that clause by the Select Committee which probably will, to a very great extent, remove that complaint. But still if there is a certain amount of difficulty in carrying out this Act, then, my Lord, if Hon'ble Members were anxious and really wished to avoid that, I am sure, if they had brought in an amendment which would have appealed to this Council, that amendment would have been accepted. But it seems to me, my Lord, that that is merely one of the arguments employed in order to get rid of clause 4, and it does not seem to me to be a real grievance. If it was a real grievance, I am quite sure that, with the experience at the back of so many Hon'ble Members, an amendment would have been brought in to put that difficulty or that danger right.

"Well then, my Lord, what is the other ground on which this clause should not be accepted by this Council. These are the only important arguments. But then the Hon'ble Mr. Shukul said if it was necessary, if the State required money for the purpose of the war or some other exigency of the State, he would be only too glad to acquiesce in this clause 4. It is quite correct, as far as I understand, to say that this clause was not introduced for the purpose of getting money. I believe, and as far as I can make out, very little money will after all come into the coffers of Government through this provision. He said that if it was necessary for the prosecution of the war the Government should have come forward and said so, and probably in that case they might even directly tax agricultural income, and I am sure Mr. Shukul would be glad and many other landholders would be only too glad, to submit to it. But just as you would submit to that, may I not appeal to my Hon'ble friends here that you should also consider whether it is equitable, whether it is just, whether it is fair and, if so, should you not submit to that? On what ground can you say it is not fair, it is not equitable; and if it is fair, if it is equitable, and just as you would submit to the demands of the war, so you must submit to the claims of justice. If here you have an income-tax, which has for its principle the graduated tax, then by what reason can you say that a landholder who has got a large income from agricultural sources should not pay the higher rate? Then, my Lord, it was said that you will prevent industry and commerce being helped by landholders. Well to that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has already replied. But, my Lord, it is not going to be such a severe calamity after all, because really it will only affect those landholders who have got large incomes; it will not affect the landholders who have small incomes. If you have a small income, you will not be taxed; but if you have a big agricultural income and at the same time are making money in other directions, in industry, in commerce or money-lending, etc., and your total income is Rs. 25,000 and upwards, then you are required to pay at the rate of one anna. I really cannot see why my friends should grudge paying at the normal rates and why they should raise all sorts of fears which are quite unnecessary; nor do I understand why they should have raised such a huge issue at this moment as to whether the Permanent Settlement can be touched or cannot be touched, or whether agricultural income can be taxed or not.

"My Lord, I oppose this amendment entirely."

The Council here adjourned for Lunch till 2-35 P.M.

2-35 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, I welcome the opportunity of speaking on this amendment, because I am confident that the provision which we have made in the Bill by clause 4 is a just one, because, in my view, it is essential to the fair working of a graduated income-tax in this country, and lastly, because it is a matter of great importance to the Government to know what attitude is to be taken in this Council upon a question of such importance, and if I may say so, at a moment of such importance in the politics of India. I propose to refer in the first place to the speech that was made, when the Bill was introduced, by my friend the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. The Hon'ble Pandit charged us, if I may use the word, with bringing in this clause as a device for further taxation. I use his own word. My Lord, that is language which the Government must repudiate......"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"May I rise to a point of order, my Lord, to point out that my friend is not quoting me correctly? I said if you want to tax agricultural incomes, tax it in a straightforward manner and not indirectly as you are doing."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"I will read the words to which I referred and I think I shall be justified in what I said. They are:—'By this device the rate of taxation for persons who happen to be the unfortunate recipients of an income from agricultural sources is raised.' 'Device' is the word which contains the sting to which I alluded. I say this is not a device for raising taxation, is not a device of any kind at all. The reason for the insertion of this clause in the Bill is a very simple one. So long as we had the old Income-tax Act of 1886 everybody was taxed at the same rate and agricultural income was exempted; it was not material to deal with agricultural income at all. But the moment you go a step beyond that and have a graduated income-tax, it is essential to say one way or the other how agricultural incomes are to be treated. You have either to give them the benefit of what is really an exemption intended for the poor, or you have to bring them in as we have brought them in under clause 4 of the Bill. The scheme of the Bill, as has been rightly and sympathetically pointed out by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Jinnah, is, that we propose to tax at the general rate of one anna all round, exactly in the same manner as under the English Income-tax there is one rate for everybody, with exemptions for poor people below that rate; we have adopted the same principle, though not in the same form of words. In this Act the principle is that the one anna rate is the main rate applicable, and that those who are poorer should receive certain exemptions. This appears from the fact that the companies pay at the one anna rate, that firms pay at the one anna rate; that is the main rate. The lower rates are alleviations in favour of the poorer people and smaller incomes. Therefore, we were faced at the very outset in drafting this Bill with the question, 'Are we to allow agricultural incomes to come in under these abatements for the relief of the poorer people, or are we to treat their possessors on the natural and logical basis that being rich men they should not have advantage of the relief which was intended for the poor? Now, that is the genesis, the whole genesis and the only genesis of this clause. There was no device in it to obtain further taxation by indirect means, nor indeed do we suppose that we shall get any great additional revenue by it. That had nothing to do with the object of the clause. The object of the clause was to meet this difficulty. Directly you get a graduated income-tax, you have got to do one thing or the other, to treat the big landowners as if they were poor men or to treat them as if they were rich men and leave them to come in at the one anna rate or any lower rate according to their station in life and the goods that have been bestowed upon them. My Lord, that is all that I think I need say in answer to the Hon'ble Pandit's speech. It was a good debating point no doubt to say that this, assuming it to be a device for taxation, ought not to have been brought in an ordinary Bill; that we ought to have waited till after the Financial Statement was made, ought to have treated it as a finance Bill to raise further taxation; but that only means that the Hon'ble Pandit's objection would be removed if we had brought in clause 4 as a separate Bill by itself. I am sure the Council would not desire that such a subterfuge as that should be adopted.

"Passing on to the more important points that arise on this amendment, one cannot help noticing that there are among the non-official Members of the Council to-day at least two parties. There is a party of progressives and, if I may use the term, a party of the landlords. I can make no other division, the line of cleavage is an illogical one and perhaps an unfortunate one, but it seems to have been very clearly marked by Hon'ble Members who have already spoken on this amendment. To what I would call the party of progress and from whom I expect sympathy in every thing I say to-day, I shall say very little. To the party of landowners, or rather of landlords as I prefer to put it, for that is the real party, there are many things I desire to say in the short time that is available to-day. The great argument that has been used is that this is the thin end of the wedge. One expects it, it is a natural argument, and I hope to meet it as frankly as it has been raised. Is it the thin end of the wedge? Yes and No. It is the thin end of the wedge certainly if that means that if clause 4 is to find its place in the Act, which I hope we shall pass, the unreasonably favoured position which the landlords now occupy under the existing Income-tax Act, now that a graduated scale has been introduced, will be put an end to. To that extent it is the thin end of the wedge, and it is a wedge that I hope may be driven home to the hilt. But if it means that this is merely a prelude to the taxation of agricultural incomes generally then I say it is not. My Hon'ble friend, the Finance Member, has told the Council more than once that there is no present intention, no present intention whatever, of taxing agricultural incomes. But the Council will remember the note of warning that was sounded by him last year and repeated this year. If necessity arises to tax agricultural incomes, then these great sources of wealth in this country, for the necessities of the war or for other important expenditure, must be tapped. I understand from my landlord friends in this Council that there is no objection to taxation on these lines. But inasmuch as there is no present intention of taxing agricultural incomes, the argument of the thin end of the wedge has no real application. That has been emphasized by my Hon'ble colleagues speaking on behalf of Government.

"Speaking for myself, however, I have no hesitation in saying in this Council that additional taxation upon the larger incomes in this country, from whatever source derived, will come under any form of popular government that we may have in the future of India. It will come as surely as night follows day. We have been told over and over again of the poverty of the people. Do you believe, does any Hon'ble Member of this Council believe, that if you put the strings in the hands of these poverty-stricken people they will spare the rich, that they will not tighten up taxation on every source of income which is enjoyed by the rich? Will they spare (if I may use the expression which my friend Raja Rampal Singh used), will they spare the landlord's 'customary margin of profit?' Do you think that that is likely? Are a number of the landholder Members of this Council contemplating, with the earnest hopes and the aspirations that they have, that we are going to make an advance towards popular government in India? Have you all asked for it, have you pressed it? If you have, surely you have counted the cost. No popular form of government came to any country yet without an increase of taxation upon the rich. It is the popular party that taxes the rich for the poor, and you cannot look forward to any advance in the polity of India towards that goal, to which we all in this Council aspire, without heavier taxation. Taxation must come, taxation will come and taxation ought to come, for it is only under a popular form of government that you can get real taxation of the rich for the benefit of the poor. Therefore that party in this Council, be they landlords only or be they also progressives, must face this as an absolutely essential necessity of any progress towards popular government.

"My Lord, I remember a certain historical document which has been very much before us recently, and as I look round this Council and see the faces of many of the signatories of that document, I wonder whether there will be 19 Indian Members who will vote for clause 4 of this Bill. This is at all events some test of the earnestness of their protestations You will be judged in the future by your deeds and not by your words. If you on paper claim to advance towards popular government, and repent the moment you find that popular government means additional taxation upon the the richer classes of the country, if you are going to rebel at the first prick of the public needs of which this clause is only prophetic I tremble to think what attitude will be taken by a new Council here under different conditions, when popular measures of taxation are brought before it. This is a question of very great importance.

"It will not be, I venture to predict, a bureaucratic government that will lay a heavier burden upon landed incomes, but when you have any form of popular government in this country the rich will not escape taxation on account of their landed interests. When I look at Bengal and remember the difficulties of arranging for the future of the province because more than 100 years ago the increasing incomes of Bengal were pledged away; when I am told in this Council that that is a pledge which is binding on any government beyond recall, I wonder how progress in Bengal is to be achieved. Do you think that the great incomes in Bengal will in future be exempt? I shall not be here, but I venture to prophesy that they will not. One of the first moves of a popular government will be to put taxation upon those shoulders that are best able to bear it. Income means what a man has in his pocket after he has paid all the costs of earning it,—what he has to spend. If he has a big pocket and it is full, a popular Government will not ask where the money came from; they will tax it. They will want the money and they will have it. I say to my landlord friends in this Council it is unwise to look forward to any form of popular government as I believe they do and to kick at the first prick of taxation. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sita Nath Ray used the argument 'do not do this, you will get so very little by it.' But, my Lord, if we are to get very little are not the great landlords going to pay very little ...?"

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur:—"May I rise to a point of order to ask whether this discussion as to whether the progressive party will kick at the pricks is relevant to the question before us?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"I am content to leave the Council to judge between me and my Hon'ble friend. I was saying that if we are to get very little, which I frankly believe to be the case, then the great landlords are going to pay very little, and I say that it is the first tiny prick that they are kicking at now.

[Sir George Lowndes.] [14TH MARCH, 1918]

This to me is a very great unwisdom. I do hope, and it is my last word in this connection at all events, that Members will not in the future come to their Council merely to support class interests, to defend themselves against every shadowy infringement of their class rights, I want them to come here as representatives who will 'watch and safeguard the interests of the masses and the agricultural population with whom they are in closer touch than any European officer, however sympathetic he may be.' Some of my Hon'ble friends will recognise the quotation. I say that if we are here merely to fight for our own class interests and to fight for our own pockets, we shall not be doing the great things for India which have been so often promised.

"Now, my Lord, I pass on to the definite arguments that have been used in support of this, to me very unfortunate opposition. I will deal first with a speech that was made here by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Bannerjea. He spoke of this Bill when it was first introduced with his usual fire and eloquence, but I thought at the time that it was prostituted to an unworthy cause. He asked very definitely for an answer from the Government whether this was not a breach of a pledge, a breach of a guarantee. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah has answered that question, but my Hon'ble friend asked for an answer from the Government, and, so far as I represent the Government, I give it to him as straight as he asked for it. I have no hesitation in saying that in my opinion there is no shadow of a breach of pledge. The words used by my Hon'ble friend were 'that when a solemn contract has been made on behalf of Government that pledge and that contract are never departed from.' I fully stand by those words, but I say that the solemn contract has not been made in this case, and if it has not, no pledge will be violated by the passing of clause 4 of this Bill. My task has been made easy by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah as he dealt with this question very fully, but I would just remind the Council of the position This pledge is said to have been given in 1793, when Lord Cornwallis' Proclamation was made and was embodied in the Regulation which has been referred to. Now the words of that Proclamation, in the first place, are significant in themselves. It declared that the jama which had been assessed on the lands of zemindars and other actual proprietors was fixed for ever. There is no mistake about the word used The word 'taxation' was not used or referred to in any way. Jama is the word which found a place in the Proclamation and Regulation, and we all know what jama is. Now has the jama ever been increased yet? I do not know what your popular Government will do, I am not dealing with that. But, as I say, have we altered, have we attempted to alter, or are we now attempting to alter it? I say in the next place that this is not even indirect taxation of the landlords. That contention was met by two of my Hon'ble friends, Mr. Shastri and Mr. Jinnah, who pointed that this is not in any sense indirect taxation. What the landholder has in his right-hand pocket, as representing his agricultural income, will remain there, but we are going to take a little more from the left-hand pocket which contains his taxable income. We are going to leave in his right pocket the over-flow of rupees and gold mohurs which are derived from the land. We do not want them; but we are going to take a little more out of his other pocket. That is not indirect taxation of the right-hand pocket. But supposing it was an indirect taxation of the landlord, how can we be precluded from doing so by this supposed pledge? Hon'ble Members of this Council know that in 1793 income-tax was not thought of anywhere in the British Empire—not merely in India, but not even in the British Islands. The first Income-tax Bill was brought in by Pitt in 1798, five years after Lord Cornwallis' Proclamation; the first Income-tax Act in India was enacted in 1860. How when you make a pledge in 1793 that the jama shall not be increased can it be suggested for a moment that you are prejudging what you may have to do more than a hundred years later by way of taxation? It is not an increase of the jama; it is not even an indirect increase of it Surely this argument on the score of breach of pledge cannot hold water for a moment. Pitt's Income-tax Bill was introduced in 1798, and it is interesting to follow the debate on it. The great orators of those days took very much the same point against it which has been taken here about the pledge. It was said it was a breach of faith by the

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sir George Lowndes.]

Government. They spoke then not for the landed classes, but for the funded classes, people who owned fortunes in the funds and who had paid large sums for annuities which Government had undertaken to pay them. They said 'This is a gross breach of faith; we have a pledge from you that we shall have these annuities which we have bought from you that we shall have the whole sum; and here you are taking away a part of it in the shape of income-tax.' Fox put forward this argument with all the eloquence that he was worth. The answer to it was possibly two-fold. The direct answer which was made by Pitt was this. He said 'If you call this a breach of the pledge that we gave when we promised to pay you so much on your annuities, can you tell me what form of taxation there is open to us? Can you tell me of any form of taxation which will not be indirect taxation on these annuities?' And I put the same question to the Council to-day. Can you tell me any form of indirect taxation or direct taxation which will not be in itself taxation on the pockets of the landholders? Put a tax on to tea, put a tax on to coffee, put a tax on to cotton goods, put a tax on to anything, he will have to pay it out of one pocket or the other. In that sense every form of taxation must be indirect taxation of income from land of whatever character it is. Therefore, I say, as was said in Parliament when the first Income-tax Act was introduced, this is not a breach of the pledge. If it is indirect taxation of the land, it is not within the pledge which was given, and the pledge does not come into our consideration to-day. The other answer that was given in Parliament was that the Income-tax Act of 1798 was carried by, I think, 170 and odd votes to 50, and that I hope will be the answer that will be given to the same argument in this Council to-day.

"So far with regard to the argument of the pledge, and of course this argument can only be used in respect of permanently settled land. It cannot be used with regard to temporarily settled lands, and therefore an entirely new argument on behalf of temporarily settled lands has to be brought up. It has been advanced by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shukul both on a previous occasion and again to-day. The argument that is brought up against this clause on behalf of temporarily settled lands is that the land is already over-burdened with taxation. I forget the exact words of my Hon'ble friend, but I think I have quoted them correctly. My Lord, is that so? Can you say that a man who, when he has paid all the expenses of his land and has got an income of, say, over a lakh of rupees still in that right-hand pocket, can you say that he is such a poor man, so heavily taxed already that we ought not to take another pie from him? Surely not. That is an argument, I suggest to the Council, which is inapplicable even to the temporarily settled lands, and nobody can venture to use it with regard to the permanently settled lands. There you have the huge incomes which have been derived from the increased value of the lands since 1793, and no one can suggest that taxation there on the land is overburdensome. Therefore, I say that argument cannot be applied to the permanently settled lands, and it is not applied to them. It is used only as an argument in regard to the temporarily settled lands. But surely the answer to that at once is we are not proposing to tax the people who have little incomes. We are not proposing to tax a man who has a thousand rupees only from his land—and that will cover nearly the whole class of the smaller landholders—he will be left out of account altogether. It is only when a man gets into several thousand rupees that he will feel the burden of this at all; he will not feel it when he gets one thousand or even 2,000 rupees. It is only when his agricultural income, plus his commercial income, brings him over the larger margins that he will feel it at all, and therefore it can only press in any way on those who have great incomes. And does it behove the men in possession of great incomes from the land to come and say 'We are very poor, you should not tax us?' Surely there is no force in that argument.

"Then my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shukul said that this tax will be oppressive to agriculture. Surely it will not. The large incomes of the landholders are not really derived from agricultural operations; they are derived from rents, and that is why I said some few minutes ago the term I would prefer to use would be landlords and not landholders. The big incomes which will be hit by this clause, which does not give them the exemption which we are giving to the poor man, will be those of the landlords, not the agriculturists. I say frankly, I feel confident, that there will be no burden laid upon the culture of the land by this clause. There was also an argument which I was surprised to hear from the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea on a previous occasion. He said that to solve their difficulties the landlords will pass the tax on to the tenants. My Hon'ble friend can tell a great deal better than I can whether that is possible under the Bengal Tenancy Act. He can tell better than I can whether the ryots in Bengal are of such a meek character that they will pay for the great landlords without complaining; but I confess I was surprised to hear the argument from my Hon'ble friend. The argument I would have expected from him was, 'if you are going to do this, tighten up the machinery of the Tenancy Act, make it quite certain that the rich will not pass the tax on to the poor.' And if there is any danger of the tax being passed on by the rich to the poor I am sure this Government will be sympathetic to any measure which may be introduced in order to prevent that result being attained......................."

The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"May I assure the Hon'ble Member that the zemindars will do nothing of the kind."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, if I could hear the Hon'ble Member better I might be able to reply to him, as well as to Mr. Bannerjea, but I have nothing to add. No doubt other Hon'ble Members will be able to meet anything I have put unfairly in my argument.

"I only desire to add one word. When I talk of the party of progress and so on it is not in any sense of mockery, but because I feel very deeply on this subject. It means a great deal to me, I am earnestly sympathetic with any reasonable ideas for the progress in the government of this country, and I do ask my Hon'ble friends to pause, whether they are themselves landlords or whether they are only those who are prepared to support the landlords, to pause before on this occasion they record a vote in favour of this amendment. I have seen in various publications that have reached me lately advertisements of the collected speeches of many of my Hon'ble friends. I hope that among those of men with whose aspirations I have the greatest sympathy, for whose eloquence I have the greatest respect, future editions will not have to perpetuate public speeches which acclaim the interests of the landlord class as against those of that coming 'people' whom they hope to represent in this Council."

3-5 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea:—"My Lord, my Hon'ble friend who has just sat down began by saying that there were in this Council the party of progress and the party of landlords. I think my Hon'ble friend would have been franker and more candid if he had just slightly changed his phraseology, and had observed that there were two parties, the party of progress and the party of re-action, the party of the landlords being identical with the party of re-action on the present occasion. My Lord, I belong, at any rate in connection with this amendment, to the party of landlords, and if I am to be told that I belong to the party of re-action because of my conviction in this matter, I may say this in reply, that this is the first time in my life-history when an indictment of this kind has been levelled against me. My Lord, I have always held aloft the banner of progress; I have incurred odium; I have incurred the resentment of the powerful; I have faced the penalties of prison-life in the discharge of those duties which I believe to be identified with the progress of the motherland, and I repel with indignation any suggestion which seems to imply that I belong to the party of re-action. My Lord, if in my heart of hearts and as the result of my deliberate conviction I feel that my friend's amendment has to be supported, am I to be diverted by one hairbreadth from my conviction and the verdict of my judgment by an allegation of this kind? I hope the record of my public life will enable me to face the charge now brought and perform my duty manfully in this Council.

"Then, my Lord, we have been told a great deal about popular government, and we have been reminded that when popular government comes, it will be necessary for us to impose additional taxation. Nobody is more cognisant of that fact than the leaders of the popular party. We know additional taxation will be a weapon in our hands for the purpose of helping forward the progress of the country. A foreign bureaucracy hesitates to impose taxes; an indigenous and popular government will feel no hesitation to do so, and why not? Because all taxes will be imposed with the concurrence of the people. Suppose we tax the zemindars, suppose we make a breach of the Permanent Settlement—I do not say that we shall ever do so, but suppose we do it—it will be with their concurrence, with their support (laughter)—I think that laughter is a bit uncalled for, and I will tell you my reasons for it. Babu Jai Kishen Mookerji, one of the most capable zemindars that ever lived, was assailed with the proposition that the income-tax involved injustice to the Government and the people. He said 'Very well, you buy us up; give us the market price of our properties. Most of us have purchased those properties; you buy us up and then there will be no quarrel between us and the Government.' Is that a very indefensible proposition? Is it a very absurd proposition to suggest to the zemindars, in view of the progressive and advancing interests of the country, 'here is the money for your landed properties according to the market value, take that money and give us the land, and give us the unearned increment which belongs to that land.' Is that an unreasonable proposition? I do not think so. Therefore the existence of the permanent settlement is no bar to the progressive expansion of our revenues that may be necessary for the purposes of popular government. And if it is necessary to go beyond the permanent settlement and impose taxes, we shall do it because we prize self-government and we are prepared to pay the price of self-government. It cannot be had for nothing. Everything has to be paid for in this world of God's providence, and we are prepared to pay the price of the inestimable boon of self-government. I do hope my Hon'ble friend the Law Member will help us in the matter of acquiring self-government. He has expressed great sympathy with the question of constitutional reform that is now pending. I do hope and trust that the enthusiasm which he has displayed to-day in regard to self-government will materialise in recommendations that will fulfil that great object.

"Then, my Lord, it was observed that there was no breach of the permanent settlement involved. I think my Hon'ble friend made that observation—no breach of the permanent settlement in connection with the clause in regard to which my Hon'ble friend has moved his amendment. I think that observation, if I may say so with all respect, is absolutely irrelevant, for the simple reason that I for my part—I am not speaking for my friends—so far as this particular Bill is concerned, do not take my stand upon the Permanent Settlement, and, therefore, the question of a breach of the Permanent Settlement does not come in at all You say in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that agricultural incomes are exempted. I take my stand on that. The question of the Permanent Settlement is beside the point altogether. I do not wish to go into the dusty and musty literature to which my Hon'ble friend has referred............"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, may I be allowed to say that I only answered a question of the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea. I thought he wanted the question answered."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Those were in the days when my mind was unilluminated about this matter. I do not want to trouble the Council or myself with those broader considerations. When the time for the revision of the Permanent Settlement comes, if it does at all come, we shall discuss it; but, for the present, let us not be diverted by extraneous considerations of that kind. In this Bill you say that agricultural incomes are exempted and you do not propose to tax them. I say that you do tax these incomes indirectly, and that is the whole contention between myself and the Government. I am sorry the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri is not here. I am obtuse enough not to be able to follow him into the niceties of his metaphysical reasoning. I do say that you cannot dispute the position that you indirectly tax agricultural incomes under this Bill, because you take agricultural incomes into account to swell the volume of the whole income of a man and then levy a super-tax according to the higher rate upon his earnings swelled by his agricultural income. But for the agricultural income he would not be taxed to the same extent as he will be now. To a commonsense man like myself, not comprehending the niceties of metaphysical reasoning, this does seem to me to be an indirect taxation of agricultural incomes. Therefore, I say that in taxing agricultural incomes, with that express statement made in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, you stand self-contradicted, and you ought not to do it. That is reason number one. Call me a reactionary if you like, but that is a strong ground with me.

"Then, my Lord, here is a fact which you cannot ignore, that there is genuine concern, anxiety, and alarm among the zemindars of all the Provinces of India. Here is my friend,* belonging to a princely family and the representative of the founder of his house who was associated with the establishment of the British Empire in Bengal. There are gentlemen from the United Provinces, from the Punjab, from the Central Provinces, zemindars from different parts of India, all united in condemning this particular section, and there is such a genuine ring of sincerity, alarm, and anxiety in the language that they have used to-day. It may be that the alarm is unfounded, but that is not the question. We are here as administrators and statesmen. We have to take note of feeling as a fact of administration. Be it illusory or be it well-founded, there is that feeling, and I appeal to this Council not to ignore it. They feel a sense of real concern and anxiety. They say it is the thin end of the wedge. Rightly or wrongly I do not care, there is that feeling. Do you dispute it? I do not, because it is expressed in language the sincerity of which cannot be mistaken. I think that is a fact which we ought to take note of, coming as that feeling does from those who have been rightly described as the bulwark of the British Indian Empire, patriotic, loyal, devoted men who will stand by the Empire at any sacrifice, any hazard, any cost. And these are the men whom you disconcert and fill with alarm by a measure of this kind. Is this wise, is this expedient, is this statesmanlike especially at a juncture like the present? Therefore, I say I object to this provision of the Bill and, if popular Government is endangered by it, I am sorry, but I must do my duty.

"Then, my Lord, something has been said about the justice of this re-adjustment. Well, my Lord, I am an ardent student of Edmund Burke, the prince of political philosophers, and one of the greatest men that England or Ireland ever produced. In one of those illuminating passages which abound in his works he tells us that there is such a thing as temperance in truth, temperance in justice. You may be fired with enthusiasm for justice and truth, and sublime things of that kind. But you are men of the world, you are statesmen, you are administrators. Expediency is the great law which we follow, and the claims of justice have sometimes to be postponed in deference to the demands of expediency. In view of the present state of things, in view of what is going on around us, in view of the feeling that has been aroused, I ask is it expedient that you should embody in the law a section like this which will spread alarm and anxiety among the landed classes throughout the length and breadth of this country? I appeal to the Council to take into consideration these facts. Let us not be carried away by sublime considerations. Circumstances determine the action of the practical politician. Descend from heaven to earth and do things as practical administrators, and I am sure you will accept the amendment of my Hon'ble friend."

*The Hon'ble the Maharaja of Kassimbazar.

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi.]

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:— 3-17 P.M.

"A distinguished advocate and a very able speaker like the Hon'ble the Law Member very naturally to-day availed himself of that species of advocacy with which we are familiar, i.e., whenever we have to advocate a particular case, to avail ourselves of the professed sentiments of our opponent, however those sentiments may ordinarily be opposed to our own convictions, in order to strengthen our case on that particular occasion. He will, I hope, pardon me when I say that in the eloquent word-picture which he has painted before us to-day of what India is going to be in the distant future, I have heard words which present to my ears a great deal of resemblance to the telegrams which we have recently been receiving about what is going on in Russia.

"Well, my Lord, whatever the state of affairs in this country years hence may or may not be, I, as a practical politician, am concerned with the actual state of things as they exist to-day. And, looking at the state of things which actually does exist to-day, I have the utmost confidence in saying that the framers of clause 4 and the majority of the Select Committee would, if they had only considered the question, not from a purely theoretical point of view, but from the point of view of its practical results and the surrounding circumstances, have come to the conclusion that this clause involves unmerited hardship to a class of persons whose welfare and whose contentment have hitherto been the foremost concern of the British Government in India, that the provision embodied in this clause is absolutely inopportune and, looked at from a purely political point of view, it involves consequences in the highest degree detrimental to British interests.

"My Lord, before I develop this position I wish, at this stage, to make it absolutely clear that I fully and gladly acknowledge that the framers of clause 4, as well as the majority of the Select Committee, were not guided and were not influenced by any ulterior motive. I further gladly recognise that the provision embodied in this clause is, according to their honest convictions, one consistent with equity and justice. But where they have erred in putting forward their case to-day is this, they seem to have adopted this position, that it lies on us, the supporters of this amendment, to make out a case for it while, according to every principle of law as well as of commonsense, it is for those who seek to impose fresh taxation to justify their position. It is for them to make out a case. It is for them to show the necessity which has resulted in their putting forward fresh proposals with regard to additional taxation; and it is for them to show how those proposals are just and equitable. Argument based on assumptions, argument based on debatable propositions will not succeed in substantiating a case when you have to establish a case to the satisfaction of the Court or the Tribunal before which you are pleading your cause. It is from this point of view, and this point of view alone, together with the actually existing conditions in this country, that I propose to examine clause 4.

"Now, my Lord, I said that no justification whatsoever has been put forward for the provision embodied in clause 4. To-day in the speeches to which we have listened with respect and with attention, what has been repeated over and over again in different words and in multifarious forms is what the Select Committee have stated in their report; and I propose to invite the attention of Hon'ble Members to what they have actually said. This is the justification, according to the majority of the Select Committee, for the latter portion of clause 4 as embodied in this Act:—

'Our colleagues, Mr. Sitanath Ray, Sir G. M. Chitnavis and Sardar Sundar Singh, object to the principle of clause 4 by which agricultural income is taken into consideration for the purpose of determining the rate on other chargeable income. They have recorded their views in a separate minute, but, as far as the rest of the Committee are concerned, we are clearly of opinion that such an arrangement is a necessity if graduated income-tax is to be collected on an equitable basis. It seems to us quite unjustifiable that a person whose net agricultural income is 10 lakhs, and whose income from business is Rs. 1,000, should pay on the Rs. 1,000, at the rate of 4 pies, while a trader whose sole income is Rs. 25,000 from trade will pay on that income at the one-anna rate.'

"Now these lines constitute the justification in full for the provision embodied in the second portion of clause 4; and as I said all the speeches to which we have listened to-day have been variations of the arguments that the majority of the Select Committee have put forward.

"Now the arguments are two. First, the Select Committee considered it unfair that landlords possessing incomes of 10 lakhs and above should not pay into the public exchequer in the same manner at the higher rate as persons who derive their incomes from non-agricultural sources do. And in the second place, they thought that if the graduated system of income-tax is to be equitable, this provision must be embodied in the enactment. These are the two principal grounds justifying the inclusion of the second portion of clause 4.

"Now, so far as the first argument is concerned, I respectfully submit that it is based on an entire misapprehension of the facts of the case. I must make it clear that I hold no brief for the Permanent Settlement landlords. I come from a province in which Permanent Settlement is unknown. We have in the Punjab periodical revision of settlements every ten or fifteen years in some districts, every twenty years in other districts. The same is the case in the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Bombay, Madras, the Central Provinces, the larger portion of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, and also in portions of Bihar and Orissa. It is clear, therefore, that the permanently settled zemindars constitute but an infinitesimal portion of the landed classes in this country. I am concerned mainly not with permanently settled zemindars nor with large landed proprietors, but with the vast agricultural middle classes in this country; and it should be remembered that the incidence of taxation, so far as this clause is concerned, will fall mainly and principally upon these agricultural middle classes. For every single large landed proprietor that you will tax under this clause there will be hundreds and hundreds of middle class land-owners in this country who will come within the provision of this clause.

"The second assumption which is made when this argument is put forward is this that the income derived by agriculturists, as the result of spending money and labour upon their lands, is not taxed at all. The two cases are not at all parallel. The non-agricultural section of our population pay nothing else—at any rate, into the Imperial exchequer—except income-tax; while the agricultural classes in this country—classes which have been recognised to be the backbone of the British Raj—have all along been paying, according to theory, 50 per cent of the income derived by them from their land and in practice a little less but always in excess of the highest rate which the income-taxpayer, even the supertax-payer under the Income-tax Bill—has to pay. Over and above this contribution which they make to the public exchequer in the form of land-revenue, they have to pay rates and cesses, including—and I invite the attention of Hon'ble Members to this particularly—even an education cess. That is to say, the agricultural portion of our population has not only been contributing the major portion, so far as the revenues and taxes of this country are concerned, to the public exchequer, but the children of the non-agricultural classes have been educated at the expense of the agricultural classes.

"The argument that the rich cannot be favoured to the prejudice of the poor does not apply. I am not speaking on behalf of the landed aristocracy of this country: I am speaking more on behalf of the agricultural middle classes who cannot, under these circumstances when a large slice out of their income already goes into the public exchequer, by any means whatsoever be characterised as rich. Then it is said: 'But under a system of graduated income-tax it would be inequitable not to introduce a provision like this; otherwise the system will not be equitable.' That argument again, I respectfully submit, is based on a misconception of the actual state of things. We have, so far as the agricultural classes are concerned, three kinds of land, and these lands are sometimes owned by one and the same person, and sometimes by different persons. We have, first, the Bárani land, the crops on which depend entirely upon rain water. Then we have what are called the Chábi lands, that is to say, the agricultural owner of this land digs a well at his own expense, to which the State contributes nothing either of labour or money, and as soon as the land is irrigated by this well, then the land-revenue on the well-irrigated land is at once enhanced owing to the enhanced productive power of the land. That is an excess which the agriculturists have to pay. Then you have the highest grade of land and that is Nehri land; as soon as land begins to be irrigated by canal water, although the agriculturist has to pay Abiyana, that is to say the water-rate, to the Irrigation authorities, he pays that to the department as the price of the water that he gets, yet as soon as the land becomes a little more productive by reason of the application of canal water, he has to pay a still higher rate in land-revenue into the public exchequer. The land-revenue system is, thus, itself a graduated system, and it is a graduated payment which he is already making into the public exchequer. Call it tax, call it the traditional due of the Government, that is a question into which I do not propose to enter. It is a debatable point, and one debatable point can never strengthen another debatable point when the latter point is in issue. Therefore, I do not propose to enter into that matter. I say, therefore, that the argument that both branches of the argument, as given in the Select Committee's report, are based on a misconception of the actual state of things, and on assumptions for which there is no foundation.

"Then, my Lord, is this provision opportune? I beg to draw your Lordship's attention in particular to this part of the argument. In this time of crisis, when the Empire has had to face a situation unparalleled in the history of the world, who is it who has come forward to the help of the Government here in India at this critical juncture? My Lord, it is this very class of land-owners on whose behalf I am pleading to-day who have supplied you with all the recruits constituting the British Indian Expeditionary Force. And remember, my Lord, that this furnishing of recruits by this class of land-owners is something which has cost them a good deal. Every zaildar, every lambardar, every middle-class land-owner who, because of his patriotic feeling and because of his abiding and traditional loyalty to the British Crown, has furnished recruits to the Government, has had to pay for every single recruit from his own pocket money which has gone into the pockets of the families that the recruits have left behind them here. I know I am personally aware of this fact, because I have had a great deal to do with the work which has been going on in the Punjab. And remember, my Lord, that it is agricultural income out of which this money is spent. My Lord, at this time, when the war has reached a very critical stage, I say, is it opportune to enact a law of this kind? As a sincere well-wisher of the British Government my humble but earnest advice to Government is, that this is not the time when additional taxation should be placed upon the shoulders of those very classes who are doing all that lies in their power to help the Government at this critical juncture.

"My Lord, the third argument which I put before the Council is this: that looked at from a purely political point of view, this provision is in the highest degree prejudicial to British interests. That is an argument which is still more worthy of your Lordship's consideration. I do not propose to dwell on this part of the case. I will not say what is in my mind in such clear words as I, under different circumstances, might have used; but this much I may say, that by the enactment of this provision there will be a great deal of room for misconceptions and misapprehension not only of what the Government has done actually, but what the Government intends to do. And, my Lord, the opportunities which will be furnished by the results of this measure will be taken advantage of by certain classes of people. Taxation as was observed by the Hon'ble Finance Minister is not always welcome. It creates, naturally creates, a certain amount of discontent, and that discontent which this taxation will create amongst agricultural classes will be taken advantage of by persons who are not always well-inclined to the existing state of things and mischief will be created. As a sincere well-wisher of the British Government, I warn the Government of it. I say, my Lord, that this is not the time, this is not the occasion, for introducing into this Council measures of this kind. I was sorry to hear the Hon'ble Law Member say that we were fighting for class interests, and that we were fighting for our pockets—let me tell him that so far as I am concerned the major portion of my income is derived from my professional practice, and I am already paying super-tax on that, so that this new provision does not in any way touch my pocket. Nor in this Council do I represent the agricultural classes, but I represent the Muhammadan community of the Punjab. It seems to me, my Lord, that under a representative form of government if there is a Member of this Council who represents a particular class or a particular interest, provided he has the good of the State at heart, provided he takes up a position which is perfectly consistent with his loyalty and with his good-will towards the Government, there is no sin in advocating the interests of the class he represents; in fact, it is his duty to do so. My Lord, with these few remarks, I support the amendment moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sitanath Ray."

3-40 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. N. Hogg :—"My Lord, like the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, I have endeavoured to approach this question with an open mind and from an impartial standpoint, and I have arrived at very much the same conclusions as he has told us he arrived at this morning. I had intended to put a few points on this question before the Council for consideration, but most of them have already been placed with great clearness by the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri and the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, and I therefore do not wish to repeat them. I will content myself with associating myself with the remarks which have fallen from both those Hon'ble Members. But there is just one point which I should like to refer to in the remarks of the last speaker (Mr. Shafi). He has pleaded for the middle-class agriculturist and landowner. I do not know exactly what size of income he had in mind; but I just worked out what difference this new clause would make to a man who had an income of Rs. 5,000 a year from land and Rs. 2,500 from other sources. The new clause would make a difference of Rs. 10. Well, Rs. 10 is something undoubtedly—I do not suppose he would necessarily like paying it—but is it such a hardship, that it is going to have all the dire consequences with which the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi threatens us? With these few words I desire to support the clause as it stands."

3-41 P. M.

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"My Lord, I have known a Chief Justice who after hearing the case for the prosecution called upon the counsel for the defence, and, after hearing the counsel for the defence, said to him that whatever doubts were left in his mind with regard to the guilt of the accused had been removed by the arguments of the counsel for the defence.

"I have had the privilege of hearing the arguments of my landlord friends to-day with the utmost possible interest. I have also had the privilege of listening to the arguments advanced by two of their distinguished advocates. One of them certainly is a gentleman whom I have been accustomed to look upon as my political leader since my political life commenced. The more I reflect upon the arguments that have been advanced by my distinguished leader Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea the more do I feel that I ought not to support the cause which he has so eloquently advocated here. My Lord, the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes referred to the prospect of popular government. I do not make a grievance of that. I personally believe that that was a very relevant part of the argument which he addressed to us this afternoon. My Lord, my Hon'ble friend and leader the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea said that when popular government came he had no doubt whatsoever that if it was necessary to abolish the Permanent Settlement, it would be possible to do so with the full consent and concurrence of the zamindars. I have great respect for the eloquence of the Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea, and I speak with all the sincerity that I am capable of when I say that I have been and am a warm and ardent admirer of him. But, my Lord, living as I do in the twentieth century, I am not prepared to credit Mr. Bannerjea with the power of miracles. If popular government comes, and if Mr. Bannerjea is able to convince my friends the landlords of the desirability of abolishing the Permanent Settlement, I shall look upon him as a gentleman endowed with the power of performing miracles in the twentieth century. Now, I think it is best that we should not deceive ourselves in regard to these matters. I entirely agree......"

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. S. N. Bannerjea; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"May I rise to make a correction. I did not say abolishing the Permanent Settlement. I referred to the policy of the State buying up the landlords—paying the value of their property."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"Even that would be nothing short of a miracle to my mind, though I stand corrected. I may be permitted to observe that in my own humble way I happen to belong to what has been described as the party of progressives. I and my family happen to be small zemindars and, although politics have grown thick upon me, yet the instincts of the zemindar are not wholly extinct. I therefore, with the utmost respect for the zemindars, do feel that they will not consent to be parties to anything that affects the Permanant Settlement or diminishes their sources of income. I do not blame them for that, none of us would be willing to subject ourselves to a process like that if it affected our own profession or if it affected our callings. I am only referring to an elementary fact of human nature.

"Then, my Lord, I was going to say that it is not right that we should deceive ourselves in this matter. I think Sir George Lowndes was right in saying that there are two parties in this Council, and, indeed, there are two parties in the world outside in India, the party of progressives and the party of landlords, or the party of those who represent vested interests. My Lord, if popular government is to come, I do venture to think that those of us who believe in vested interests must be prepared to receive some rude shocks. I have been a very ardent advocate of popular government, and I am wedded to these ideas and to these beliefs, and I for one do not hesitate to say that my conception of popular government is not the government of any particular party or of any particular interests. By popular government I understand a government of the people which seeks to secure the interests of the majority irrespective of any pecuniary inconveniences that may result to any minority however strong, powerful or influential they may be. Perhaps I have digressed from my point. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sita Nath Ray in the opening portion of his speech, if I may be permitted to say so, gave away the whole case. He said 'Oh!, well, after all the gain to the State would be very small.' I hope I am quoting him correctly. If the gain is to be such a small one as he thinks it is going to be, may I ask in all humility why then enter the lists at all, why raise a thunderstorm? But it has been said that there are two main objections to clause 4. The first objection is that it imposes indirect taxation, and the second is that the present Bill does in a manner, if not directly, seek to violate the pledges which have been given to the landlords by the British Government. Let us examine all the provisions of this clause as they stand in the Bill itself. The first few words in the clause seem to my mind to be quite clear; no question of interpretation arises with regard to them. The words are 'agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax'. If I were asked as a lawyer to interpret those words, I would say that they meant that under no circumstances shall agricultural income be charged to any income-tax under the provisions of this Act. It is, however, said that the sting lies in what follows in the next clause, which runs as follows:—

'But the net amount of such income in excess of R1,000 which has been received by an assessee in the previous year shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income otherwise chargeable to income-tax under this Act.'

Does this really amount to indirect taxation? I have honestly tried to follow the arguments that have been adduced on the other side, but I regret to say that I am not able to appreciate the force of those arguments. It is not agricultural income which will be made the subject of any assessment; it is non-agricultural income which will continue to be assessed, but assessed at a higher rate of taxation. I do not certainly call that an indirect way of taxing income. If the zemindars are so very anxious about it they can certainly keep the agricultural income apart, and then they will pay the increased rate of tax out of their non-agricultural income, which really means nothing more and nothing less than this, that the savings to them from the non-agricultural income would be somewhat less under the provisions of this Bill than they would have been if the provisions of this clause had not come into force. As regards the fairness or equity of this provision, I should have thought that it was an elementary principle of taxation, especially of income-tax, that the capacity of a man to pay is the real test. The graduated scale of income-tax having been admitted as the basic policy by the Government of India, I think it is only fair and equitable that those who can afford to pay more should be called upon to pay more than those who can afford to pay less. Now, it is perfectly true that the zemindars have got to pay land-revenue and certain cesses. But then the tax under the provisions of this clause is sought to be levied upon the savings, and the increase, I venture to think, under the provisions of this Bill will not be such that they can suffer any real hardship. Look at the scale which is provided there. The Schedule says, and my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah took pains to point out that, the normal rate of taxation is one anna in the rupee, and it is only in the case of poorer people that exemption is given. Well, I venture to think that the number of people who will be affected by this clause, certainly in my province, will not be very large, indeed. I find that the number of men in my province who pay income-tax is not over 40 or 46 thousand, and out of these, I believe, only about, twenty or twenty-five thousand will be affected. Therefore, my Lord, I submit that if you bear in mind the basic principle of the capacity to pay, I do not think there is much room for grumbling on the ground of this clause being inequitable or unjust.

"Then with regard to the pledges, I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah very effectively disposed of that part of the argument. I do not feel myself called upon to enter into any elaborate discussion as to the Permanent Settlement, but I do certainly think with Mr. Jinnah that it was not part of the agreement arrived at at that time between the Government and the landlords that the landlords would not at any time be called upon to make any further contribution that it might be necessary for the State to require of them at any time in the future. I have not read that Regulation in the light in which it has been sought to be interpreted to-day by the zemindars, and I do think that the argument which is founded on that Regulation is not by any means valid or convincing. I agree with my Hon'ble friend Sir George Lowndes, if I may be permitted to say so, that all that it secures is permanence in the jama. It does secure nothing more than that, and, so far as permanency in the jama is concerned, I do not think that by any stretch of imagination the provisions of clause 4 can be said to affect it.

"Then, my Lord, there was one more argument which was addressed by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sita Nath Ray, and with your Lordship's permission I will very briefly notice that. It was suggested by my friend that one certain consequence of clause 4 would be that landlords would not find themselves in a position to promote and further industries. May I ask, my Lord, in all humility, how many industries have been promoted and furthered by the zemindars under the present system when they are not called upon to pay any tax on their agricultural incomes ? I do not know anything of Bengal ; but, speaking of my own province, I venture to say with some degree of confidence that the number of zemindars who have promoted or furthered industries in the real sense of the word can be counted on the fingers of one's hands . . ."

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—" May I point out, my Lord, that my Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Kassimbazar has spent several lakhs on commercial and industrial enterprises "

His Excellency the President :—" Order, order."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—" My Lord, I should not be misunderstood on that subject. I do not deny for a moment that there are zemindars and there have been zemindars who have made some investments in industrial enterprises. But look at their enormous income and look at the large numbers of zemindars in Bengal and in the United Provinces and in some other parts of the country, and then look at the output with which they can be credited in this matter. I do not think that they can justly claim to be captains of industry in any part of India. Well, so far as trade and commerce are concerned, we know that in Bengal it is the Marwari community which has got practically the monopoly so far as the Indian population is concerned. But I do not wish to fight my friends of Bengal. I am only concerned with my province, and I do say that that claim has yet to be established.

"Now, my Lord, I leave my friend Mr. Sita Nath Ray and just try to meet one of the arguments which has been addressed this afternoon by another advocate of the cause of agricultural classes—I refer to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shafi. He has not tried to advocate the cause of the big zemindars, but he has espoused the cause of the small agriculturists in the Punjab. I sympathise with my Hon'ble friend, but may I ask how many zemindars, small agriculturists in the province of the Punjab, and, so far as I know, Punjab is a province of small zemindars, will be really affected by the provisions of this clause I ? have not got the figures before me, but I think that the number of small agriculturists who also have other sources of income must be very small indeed in the Punjab, as I have no doubt is the case in other parts of India. Therefore, my Lord, it seems to me that there is not any very serious danger of the small agricultural Punjab population being injuriously affected by the provisions of this clause.

"Now, my Lord, lastly, there is one more point which I would venture to notice very briefly, and that is, a point which was raised by the Hon'ble the Maharaja of Kassimbazar. In the course of his speech the Hon'ble the Maharaja Saheb said, to use his own words, 'that the provisions of this Bill are against juristic principles.' My Lord, I have all this time been trying to analyse the provisions of this Bill, particularly the provisions of this clause, and I do not find what jurisprudence has got to do with clause 4. Of course, I can understand a reference to equity in the consideration of this clause, but I cannot understand what jurisprudence has got to do with it. Let us, therefore, not confuse the issue. The issue to my mind is a very simple one, and it is this. Are those people who, having regard to their capacity can pay more, to be exempted merely because, according to certain opinion, agricultural income should be considered to be sacrosanct ? I have no hesitation in answering that question in the negative."

The Hon'ble Sir John Campbell :—"My Lord, I should like to explain that I was a member of the Select Committee on this Bill and signed the majority report, and I do not wish to resile from the position that there can be no doubt of the theoretical equity of considering agricultural incomes in arriving at the rate at which a man's total income should be assessed to income-tax. But I should like to state what my objections to clause 4 are, as they have not yet been mentioned in this Council to-day. As a revenue official I am mainly concerned with the immense amount of work which is going to be thrown upon the revenue authorities, of my own Province at any rate, in arriving at suitable formulæ for the definition and assessment of 'net agricultural income.' Three seemingly simple words, but which have for the last three months been puzzling men who have been studying rent and revenue problems for the last thirty years. It is unnecessary to trouble this Council with the technical difficulties that exist in arriving at a satisfactory definition of 'net agricultural income;' but I can assure Hon'ble Members that they exist, and that they will not be removed by the insertion in the Bill of the new second paragraph to this clause of the Bill nor by the amendment which is to be moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. Even if formulæ are arrived at which satisfy the revenue authorities and the Government of India I would invite the attention of the Council to the mass of work which will be thrown upon Collectors in applying the formulæ to the incomes of hundreds, if not thousands, of assessees. And all for the sake of what ? Not for the sake of securing additional income to the State, but for the sake of removing a theoretical inequality. Further, having arrived at our definition of 'net agricultural income' which will satisfy the Government, are we certain that it will be equally acceptable to the assessees? If not, what will be the result? They will claim, under section 51, that their case shall be referred to the High Court for a decision as to the proper interpretation of the Act and the rules made thereunder; and we shall then have the edifying spectacle of the work of the High Courts being dislocated while Bench and Bar waste time over the correct meaning of the apparently simple words 'net agricultural income.' My Lord, I have had the honour of serving on the Select Committee, as I have already said, for the consideration of this Bill; a committee full of financial experts, legal experts and commercial experts, but mine has been the voice of one crying in the wilderness when trying to explain the difficulties which will crop up in working the Act for the unfortunate and already over-burdened Revenue official, and therefore I have laid some of the difficulties before this Council."

4 P.M.

[Sir John Campbell ; Pandit M. M. Malaviya.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"My Lord, I regret to think there has been a great deal of heat imported into the discussion of this measure to-day, and that both on the Government side and on the side of the zamindars. I must say I was not prepared to find Sir George Lowndes take up the attitude that he did, and I must also say that I was not prepared to hear my zamindar friends exaggerate the effect of the present measure to the extent that some of them did in their speeches, and imagining consequences of a very evil character which would arise if the provision were passed into law. I do still think, my Lord, that the matter might and ought to be considered in a cool manner and in a manner as much removed from the feeling that there are two parties working here, one the party of vested interests, and the other the party of progress, but from the point of view of what is right and proper and what is the proper procedure to adopt in a consolidating and amending Act. In speaking on this proposed measure when the Bill was introduced I said what I beg leave to quote to you. I said:—

'The Hon'ble Finance Member says this Bill is not a Bill which is designed, either by altering the rate of tax, or otherwise, to raise money.'

He emphasized that point very clearly. He said section 4 lays down that agricultural income shall not be chargeable to income-tax. Then I went on to say, my Lord, that the net amount of income in excess of Rs. 1,000 which had been received by an assessee in the year of assessment was to be taken into account in determining the rate at which the taxation was to be leviable on any income under this Act, and I went on to say that by this device the rate of taxation had been increased. I did not use the word 'device' in any offensive sense, and I am sorry the Hon'ble Law Member should have taken it in that sense. I use it just as he used the word 'subterfuge' in saying that my suggestion that a separate Bill should be introduced would have been a subterfuge. I am sure I did not use the word device in any other sense. Then I said, by this device the rate of taxation would be raised. You say clearly that agricultural income shall be exempted from taxation. Then you go on in the same paragraph and say yes, but the agricultural income above Rs. 1,000 shall be taken into account in determining the rate at which income-tax shall be paid on the non-agricultural income. Now, if a man has a non-agricultural income, and that happens to be below a certain figure, he will pay his tax on that non-agricultural income. If you say that agricultural income is exempt, then you ought to obliterate the existence of that income from your mind, but you have no right, no justification for saying in one breath that agricultural income shall be exempt, while in the same breath you say 'I will take that into account in determining the rate at which you will pay the tax.' The non-agriculturist pays the income-tax according to the Schedule. The agriculturist is to pay the income-tax on non-agricultural income according to the higher rate for what reason? For no other offence, for no other virtue than that he happens to possess an agricultural income. I say with great respect, but with great clearness, that this is taking agricultural income into account, and that is indirectly taxing that agricultural income. My point was, and I repeat it, that this is not the right way to do it.

"My Lord, I am not opposed to taxation. I recognise the need of taxation as much as my Hon'ble friend Sir George Lowndes, but I want that taxation to be introduced in the right spirit, and I am sure in that my friend will agree. In dealing with the question what did I say? I said 'I do not think, my Lord, that that is the right way to proceed about this business of raising the rate of taxation which is to be paid by persons who are in possession of large incomes. I think the straighter course would be for those in charge to say, money is needed and ask the people to contribute.' I still maintain that that would be the right way. What has been the result? Many questions of great importance have been raised, and the question has been taken up from the point of view of how it will affect the Permanent Settlement, and how it will not affect the Permanent Settlement. Many and learned speeches have been delivered as if the issue before the Council to-day was whether the Permanent Settlement in Bengal should be touched. And my Hon'ble friend Sir George Lowndes has made an appeal which looked more like an appeal to the jury than to the judge when he told us how our future position would be affected by the voting which we shall record to-day. I want to take these two points: first, the question of the Permanent Settlement. My friend, Mr. Jinnah, referred to that question and he has quoted from the Proceedings of 1860. Before I refer to that I should like to make it clear that I am here as no advocate of the zemindars and no advocate of any parties.

"I hope with the light that God has given me to advocate what is right for the zemindar as well as for the poor. I am not opposed to the zemindar because he happens to be a zemindar. I do want to plead the cause of my poor countrymen because they are the bulk of the people, and their happiness has been the object of my ardent desire throughout my life But I do submit, my Lord, that not even to benefit the bulk of my poor countrymen, would I do an act of injustice to my countrymen who belong to the zemindar class.

"What is the position with regard to the Permanent Settlement? I do not think it should have been raised, but it having been raised, I wish to draw attention to the fact, because it seems to me that both in the speech of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes and in the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, the importance which attaches to that Permanent Settlement was somewhat lightly dealt with. The Hon'ble Mr Jinnah quoted from the speech of Mr. Sconce in which he discussed this question. Mr. Sconce said :—

'The declaration made by this law (Regulation I of 1793) came to this, that the zemindars, their heirs, and successors should hold their estates for ever at the assessment which by the Settlement they had engaged to pay; and the clear purport of this declaration he took to be that the re-assessment of the estates in question was for ever barred.'

He went on to say :—

'It seemed to him that the law gave no guarantee that the proprietors of those estates should never be called upon to aid in the relief of the future necessities of this Government by contributing according to their means and incomes.'

In the same speech Mr. Sconce quoted the words of the Governor General (Lord Cornwallis) in his Minute. They are as follows :—

'By reserving the collection of the internal duties of commerce Government may at all times appropriate to itself a share of the accumulating wealth of its subjects without their being sensible of it.'

"So that what he had in mind when he said that they might be called upon later on to contribute according to their means and incomes to the necessities of the State was not that the revenue should be raised, but that incomes should be derived from internal duties on commerce and other sources of income which it was expected that the accumulating wealth of the zemindars would enable them to gather.

"I submit, therefore, my Lord, that that question should not have been taken up as if that was the issue before this Council.

[Pandit M. M. Malaviya; Sir George Lowndes.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

"Then, the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes told us that this provision is fair and equitable, and he supported it because he thought it was fair and equitable. Now, my Lord, we may agree to differ on that point. I have very great respect for the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, but it is possible for us to differ without any disrespect or discourtesy.

"But the third thing which he said, my Lord, calls for a little consideration. He said the attitude of the Council to-day on this important question at this important juncture was a matter of some concern to him. We know that the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes has a real and deep sympathy with our aspirations for progress. We respect him for it. But let me assure him that no considerations of progress ought to deviate any Member of this Council from the course of duty which he thinks right and justice dictate. And, if it is right and just to oppose the provision which has been introduced to-day, though that provision might bring in a little added income to the Government, I hope Members of this Council will discharge their duty without any consideration of how their conduct is to be judged.

"And now, my Lord, my friend said there were two parties in this Council, the party of progress and the party of the landlords. There is nothing of the kind. There are landlords who have expressed their adhesion to the party of progress, to which we have the honour some of us to belong. In that party we have no other desire than that the progress in this country should be on sound and equitable lines, administering justice on the basis of the administration that has been laid down and endeavouring to carry out that object in a better way, if possible.

"My friend said 'Remember, in any form of popular government there must be a great deal of extra taxation.' My Lord, we are thankful to him for reminding us of it. If we have studied any books on History, Economics or Political Science, that truth has been ingrained in us. We know that every popular government means greater expenditure. We are longing for the time when we shall be put in power to raise further taxation. We know that many of the measures of progress, which we desire for our country, will entail increasing expenditure. We know that other countries which have advanced have greatly increased their expenditure, but we know also that they have increased their revenue. We are looking forward to being able to increase our expenditure and, correspondingly, to increase our revenue. We are not afraid of levying taxation. We pray God that we may have the opportunity, when, sitting along with the Members of Government, we shall be able to press our views sufficiently strongly to be able to raise the standard of expenditure in order that the standard of national income may be promoted. My Lord, the form of government which will come will not find us wanting in that direction. To-day the simple question before the Council is this. The Government have told us that this Bill has not been introduced with a view to raise revenue. It has been introduced, as the Hon'ble Sir John Campbell has reminded us, in order to remove a theoretical inequality. Some of us feel that this is not the right way to remove what is regarded as a theoretical inequality. Some of us go further and doubt whether there is a theoretical inequality at all. My Lord, the view has already been expressed by some Members that the agricultural income is the net profit of the zemindar after he has paid the tax which he has to pay upon the gross income. The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah referred to a portion of the speech of Mr. Sconce in which he said that from all time it had been recognised that the State had a right to receive a share of the produce of the soil. Nobody questions that, the State has always been recognised in India to have a right to a portion of the produce of the soil. So it is to-day. But thereby the position of the proprietor is not placed in doubt. The proprietor is there. He contributes a certain portion of his produce as tax to Government. If my friends will refer to the original books of the Hindus, from which the idea is taken, it is there spoken of as kara, a tax. It is not that the State has a right to it. My friend shakes his head . . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Certainly, my Lord, I shake my head. I have always understood—I may be wrong—that land-revenue consisted partly of tax and partly of rent."

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Pandit M. M. Malaviya; Mr. F. J. Monahan Mr. S. N. Bannerjea.]

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya:—"In so far as the right of the State to receive a portion of the produce of the soil is concerned, it is distinctly spoken of as kara, as a tax, call it rent or whatever name you like. Now, I submit, that it does not necessarily raise the question of proprietorship. The whole point before us is that the zemindar or the agriculturist does pay a certain amount in the shape of land-revenue and rent. Having paid that, the balance left to him is net profit. You want that he should pay a second tax upon that net profit. If the exigencies of the Government and the State demand that he should be called upon to do so, by all means do so. Introduce a Bill for that, say that you recognise that the tax is being paid already upon that land, and say that still, in the interests of the State, it is necessary that he should pay a further and second tax, and, if the necessities of the situation make them feel that this should be done, I expect there will be many zemindars who will give their assent to such a proposal. But what I submit is that, when you speak of an inequality, there is a mistake, a wrong idea running in the minds of those who speak of it. You say an agriculturist has an income of Rs. 10,000: that is, he has an income from non-agricultural sources of Rs. 5,000, and he has an income of Rs. 5,000 from agricultural sources. Very well. And you say he pays only on Rs. 5,000. You want that the other Rs. 5,000 also should be taken into account in determining the rate. You do so because you say the non-agriculturist has an income of Rs. 10,000, and he pays a tax for the whole Rs. 10,000. But, my Lord, let it be remembered that of the Rs. 10,000 which has made the agriculturist's total income, the Rs. 5,000 derived from agricultural sources is the net profit left to him after having paid the tax. Either this proposition is true or it is not. If it is not correct, then I am wasting the time of the Council. If it is correct and cannot be answered—and I should like to know if it can be answered—then I submit you propose, not to remove an inequality, but to place the agriculturist under a disadvantage,—that is to say, you tax him a second time in an indirect way under the proposed clause when he has already paid a tax upon his agricultural income. That is the entire position. I wish the Government would take these facts into consideration, and I wish that they would examine the question from the point of view of what is right and proper, and what is the right and proper way of doing it. If this unfortunate clause has raised so much heat and discussion here to-day—heat and discussion into which even my Hon'ble friend the Law Member has been drawn—then I submit, my Lord, the Government ought to pause and think whether it is right to pass it at this Council. I hope the matter will receive consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. F. J. Monahan:—"My Lord, some of my Hon'ble colleagues from Bengal are jealous guardians—and I dare say they have some justification for being jealous—of the inviolability of the permanent settlement of Bengal at a time when that institution is subjected to a good deal of not very well informed criticism; but really and truly I do not think that this clause 4 of the Bill has got anything to do with permanent settlement. I was glad to hear my friend the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Sitanath Ray say that he did not regard clause 4 as a breach of the inviolability of the permanent settlement; and I was also glad to hear my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjea say that he did not take his stand on the permanent settlement. I have a kind of recollection that in the speech which he made on the 6th of February, my Hon'ble friend took rather a strong stand on the permanent settlement. But I understand him to have said that before he obtained illumination............"

4-21 P. M.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"Quite so".

The Hon'ble Mr. F. J. Monahan:—"Well, I congratulate my Hon'ble friend on the illumination he has gained between the 6th February and the 14th March. The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah has explained very clearly the grounds for the view that the permanent settlement is no bar to imposing an income-tax on agricultural income in permanently settled districts; and that view is supported by the great authority of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, and pace the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, two Acts of Parliament have at different times imposed income-tax on agricultural income in permanently settled districts. I mean Acts of the Government of India, not Parliament; I should say the legislature of this country. I take it that view is correct. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes goes further and suggests that if there were a popular government in Bengal it would at once set aside the pledge given at the time of the permanent settlement. This question of the permanent settlement in Bengal is sometimes talked about as if the only people interested in maintaining the permanent settlement were a small class of zemindars........"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, the Hon'ble Mr. Monahan has misunderstood me. I did not suggest for a moment that a popular government would set aside permanent settlement, but that they would not be debarred by the permanent settlement from taxing the big landlords. That is all I intended to say."

The Hon'ble Mr. F. J. Monahan:—"I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon; but I was only going to say that as regards these questions of taxation which a popular government might impose, I wonder sometimes what the result would be; because, as I say, the class interested in the permanent settlement as it exists in Bengal is not a small class of large landlords but a very large class—you may say, quite a population of people, comprising landlords, tenants of different degrees,—a large and not uninfluential class, and it would be curious to know what the result would be. However, as I said, I do not think that these questions—the question of the propriety or the legality of imposing income-tax in permanently settled districts on agricultural income, or the possibility of taxation being imposed on such incomes in the event of a system of popular government being introduced—I do not think that these questions are very closely connected with the question of this section 4 of the Bill or the amendment under consideration. I am afraid that if Hon'ble Members are not satisfied by the speeches that have been made by the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes and others, that this is not a tax, directly or indirectly, on agricultural income or a prelude to such taxation, I shall not be able to convince them; but what I should like to point out is, that this principle of taking agricultural income into consideration in the assessment of income-tax is not altogether a new one. At any rate, in Bengal, it was laid down and recognised a very long time ago—shortly after the passing of the Income-tax Act of 1886—that agricultural income might and should be taken into account in determining the question of whether a person was liable to income-tax at all, and also in determining the question of the rate at which he should be assessed in certain cases. Section 5, sub-section (1) of Act II of 1886, sub-heads (a) and (b), exempted agricultural income from tax; and sub-head (j) of the same sub-section exempted any person whose income from all sources was less than R500 per annum. We know the limit was raised to a thousand rupees in 1903. Well, the Board of Revenue in Bengal laid down that the expression 'income from all sources' means all sources whether taxable or not. That was laid down by the Board of Revenue in Bengal in September 1886, and it seems to be the obvious meaning of the sub-head. Then when we come to the Second Schedule of the Act, we see how this principle was applied. I think it was my friend the Hon'ble Sir Hugh Bray who in his speech the other day pointed out that there were things about income-tax that might escape attention on a cursory perusal of the Act, and that is partly due to the fact that certain things in the important Second Schedule have usually been printed in very small print. That is no doubt unavoidable; but if we look at Part I of the Second Schedule of the Act (dealing with salaries and pensions), it was laid down that, if the income amounted to Rs. 2,000 per annum, the rate of assessment shall be five pies in the rupee, and that if the income was less than Rs. 2,000 per annum, it should be 4 pies in the rupee; that is to say that if a person had an income or salary of less than Rs. 500 per annum and along with that agricultural income raising his total income from all sources to Rs. 500 per annum or over, he was liable to be taxed on his small salary at the rate of 4 pies in the rupee. Of course, the amount of income and the amount of tax involved in that construction of the Schedule was not large, but still the principle was there. Then with regard to Part II—profits of companies—the question did not arise because the tax was levied on the profits of the company, and under that Act individual shareholders could not claim refunds if their total income was less than the taxable minimum. When we come to Part III—interest on securities—the rate of tax prescribed was 5 pies in the rupee, unless the owner of the securities produced a certificate signed by the Collector that his annual income from all sources was less than Rs. 500, in which case no deduction should be made from the interest, or unless he produced a like certificate that his income from all sources was less than Rs. 2,000, in which case the rate was to be 4 pies in the rupee. There again, before he could get a certificate he had to show that his income from all sources including agricultural income was less than Rs. 500 or less than Rs. 2,000, as the case might be. When we come to Part IV of the Schedule—other sources of income,—the difficulty arises. The second column of this part of the Schedule prescribing the rates at which the tax should be assessed on incomes of different amounts was worded in this way 'Not less than Rs. 500 but less than Rs. 750 the tax shall be Rs. 10.' So that under that part the amount of tax from Rs. 500 to Rs. 750 was Rs. 10. But for any income under that Part of less than Rs. 500 there was no rate and no amount prescribed. It was different in the case of salaries, and the Board of Revenue in Bengal laid down that as the rates specified in Part IV for incomes under that Part of less than Rs. 500 was nil; a person with an income of less than Rs. 500 under Part IV should not pay any tax on that income, although his total income might come to Rs. 500 or more. Well, when the Act of 1886 was amended by the Act of 1916, there was a change in the rates of tax which was effected by an amendment of the Second Schedule, and under that Act there was the same point about income falling under Part IV. The Schedule lays down that if the income is not less than Rs. 1,000 but less than Rs. 1,250 the tax shall be Rs. 20. In the Schedule of the Act of 1886 as amended by the Act of 1916, the rate of assessment for salaries is stated in the same way. It says if the income amounts to Rs. 1,000 per annum or Rs. 83-5-4 per month, but is less than Rs. 2,000 per annum the tax is 4 pies in the rupee. But here again in this Schedule in Part II, which deals with profits of companies the proviso says 'provided that a shareholder in a company who satisfies the Collector that his annual income from all sources in the income-tax year last preceding that in which the share of profits was received was less than any one as the case may be of the amounts tabulated below, shall be entitled to a refund of so much', and, similarly, in the proviso to Part III. Under that also an assessee wishing to get a refund had to satisfy the Collector that his annual income from all sources in the last preceding income-tax year was less than a certain amount. So that as it appears to me this clause 4 of the present Bill does not really introduce a new principle, but it applies universally and uniformly the principle which was already laid down in the law before, but which, owing to certain difficulties in the wording of the Second Schedule (or possibly there may have been some difference of interpretation in different provinces, I do not know about that),—at any rate the principle had not been uniformly applied, and this Bill applies it uniformly. It seems to me to be a just and equitable principle, and I hope it will commend itself to the Council. Of course, I say this subject to any practical difficulty that there may be in regard to giving effect to it in the United Provinces, owing to the technical difficulties to which the Hon'ble Sir John Campbell has just referred. I do not know anything about that. But as far as I am aware in Bengal, there should not be any practical difficulty, having regard to the second part of the clause, which says that the net agricultural income is to be ascertained on the same basis on which the annual value of land is determined for the purposes of a cess on land. I do not think there will be any difficulty in giving effect to that in Bengal. I confess I am a little surprised to hear that there is this difficulty in the United Provinces where I have always been led to believe that land records were complete for the whole province, whereas for a large part of Bengal we have not got them; but, in spite of that, we have got material in the returns obtained and records kept for purposes of assessment of cess with the help of which I think effect can be given without much difficulty to this clause."

[Mr. F. J. Monahan ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis ; His Excellency the President.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

4-40 P.M.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" My Lord, the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi has joined the other Members supporting the amendment ; he has drawn pointed attention to the doubtful wisdom of the majority of the Select Committee in adding clause 4, or rather in not removing clause 4 from the Bill as it originally stood. I feel, therefore, that it is absolutely necessary for me, as being the only Indian Member who has supported the majority, to vindicate my position, and I hope I shall be able to show that as honest men we could not have arrived at any other decision than the one at which we have arrived. We may have been wrong in our conclusions, but we felt that we could not in justice to the taxpayer......"

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis :—" I rise to a point of order, my Lord. Does Mr. Sarma mean to say that the others who have signed the note of dissent are dishonest ? "

His Excellency the President :—" I am sure Mr. Sarma did not mean that."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"I never meant anything of that sort ; I am sorry if any words of mine lent colour to such an impression. Only such of us as have joined the majority report have felt that we could not do anything other than what we have done. Now, I may state that I am a small landholder and that the success of this amendment may perhaps be useful to me personally on some occasions, and I respectfully ask Sir George Lowndes not to be so unkind to all landlords as to group them together and draw a distinction between the two parties here, the party of progressives and the party of landlords. He might very well have put it as a party of progressives and a party of vested interests, the composition of the parties changing from time to time according to the subjects with which the Council may be dealing at the time. Now the point before the Council is, whether, having regard to the basic principle on which income-tax is levied in all civilised countries, there was any reasonable ground for the Select Committee to exclude agricultural incomes altogether for the purposes of the Income-tax Act. Hon'ble Members may remember that the basic principle is not one of taxing property, but one of taxation of incomes, so the argument that a particular property might have been taxed once and might stand a chance of being taxed a second time, has no application whatever in a consideration of the principles on which the income-tax administration is to be guided. Houses in towns and elsewhere pay a heavy house-tax in municipalities and a smaller tax in unions, a tax ranging from 16 to 25 per cent., and yet we have brought house-incomes within the purview of this tax. Businessmen and professionalmen pay a heavy professional tax on the professions they exercise; they have not sought exemption and cannot seek it under the provisions of the Income-tax Act. Assuming for argument's sake that land has been taxed and in a heavy manner, there seems to be no ground for exempting it from the Income-tax Act; but if the Government have, for reasons of policy into which the Select Committee did not enter, exempted landed incomes altogether, they cannot be accused of not having extended their exemption in all particulars and under all circumstances. Landholders would, I think, have to be thankful to the Government and would have to be thankful to the Select Committee in that they did not follow the principle of income-tax administration to their logical limits and bring landed incomes within the purview of the Income-tax Act. The question is whether landed incomes, having been taxed already in the manner described by various Hon'ble Members, it was right that we should indirectly tax landed income by putting on taxable incomes a higher rate than was originally intended. My Lord, if the principle I have contended for is correct if a man receives a taxable income which he can spend for his own purposes, whether he receives if from land, houses, business or profession, would not and ought not to matter, so long as it is within the category on which the administration can levy a tax. We will take it that Rs. 3,000 is the income from the land and Rs. 7,000 from other sources, Rs. 10,000 is the total income on which he is justly assessable, and he has to pay a tax on that Rs. 10,000. The legislature have chosen to exempt Rs. 3,000, the agricultural income, therefore the tax on Rs. 7,000, the other income, is at the usual rate at which he would have to pay if the whole Rs. 10,000 was taxable; only care is taken that the Rs. 3,000 does not pay any income-tax. If you regard the normal rate of taxation as one anna in the rupee, I think there can be absolutely no complaint of any kind, the digressive principle being applied in the case of the smaller incomes. If one anna is the normal rate of taxation, on what principle can a person, who has an income of Rs. 10,000, ask for exemption? Can it be simply because his income happens to be derived from one category or another? Let us take the normal rate of taxation to be 4 pies with a progressive scale rising to one anna. Even then, I submit, that the principle I have contended for shows clearly when a man has to pay his tax on his whole income; only on certain grounds of policy all the income is not taxed. With regard to the grounds of policy urged, I think the Select Committee could not have gone into that part of the question. It is one of policy into which it was not their business to enter. They could not do otherwise than enact the provisions in the Bill as they stand before the Council to-day. Whether your Excellency's Government would be disposed under the provisions of section 44 to exempt landlords on account of their various acts of loyalty during the last few years is a question of expediency, of policy, which it is not for the Council to consider. Then, again, I would ask my friends to consider briefly whether they are not asking the Council to perpetrate an act of injustice, injustice as between landlords and the poorer tax-payers. Take taxation during the last few years. We have had a duty on salt, a tax on exports and imports. We have had increased taxation in a number of ways, and it has risen from 82 millions to 110 millions. Where does land come in except to bear its share of increased general taxation? It is true that landlords have come loyally forward to help the Government in numerous ways, and whilst Government are thankful for the same, how could the Select Committee exempt a particular class, having regard to the fact that if money does not come from persons who have justly to pay, it will have to be taken from the pockets of the poor, who have been heavily taxed and who will have to pay a little more if the balance is to be made up. As to whether it would effect in a very large measure numerous classes of persons is another point to which some attention was paid in previous speeches. Speaking for Madras, with which province I am fairly familiar, I may state that in regard to riotwari pattadars there would not be very many coming within the clutches of this Act unless they happen to be very rich people getting large taxable incomes; I mean from the purely agricultural point of view, the number of persons paying a revenue on more than Rs. 1,000 to Government is very limited indeed. We have not temporarily settled zamindars except in one or two districts; there are permanently settled zamindars in the district from which I come. Government and the people have to be thankful for their services to the district; although there may be some agitation against the Act, once they really understand it, there would be no difficulty in their appreciating the justice of this special piece of legislation. I have felt it, my Lord, that it is the duty of those who understand a little of the principles of taxation to support Government in measures of this sort where there is some misunderstanding owing to ignorance. I fully realise that no mere possession of knowledge would completely prevent a little of self from asserting itself, but still, I think, it is our duty, and that is the reason why I have ventured to speak to-day in the manner in which I have done. Of course, I feel sure that the Government is sufficiently strong to stand between vested interests and the poor if there be occasion for it, and if they do so in this particular I think they should only be congratulated on that, and I feel sure they will not be deterred from any consideration in doing their duty.

Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Raja of Kanika.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

I also feel that all the greater is the duty which rests upon us in supporting Government, and I hope the landlords will not feel that there is any real cause for alarm as to whether agricultural incomes would be taxed hereafter under the provisions of the Income-tax Act by reason of this enactment. That question does not really arise under the provisions of this clause, and I think they have raised a thunderstorm without any reason with perhaps not altogether desirable consequences to themselves."

The Hon'ble Raja of Kanika:—" My Lord, I beg to support the amendment moved by my friend Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur. I may begin, my Lord, by congratulating the Hon'ble the Finance Member on his having secured an excellent champion in the person of the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah. Indeed, my Lord, the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah so forcibly championed the cause of the Government that I very much doubted if anything was left for the Government to add. I had no intention of speaking about the Permanent Settlement, but since Mr. Jinnah referred to it and since the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes has supplemented his remarks, it is necessary to give a reply to it. I shall, however, leave the Government with its good fortune in having got Mr. Jinnah as their spokesman, and I proceed, my Lord, to place before the Council certain facts to show how and why the landlords are feeling extremely apprehensive with regard to the question now before the Council.

" The landlords as a body, my Lord, have no desire to be obstructive, and nothing is further from their mind than to manufacture unreal grievances. The present Bill, however, has caused a feeling of intense uneasiness in all parts of the country, and this apprehension, if I may so, is not without justification.

" It is quite true, my Lord, that there is no question of a breach of faith, in the sense that the Permanent Settlement, as yet, is not openly threatened. But I will venture to put before this Council two pertinent points: first, that the recent trend of Government's action is such as to excite a very reasonable apprehension in the minds of the landlords as to the ultimate stability of the Permanent Settlement and then, secondly, I shall try to show the inequity and the injustice of the present clause 4 of the Bill which is now sought to be passed into law.

" The Permanent Settlement, my Lord, is one of those solemn engagements which must stand for all ages to come, and no Government, unless it chooses to imitate the Prussian Statecraft, will ever think of setting it aside as a 'scrap of paper.' No, my Lord, in the new world in which we are living and in the newer world that is yet to be—God grant it might come soon—scraps of paper, such as the Permanent Settlement undoubtedly is, have acquired a new sanctity and a new sanction. It is no doubt true that as yet there is no thought even of abolishing or even attacking it. But the policy of the Government as expressed from time to time for the last few decades does give the landlords great cause for anxiety. I will venture to give a few specific instances. The Right Hon'ble James Wilson, the first Finance Minister of India, speaking in the Council on the 18th February, 1860, in introducing the first Financial Statement emphatically asserted that the landlords had absolutely no right to claim exemption from further taxes in spite of the Permanent Settlement, and the whole claim was, as he put it, 'illusive.' I will not trouble the Council by quoting long extracts from his speech especially after the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah did so. Any one could easily refer to it. But I beg to say that Mr. Wilson proved his position by quoting long extracts from the Minute of Lords Cornwallis of the 3rd July, 1790, forgetting that the zemindars of Bengal and Bihar take their stand not on any Minute but really upon the Proclamation which became Regulation I of 1793. It is by that Regulation that the landlords stand or fall, and it is under that Regulation that they claim exemption from any further encroachments upon them by way of new taxation. I do wish the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah had referred to the terms of the Regulations a little more in detail. He would have found there that the assessment was declared to be irrevocable, and that no further encroachments were to be made upon the landlords by any persons whom the Court of

[14TH MARCH, 1918.]	[Raja of Kanika ; Sir William Meyer.]

Directors might hereafter appoint to the administration of their affairs in India.

"In spite of the above, however, the first Income-tax Act of 1860 deliberately taxed all landed profits and the same procedure was continued in other Acts. Then the next move on the part of the Government to which I want to refer was the imposition of cesses on land for local works. The question was keenly discussed from about 1869 to 1871 whether such local cesses could be legitimately imposed upon the landlords in spite of the Permanent Settlement, and the controversy became so keen that that matter had at last to be referred to the Secretary of State.

"Here, again, the interests of the landlords went to the wall, and the Secretary of State decided in favour of the proposed local cesses which were accordingly imposed throughout the country. The landlords have now got to pay, in addition to the land-revenue, the heavy cesses and have still to look pleasant.

"I will not weary the Council by tracing the history of this tendency very much in detail. Suffice it to say that in 1886, the principle of the exemption of agricultural incomes from the income-tax was acknowledged and recognised by law. But after a long halt, recent years have again exhibited this tendency on the part of the Government in a very pronounced form. Last year Sir William Meyer, in introducing the Financial Statement, while refraining from imposing additional taxation on agricultural incomes, said that 'we can give no pledge that we shall refrain from doing so hereafter should future necessities oblige us to take this course.' This ominous declaration is regarded, my Lord, by landlords throughout the country as only an instance of coming events casting their long shadows beforehand. Then comes the present Bill which, though it does not openly and directly tax agricultural incomes, does so indirectly."

"Take again, my Lord, Sir William Meyer's statement in this Council on the 6th February last. 'Even if we are to tax agricultural profits now,' he remarked, 'which we are not proposing to do, it would be a mere question of expediency'. This dangerous doctrine of expediency, my Lord, can make or unmake miracles. There is nothing possible or impossible on the face of the earth which 'expediency' cannot justify. Some of the opinions collected by the Government on the present Bill and also what we have heard from Sir George Lowndes and other Members to-day reveal the same tendency. These statements, my Lord, give just cause for alarm to the landlords. These statements—each of them quite emphatic by itself—when taken together are deemed strong enough to shape the shadows of any coming move and the landlords might be pardoned, my Lord, if after Sir William Meyer's repetition of the theory of expediency even to-day, they think that the present Bill is an attempt to drive in the thin end of the wedge so as to ensure freedom for action in the future . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I rise to a point of order. I think that when, as a man of honour, I said in my opening speech about the clause that there was no such intention, I am entitled that the Hon'ble Member should take that from me and not impugn my honour."

The Hon'ble the Raja of Kanika :—" Yes, I said that as it does not tax agricultural income at all, there is no breach of faith, as I said in the beginning. Agricultural income is already very heavily taxed in the shape of land revenue—in some cases amounting to 50 per cent. or so. I wonder how the other classes of the community would relish the idea of a 50 per cent. income-tax, and it would be most inequitable to subject it to fresh taxation again, however indirectly the attempt might be made. It would in fact be a double taxation of the same thing, or with the cesses I might say it would amount to a triple taxation of the same commodity, and I leave it to the Council to judge whether it would be fair and just.

"I also agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi that the present is of all times the most inopportune for raising such a keenly controversial question. We have plenty of such questions on our hands just now, and I believe it would be both just and politic to let the present matter await solution until after the end of the war.

" The landlords, my Lord, could understand the necessity of the clause if the Government of India had been faced by a temporary necessity of finding more money for the supreme task of financing the war. No such justification has, however, been put forward for the clause. On the contrary, the Government has just demonstrated that it could realise a surplus in the fourth year of a world-wide war, and, what is more, they can as readily budget for a surplus at the end of the fifth year of the war. What then is the justification for this penal clause against the landlords ? It is the permanent feature of the Bill which has given rise to the grave apprehensions of the landlords. We appeal to your Lordship's Government, therefore, to accept the amendment and thus to remove the most objectionable part of clause 4 in the Bill.

" With these words, my Lord, I beg to support the amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir James Walker :—" My Lord, I first saw this clause last summer. It was not sprung on us quite so rapidly as the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde has suggested. I did not at all like the clause. But I disliked it, not because it purports to remove an anomaly due to the introduction of graduated taxation, but because in itself it stereotyped the exemption of agricultural income from income-tax, and did that in a consolidating and amending Act. My Lord, I did not anticipate that the portion of the clause, which is the subject of this amendment, would have excited the opposition that it has done. I really did not think that Members would desire that our income-tax law should offer matter as it were for a riddle—'When is a rich man not a rich man ? ' The answer being—' When his riches are agricultural.' I think the equity of the clause has been very well demonstrated by other speakers already. The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah, among other Members, referred to the history of the several Income-tax Acts. I may notice that there is a clear and concise note on the subject in the Imperial Gazetteer of India, and that brings out one principle noticeably. It is not only in the Act immediately after the mutiny, but in other Acts that income-tax was taken on agricultural income. In most cases when that was not done, a quid pro quo was taken in the shape of a cess. I think that was done when the present Act of 1886 was passed, and subsequently when that cess was remitted to the landlords, only a very small relief was given to the income-tax payers—that is to say, only the lowest class of incomes of from Rs. 500 to below Rs. 1,000 were given exemption.

" My Lord, I have no personal experience of the permanent settlement, but the case of the patels in the Mahratta country is rather interesting to refer to. These patels under Indian administration were practically farmers or publicans of land-revenue, and to some extent they had vested interests, but in most cases not very great. The British Government gave them proprietary rights. There were other publicans and thekadars who also had a certain amount of hereditary connection, but they got no such concession. I never heard it argued, for instance, that an abkari thekadar, who has paid heavy license fees and heavy still-head duties, should get exemption of income-tax on his next profit on that account. My Lord, my own crude opinions on this subject have been reprinted in Paper No. I, and, as we have been given the privilege of speaking and voting freely, it is necessary to come to some decision as to how I am to vote. My own feeling is that, after the ventilation of views that we have had in this discussion, I have no hesitation whatever in opposing the amendment and in supporting the clause. I think any misapprehensions which might have been caused by this stereotyping of an exemption, which has gone on for over 30 years, have been removed by the discussion we have had to-day. I therefore oppose the amendment.

" There is one word I should like to add with regard to the difficulties mentioned by Sir John Campbell. I agree with him that there may be some difficulty in the framing of rules, but with our system of land-revenue settlement, I do not think there would be much difficulty in working the said rules.

" With these words, I oppose the amendment ? "

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia.]

The Hon'ble Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia :—" My Lord, as a member of the Select Committee I had the unpleasant duty to differ from my Hon'ble Colleagues so far as the principle underlying the provision of section 4 of the Bill, under discussion, is concerned, and I think it is due from me to the Council that I should give the reasons of my dissent. The provision of section 4 takes away from the proprietors and tillers of the land what has been rightly conceded to them from time immemorial in so far as it indirectly taxes his income twice. My Hon'ble Colleagues on the Select Committee have based their decision, as they say, on the basis of justice and equity, and in support of their contention they have given an example which to a casual observer puts the case somewhat strongly. But, my Lord, they have evidently ignored the fact that the net agricultural income had already borne its share of Government demand. I would strongly urge that, where an income has already borne its share of taxation, it should not be brought under taxation again on the plea of calculation of the total income of an assessee, and it was on this consideration that agricultural income has so far remained exempt from the income-tax assessment. The instance of 1860 was due to special circumstances of the Mutiny of 1857. 5-9 P.M.

" I may say at once that if the exigencies of the State now demanded more money on account of this gigantic war, I would not stand against the imposition. The provisions of the Act of 1860 were repealed, and I would submit that it would not be right to revive it again. It has to be borne in mind that the zemindar gets his net income after deducting the expenses of his cultivation, and after meeting all these demands he is then assessed his land revenue, which demand goes up to 50 per cent. of his net income. He has besides to pay cesses. On the other hand, a trader earns his income from trade and from other sources and has perhaps, for the purposes of his trade, to pay between 6 to 15 per cent. by way of interest on his capital, where it happens to be a borrowed one, while, as submitted above, the zemindar has paid nearly half of his total income from land. I, therefore, fail to see how the two cases could be considered to be parallel. The zemindar has no capital of his own at his command and has not anything to fall back upon, and very often has to face the vagaries of the weather. In seasons of drought and consequent failure of his crops, he only gets by way of concession from Government the abatement of Government demand or only a fraction of it in total remission. The zemindar's capital consists as it does of his stock of cattle and is of a perishable nature. So, on a calamity happening or overtaking him, he finds himself in a tight corner. In such a case he has to go to the moneylender for putting him on his legs, with the result that once in his clutches he is for the rest of his life not able to free himself from the burden of his debts. The indebtedness of the zemindars generally is proverbial, and Government have had to come to their rescue and enactments like the Land Alienation Act have had to be placed on the Statute-book of India for their protection.

" It appears that Government is aiming at taxation of those who are able to pay and perhaps are considered to be very well off. But the majority of agriculturists, at any rate in my Province, are not so fortunately placed.

" Even from the point of view of equity and justice, the taxing of an income which has borne its share of the State demand is not right. Then, my Lord, take the case of a zemindar who has an income of Rs. 1,000 from other sources and has an agricultural income of Rs. 10,000. So, on his Rs. 1,000, he shall have to pay at the rate of nine pies a rupee, whereas the ordinary rate payable by a non-zemindar having an income of Rs. 1,000 would be four pies. This places the zemindar at a disadvantage so far as this tax is concerned, because on his Rs. 9,000 the zemindar has paid nearly 50 per cent. already and he will have to pay on his Rs. 1,000 on the nine-pie rate. To place all parties and all incomes on a basis of equity I may claim that it would be fair if land-revenue was abolished and a general taxation were introduced in the country. That would be really placing the taxation on all incomes from all sources on the basis of equity.

[Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia; Sir Robert Clegg; Mr. E. H. C. Walsh.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

"We know when the limit of Rs. 500 was raised to Rs. 1,000, what was the attitude of the income-tax assessing officer. No appreciable relief was afforded to the general tax-payer. Only those whose income was taxed at the source, such as men drawing salaries received some relief; but in the case of others, the tax-payers of Rs. 500 income were invariably included in the list of persons having an income of Rs. 1,000. In the case of landholders who do not keep any accounts of their income and expenditure and have no account books, the harassment of the petty official would be very trying. It would besides, my Lord, open a door for corrupt underlings and place temptation in their way. Everyone knows what a zemindar has to pay besides his usual dues of land-revenue to some underlings in some departments, and these expenses are such that could not be properly vouched for. I am therefore afraid it will be extremely difficult to correctly gauge the net income of a zemindar and would entail a good deal of worry and trouble to him. The majority of zamindars are illiterate and as such easily misled as to the intentions of Government in this respect, and endeavours would be made to lead them to think that they are being unduly taxed. It will afford to the agitator a ready handle to stir up feelings which would be undesirable from political points of view and may cause unnecessary worry and trouble to law-abiding citizens of the Empire. So, for political reasons, I consider the provision undesirable.

"Another point that I would like to bring to the notice of your Lordship and of the Council is, that it will discourage zemindars from adding to their estates small useful industries. We have indigo concerns and small sugar factories attached to some small estates, and if the small profits of these agricultural concerns are to be taxed at a higher rate owing to the other agricultural income of the zemindar being taken into consideration, it will naturally kill those industries My Lord, indigo could not stand the competition with the synthetic dye and the sugar industry has to face a similar competition with bounty-fed sugar of foreign countries, and the charging of a higher rate of tax consequently will prove the last straw on the camel's back. So, for the sake of these concerns, I think it will be unwise to include agricultural income for the purposes of ascertaining the rate of tax chargeable on other incomes of a zemindar. For reasons of justice, equity and for the saving of these minor industries, and lastly for political reasons, the provisions of the section are fraught with undesirable results. I would, therefore, strongly urge the acceptance of the amendment proposed by my Hon'ble friend, Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur."

The Hon'ble Sir Robert Clegg :—"I have one or two observations to make, your Excellency. In theory, I think, clause 4 is unassailable and I do not think that any objection can be urged against it on the ground of justice and equity; but I think there are practical considerations which should not be ignored. Personally, I agree to a great extent with what the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi said. I am not aware of any great complaint of injustice in the existing law, speaking for my own Presidency. The clause is not a revenue-producing measure, and we have heard to-day of a great deal of opposition on the part of landed proprietors to it. I do not think that the alteration of the existing practice is of such vital importance as to justify it in the face of such opposition. In Madras, the zemindars have in these anxious times been staunch supporters of Government, and I am opposed to doing anything which tends to diminish their support. I have been listening to the various speeches to find some proof of the necessity for this clause, but, to my mind, the necessity has not been made out. Therefore, on the grounds of practical expediency, I must support the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh :—"My Lord, as the Hon'ble the Finance Member has said that official Members on this Bill are at liberty to vote according to their own feeling, I should like to make one or two remarks as to the reason why I must oppose this amendment.

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. E. H. C. Walsh.]

"In the first place, I agree entirely with what has been said by the Hon'ble the Finance Member that the proposal that rich men who derive their money from the land should pay income-tax on their income from other sources at the same rate as rich men who derive the whole of their money from other sources is just and equitable.

"Two objections have been urged against this principle. In the first place, it has been suggested by some speakers as regards Bengal, and it equally affects my province, that it would be a breach of the spirit if not of the letter of the Permanent Settlement. I need, perhaps, hardly make any remarks on that head when the representative of the landholders of my province has definitely said that they would consider it to be no breach of the Permanent Settlement. But, as the fact has been stated and may be considered to have some force in it, I would repeat what has been already so clearly stated by the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, that what the Permanent Settlement did in 1793 was to fix in perpetuity the jama that was then assessed on each estate, and never undertook that the holders should not be liable to taxation in respect of the income they derived from their estates. This is also clearly shown by the fact which has already been pointed out that previous to the present Act of 1886, income derived from land was for some time assessed to income-tax and at the present time is also assessed to other cesses and taxes in addition to the land-revenue.

"The other objection, which applies with more force to the greater part of India in which the Permanent Settlement is not in force, is that the land is at present so heavily taxed in the form of land-revenue that it is unjust that it should bear, even indirectly, any further taxation whatever. The reply to this objection is that in India the State is held to possess the sovereign right of ownership of the land, and that land-revenue is money paid for the use of land, and is consequently of the nature of rent rather than of taxation. The Hon'ble Mr. Shafi has said that the point is debatable I think, however, that the history of land tenure in India shows that the above view is correct.

"There is one point that was taken up by the Hon'ble Sir Robert Clegg, that although everybody may admit the justice of the provision of section 4, yet it is not expedient, because it may be misrepresented and may in consequence lead zamindars who hitherto have been particularly loyal in supporting the Government to assume a less sympathetic and loyal attitude towards them. Speaking with regard to the part of the country with which I am acquainted, I think the zamindars and landholders generally, when they fully consider the justice of this liability, will not be affected in any way in their loyal and sympathetic support of Government. I entirely agree with all that the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi has said about the assistance that has been given by zamindars to Government in the matter of recruiting and other war work and the pecuniary assistance which they have given to their tenants to induce them to enlist. In my own province, too, this has been done by many private zamindars, amongst whom I would mention my Hon'ble colleague the Raja of Kanika; and also I may say, as representing the Court of Wards, that many Court of Wards estates under the management of the Board of Revenue have offered special concessions in regard to rent to induce their tenants to join the labour corps and in other ways to help the Government. But I do not consider that these efforts are likely to be lessened by this tax, which is obviously a fair and equitable one

"There is one other point which the Hon'ble Sir John Campbell has pointed out, namely, that the provision in clause 2 as to the method of arriving at the annual value of land may cause trouble in its application to the United Provinces. As regards Bihar, I should like to say, as has already been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Monahan for Bengal, that we shall have no trouble in this respect, because under our Road Cess Act we have already a basis of annual value on which we can work.

"There is one other point to which I need only allude briefly, as it has already been mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Monahan. It is that even if this were indirectly a tax on income derived from land, it is not introducing an entirely new principle, because, under section 5 (j) of the existing Act, the income from all sources, which under the instructions of the Bengal Board of Revenue, which have been in force since 1886, include non-taxable sources of income, namely, income derived from land, have to be taken into consideration in deciding whether a man is liable to income-tax.

"I think, my Lord, that at this stage of the debate these are the only points which I need lay before the Council, which, I think, are all of them material as to the decision which should be come to in regard to this amendment"

At this stage the Chair was taken by the Hon'ble the Vice-President.

The Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri:—"Sir, I did not venture to speak on the last occasion when the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Income-tax was introduced by the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer, simply for the reason that I was not quite sure how the position of the landlords was affected by the change. The wording of clause 4 is very cleverly put so as not to arouse any suspicion to a casual reader, but when we come to analyse the section we cannot help construing it in the light of a fresh and a new taxation on the landlords—not by a separate Bill but by the amendment of an existing system. Most of the Members who spoke on the last occasion on the subject could not definitely estimate the scope and extent of clause 4. They were vague in their attempts to analyse the real meaning of the section and asked the Government to declare its intention.

"The Hon'ble Member in charge of the portfolio was pleased to state, and the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah endorsed his opinion, that the object of this unique departure was to make the income-tax taxation more equitable. I do not understand how the clause makes the taxation more equitable when the effect of the section is to make the landlords pay twice over to the Government

"The yearly revenue that a zamindar pays to the Government for holding the land may be very well styled a tax on his income from the land; though it had been fixed for ever by the solemn pledge of Lord Cornwallis in the Provinces of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa.

"Sir, we have been charged by the Hon'ble Finance Member with escaping taxation and living on the rest of the community. But does our revenue to the Government count for nothing? I can give instances without number where zamindars on account of the old settlement pay a considerable portion of their zamindari income to the Government, sometimes as high as two-thirds of their collection, and the case of the Maharaja of Burdwan is a living example. And, Sir, if in addition to the Government revenue still further inroads be made on our income from land, it would mean a deathblow to agricultural investment.

"It was during the reign of Akbar the Great that the idea of a permanent settlement appears to have been decided upon as a protective measure against the unstable short-period system of revenue. The policy inaugurated by Akbar was continued by the British Government until under Lord Cornwallis it was decided after mature deliberation that the assessment then demanded should be fixed in perpetuity as it was hoped that by making the revenue demand permanent the landlords would be induced to make improvements and in many ways benefit the country.

"Sir, it is unnecessary to remind the Government of the solemn pledges entered into by Lord Cornwallis with the zemindars of Bengal on the subject of permanent settlement. I do not go so far as the Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea went in asserting roundly that the Government intends to break its faith......"

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea:—"I did not say that at all."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I am sure you did not"

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri; Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan; Sir William Meyer; the Vice-President.]

The Hon'ble Nawab Saiyed Nawab Ali Chaudhri:— "There has been a good deal of adverse criticism on the soundness of the Permanent Settlement, and several unsuccessful attempts were made on different occasions to compel the Government to retract their word. But, my Lord, this policy of Lord Cornwallis brought into being a class of men on whom the Government could rely in the time of stress and difficulty.

"The generous treatment accorded to them was not forgotten, and whenever the occasion demanded they proved a tower of strength and support to the Government; and, my Lord, if this taxation is a temporary measure to meet the exigencies of war, I am sure it will receive the hearty support of the landlords who have hitherto cheerfully responded to all demands made upon their material resources as well as personal services. But if it is going to be a permanent measure merely to rope in the defaulters in the category of which the landlords are to be unjustly included, I beg to protest against such inclusion."

5-30 P.M.

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan:— "Sir, as practically all the arguments against the second half of clause 4 have been produced by the previous Hon'ble Members in their eloquent speeches, it is useless for me to traverse the same ground. But in loyalty to the class, which I have the honour to represent, I must not keep silent on this occasion, and must represent to the Council the interests which are jeopardised by the proposed measure put forward by the Finance Member. It seems to me, Sir, that a strange misconception exists that the landlords, whenever their pocket is touched, raise a fearful howl and that by shedding crocodile's tears they try to escape that responsibility. I strongly protest against that misconception, and I assert with all the force that I can command that the landholders bear more than their share of the burdens of the State. Truth does not become stale by repetition, and when I say that the landlords are liable to be charged up to 50 per cent. on their net profits, they pay more than any class that is called upon to pay income-tax. Besides, that, whenever any of these people live in urban areas they pay cesses and other municipal taxes which the urban classes pay. It cannot be ignored that the expenses of the landlords are daily rising not only in the management of their farms, but also in their personal needs; the expenses in connection with the contingencies of life of an agricultural farmer are daily increasing. I can say without hesitation that it is the agriculturist who feeds most of the concerns of life, and it is he who is called upon to provide funds for so many undertakings of the State. The ultimate burden falls upon him How can it be said then with any show of logic that these people do not pay their legitimate share of the expenses? The other day when we had an informal conversation with the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer about this Bill, he indicated two chief and principal reasons which actuated him in getting through this measure. The first was this, that the landholders were rich and the second that they enjoyed a fixed tenure for a number of years, whereas the ordinary people, the poor people as he called them, were liable to taxation every year......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:— "I must protest against the Hon'ble Member's distortion of what I said. I mentioned these facts in the course of a long conversation, but I did not take my stand on them. I took my stand on what I said this morning, on grounds of general justice and equity".

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I think the Hon'ble Member would be well advised if he did not refer to any private conversation outside the Council."

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan:—"Well, Sir, I was referring to a private conversation and I am sorry that he does not want me to bring it forward. But one of the arguments which he then adduced he still holds......"

[The Vice-President ; Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan ; Sir William Meyer.] [13TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I think it is better that the Hon'ble Member should not refer to any private conversation outside the Council. We have had here to-day sufficient arguments on this question to which he can refer without bringing in arguments used in a private conversation outside the Council."

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan :—"I am referring to the arguments which have been brought forward in this Council."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"You are quite in order in doing that."

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan :—"The argument which he brought forward in this Council in his speech was that the landlords were rich and they could afford to pay and there was no reason why they should not be taxed......"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I did nothing of the sort. I said that if a man was a rich man and a landlord and had at the same time income from other sources he ought to pay on that income from other sources with reference to his general wealth. I did not say that all landholders were rich or that all landholders ought to pay more."

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan :—"Well, Sir, I take the Hon'ble Finance Minister's word and say that the income from agricultural sources would be taken into consideration to fix the rate for income-tax to be levied henceforth. As regards this argument, it is a debatable point whether a landholder is rich because the standard of affluence cannot be definitely prescribed.

"It is his income from the land which is to be accounted towards fixing the rate. Has the Finance Member considered the disabilities of a landholder during the course of the year, the vicissitudes of the seasons, calamities of weather, etc.? Has he considered these points in taking as his basis the income which a landholder on the average derives from the land? I beg to say, Sir, that the income of a landholder is not what it used to be 30 or 40 years ago. His expenses have enormously risen in farm management; the expenses of husbandry have enormously risen, and it cannot be said that he enjoys the same means as he did 40 years ago.

"There is one point which I want to impress upon the Council and that is this, that the landholder is very unfortunately situated as regards professional men or traders. Professional men under stress of adverse circumstances add to their fees and charge enhanced rates to their clients; the trader can add to his prices which the purchaser must pay in order to live a comfortable life. In this manner the professional man as well as the trader both escape the burden which the agriculturist pays. Would it, therefore, be fair to say that the landholder escapes, with the smallest amount of payment, the burdens of the State. Now, taking the political aspects of the question into consideration may I urge on the attention of the Council that this class have supplied the men who have served the Empire under these dire conditions. They have contributed towards the expenses of the war. It is the land-holding class whose relatives have died for the Empire in East Africa, in Flanders, in Gallipoli, in Mesopotamia and elsewhere. I can say with feelings of pride, as regards my own province, that we, Punjabis, have supplied men and money for the Empire to an extent that no other province has so far done. I cast no aspersion on other provinces. I believe they are doing well in other spheres, but what I beg to urge is this that the landholding classes all over the country are doing all that they can to forward the cause of the Empire. British officials in India in the past have produced men of remarkable talent, it is they who have built up the Empire by winning the love of the people by their tactful and generous treatment, and I have every reason to believe that they are animated by the same spirit now. I hope that in the treatment of this question an exhibition of this spirit towards the people who have served the Empire with their blood and money will be given."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde.—"I did not speak in the early part to this debate, because I have an amendment in my own name on the same point. After hearing this whole debate it appears to me that I had better state briefly what I have to say on the subject, taking care not to reiterate the arguments that have been urged. What few arguments are left I shall urge now. Before doing so I shall attempt to define my position. As regards being a landlord, my position or my claim may be regarded as strong or as weak as that of the household fly to be called a bird. It has got wings and it can fly, but it all depends on the investigator to class it along with birds or with land worms. I am in the position not exactly of that of a landlord and not exactly not a landlord. I have a few fields. The difficulty in my position is, therefore, one of classification. In this Council there are landlords and progressives. I think that anyone acquainted with me will not hesitate to put me among the progressives, and perhaps a little further. Anyhow I take it that I am a progressive. On the other hand, I am a little bit of a landlord myself. I earnestly believe that the second part of this clause 4 is really very objectionable. It is for this reason and for no other that I support the present amendment. There are two points which appear to have been forgotten, one of them fortunately has been brought up in the opinions coming from Bombay, a very high officer brings that up; he has had long experience of income-tax administration in the city of Bombay and the mofussil. That is a very important point. In India, rightly or wrongly, there is an inherited idea that a man's income ought never to be disclosed. As is said in the South, nine things ought never to be disclosed. Among them 'one's own income' comes very high.

5-47 P.M.

"This rule has come into existence for centuries, and it is followed at the present time. Just as in English life nobody speaks of anything, but the weather on first acquaintance and it takes a long time to make a reference to matters of a private nature, so in India you make inquiries of all kinds, but you never allude to the income of a person. That is an inherited notion, and it is a deep-rooted notion. I firmly believe that by calling upon every one to declare his income you create a hardship. A large number of people, I am not one of them, trade on their credit, as is done in England also, and for them to have to disclose their income and their various means of livelihood is a real hardship.

At this stage the Chair was resumed by His Excellency the President.

"There is another point about this, my Lord. It has been pointed out in a book which I procured from the Imperial Library—I take it that this book is a standard work of some kind—it has been pointed out in that book that income-tax evén in America and elsewhere, in fact wherever it has been imposed, has led to a great deal of hard swearing. People do not want to disclose their incomes : sometimes they do not keep their accounts ; oftentimes they have not got a clear notion of it themselves, but anyhow they go on, and try to avoid mentioning their income. In India, unfortunately, it is believed that this kind of temptation should not be thrown in the way of the common people, more especially when their inherited instinct of not disclosing one's income will be working upon them. There is also a third trouble about them which, I am glad to find, has found strong support from an experienced gentleman like the Hon'ble Sir John Campbell. He knows the difficulties that the revenue authorities would experience, and the Bombay people have complained of them. There is a fourth one, and it has not been mentioned up to this time, and that is that in agriculture, as I have found it from personal experience, the closer the supervision that a man can give to the manangement of his farm the better is the income from it, and then as you hire services more and more you get less and less, and so that, in course of time, becomes ruinous, if you go beyond a certain point in acquiring land, and this accounts for the proverbial indebtedness of the peasant class. I have seen in my province there are some jahagirdars who may be deemed as large zemindars, there are peasant proprietors and ryotwari tenants, and I am one of those ryotwari tenants—that in agriculture as your business extends your expenses also correspondingly increase. You begin with a field or two, and then you go on adding to the number of your fields and so every acre that you cultivate increases the cost of cultivation. Later on supervision costs a great deal. Lastly, it comes to this, that if you go beyond a certain point you will see that agriculture does not pay. Practically people stick to fields, not because it pays them, but because it gives them a social status. If a man has no land in my part of the country he is looked upon more or less as an outsider; he is not considered as a local citizen; and so, in order to keep up his position, to hold up his head among his people and to sit in the village Chowdi to have the gossip of the day, it is quite necessary for him to have some agricultural lands. Now, it will be said that these small people will be excluded. I humbly submit that these people will not be excluded for this simple reason that these poor people, though they have got a few fields, are the descendants of large and ancient families and they have enough of lands so as to appear as rich people in the world, but as a matter of fact they are not, and their farms do not pay. But if you go into their accounts, will you deduct their expenses of cultivation, will you deduct their expenses of supervision, will you deduct also the diverse changes and fluctuations in the market? If those are all deducted I think the inquiring officer will come to the conclusion that agriculture does not pay and that the tenants have nothing to pay, and he will get absolutely nothing out of these landholders. So it comes to be that agriculture is one of those industries, if industry it really is, in which a man does appear opulent: he appears to have capital; he appears to have fields; he appears to have servants; but as a matter of fact he really has got no capital, and if you look into his accounts you will see that he never had much cash at all and lives by borrowing. That accounts for the zemindars in my part of the country being indebted. Jahagirdar is another name for a respectable person who may be very near the brink of being declared insolvent or somewhat in that difficult position. So these are considerations which weigh a great deal, and I hope the Council will kindly take all these facts into consideration before voting on this amendment. I of course support this amendment though I have another amendment standing against my name."

His Excellency the President :—"With the indulgence of the Council I am sure Hon'ble Members will wish to hear what the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer has to say."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I thought I had a right to make a final speech."

His Excellency the President :—"Only with the indulgence of the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I do not want to trespass on the time of the Council at this hour. I do not want to go back on what I said in the opening part of this long debate that, so far as Government is concerned, we leave it to the Council. I just want to correct a few misstatements that have been made, particularly by the Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan. In the first place, he tried to rouse the commiseration of the Council for the poor landholders of the Punjab. He said the Government took 50 per cent. of the net profits of their assessments. The Hon'ble Member knows perfectly well that that is only theoretically so, but that, as a matter of fact, the Government takes much less than that.

"Then he talked of the landholders of the Punjab, the cultivating classes being much worse off now than they were 40 years ago. I challenge that as a direct misstatement of facts. If the Hon'ble Member will take the trouble to study the prices of land sales in the Punjab he will see that land sells many, many times above its assessment, and that the prices are increasing. That shows that the cultivators instead of getting worse off are infinitely better off...."

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan; Sir William Meyer; Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur.]

The Hon'ble Khan Zulfikar Ali Khan:—"May I rise to a point of order. What I meant was this, that the expenses of agriculturists in the Punjab as regards the management of their farms and their own personal expenses are increasing, and not that they are getting poorer."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"If the cultivator's expenses are increasing, it is perfectly obvious from the sale figures of land that his net profits are increasing in far greater proportion, and if the cultivator is poor then the case does not apply; he has not got any money to lay out on investments and produce 'other sources' of income. If he is well off then the case comes under clause 4.

"I should like to remind the Council exactly what the position is. We will take the case of a land-holder who is, as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Shafi has informed us with a certain amount of pardonable pride as regards himself making Rs. 25,000 and upwards outside the land. The position is not altered in the least by clause 4. He pays one anna on his income outside the land, and he will pay that in any case. Then, again, if a man is making nothing out of the land, or if he is making less than a thousand rupees out of the land, the operation of clause 4 does not come in. It only applies when people are making money out of the land, when their net agricultural income exceeds Rs. 1,000, and at same time is within the gradation scale rising from 4 pies to 9 pies of Schedule I. As regards the net agricultural income in excess of Rs. 1,000 you add that simply for the purpose of seeing whether, having regard to his income as a whole, the man should pay 4 pies, 6 pies or 9 pies or whatever it may be, and on Rs. 25,000 in any case it will be one anna.

"As regards Sir John Campbell's argument that there would be an enormous amount of work thrown on him and his officers by this clause 4, as I think Mr. Monahan said, I always understood that the United Provinces officials prided themselves on knowing all that there was to know about the circumstances of their agricultural people. It appears that this is so no longer, if Sir John Campbell's statement is to be accepted. But I would observe that the Government of the United Provinces took no such argument, so that either the Lieutenant-Governor did not agree with the view taken by Sir John Campbell, or, without disagreeing with him, he thinks Sir John Campbell and his officers might safely undertake more work.

"I do not wish to dwell on the arguments pro and con and the general arguments of principle because they have been sufficiently dealt with by other people."

The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"My Lord, after the warmth and heat displayed by some of the official Members and their new-born partizans, and the language used even by men who have hitherto been credited with the possession of a reasonably sweet temper, I really hesitate in giving a reply, or to return the compliment in the same spirit as has been used by some of my Hon'ble Colleagues. If it were entirely left to me, I would have, to speak the truth, retired from this unequal contest. But having given notice of the amendment in question, I cannot now withdraw it without stultifying myself and prejudicing the case of the zemindars very seriously. However, I am really surprised and grieved to find that because some of us thought fit to oppose this section, our loyalty should be questioned or we should be charged with unnecessarily obstructing the Government in its attempt to find more money.

6 P.M.

"However, I beg to say that I witnessed a unique spectacle this day on the one hand of an attempted rapprochement between some of the official Members and the so-called progressive party, who have hitherto been called the party of Home Rulers, if not something worse, and of extending the right hand of fellowship to them for the purpose of enlisting their sympathy and capturing their votes, and on the other hand of decrying and condemning the very zemindars, who have always been called loyalists and who have hitherto always stood and will always stand by the Government and who have always been at the beck and call of Government, and who have in different ways contributed very liberally and generously to all the funds raised within the last four years for war purposes and subscribed liberally to the War Loan.

[Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur ; Mr. M. A. Jinnah.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

"The Hon'ble the Finance Member has expressed some surprise at my assuming a new rôle, but I may say for his information that, though not possessing such large estates as are possessed by my Hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Kassimbazar, I am the possessor of a few acres of land here and there, and I have spoken in that capacity in Bengal several times, and have always taken a prominent part in the discussion of questions affecting zemindari. And I beg to add for the purpose of relieving his anxiety about myself, that I champion not the cause of any particular class, but the cause of equity and stand up for a principle which has been recognised by Government in all previous enactments. I have not raised a cry over the inviolability of the Permanent Settlement, but must say that the principle so long recognised should not be ignored.

"I congratulate the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah on his assuming the rôle of the official Member in this matter, but I refrain from ascribing any motive to him as he always does in this Council. Agricultural income was only once included in the scope of the income-tax. I wish to correct a mistake which crept into the speech I made first. The first Income-tax Act was passed in 1860, and amended in 1862, when agricultural income was first taxed, with the consent of the Maharaja of Burdwan who was at that time the representative of the zemindars. That was done as an emergency measure to meet the expenses of the Mutiny. But it was repealed in 1867 and since then agricultural income has never been taxed.........".

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—May I rise to a point of order, my Lord. I do not think the Hon'ble Member is quite correct. There was an Act passed in 1869, which included agricultural income.

The Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur :—After this I have nothing further to say. I leave the question in the hands of the Council.

The motion was put and the Council divided as follows :—

Ayes—30.

H. E. the Commander-in-Chief.

The amendment was accordingly accepted.

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [His Excellency the President ; Mr. Khaparde ; Sir William Meyer ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Mr. K. K. Chanda.]

His Excellency the President :—"I think it would be for the convenience of Council if I were to state that I propose to sit in this Chair until this Bill is finished."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" After the result of the voting on the previous amendment, I shall withdraw my* amendment." 6-5 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I would only point out that, strictly speaking, as the Hon'ble Mr. Sita Nath Ray's amendment did not cover sub-clause (2) of clause 4 of the Bill, sub-clause (2) stands. But, of course, in view of the voting just now, we will withdraw that sub-clause."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" I will withdraw my †amendment, because it is probable that sub-clause (2) will be dropped now, in view of the voting that has taken place on the amendment of the Hon'ble Rai Sita Nath Ray Bahadur."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" Quite so ; that is what I said."

The motions were by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" My Lord, I withdraw my amendment.

'That in clause 4, sub-clause (2) be omitted, and in clause 43, sub-clause (2), the words 'subject to the provisions of section 4' be omitted, and after the word 'income' the following words be inserted, namely :—

'but in making any such rule for any area in which a basis has been definitely laid down by or under any enactment for the ascertainment of the annual value of the land regard shall be had to that basis.' "

The motion was by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" My Lord, I beg to move as an amendment. 6-10 P.M.

'That in clause 8, after the words 'Income drived from house property in respect of the' the words 'net rent actually received or when there is any doubt about the actual rent the' shall be inserted.

" My Lord, the position is this. The clause as it stands in the Bill says :—

'The tax shall be payable by an assessee under the head 'Income derived from house property' in respect of the bonâ fide annual value of any house property of which he is the owner.' And for the purposes of this section 'annual value' is defined as follows :—

'annual value' shall be deemed to mean the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year.'

" I submit, my Lord, that the clause as it stands means that I shall be taxed not on the actual income I derive from the house, but on the income which the assessor thinks I ought to get from the house or 'the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year.' I think, my Lord, that is hardly fair. House rent is not a thing that is fixed for ever. It depends upon many circumstances that vary from time to time and the position of the parties sometimes. Therefore, if I am to be taxed not on the actual rent I receive but on the rent which the assessor thinks that I ought to receive, I submit that I shall be taxed for a thing which I do not get or it may be for less than I actually get. Sometimes it may be that I may get more and sometimes less. I shall give one instance that occurred in this very city. Last year I wrote to my Hon'ble friend Mr. Muddiman asking him kindly to let me have a separate house as I intended to bring my family here. He replied that all the houses available had been disposed of and he sent me a list of house owners. So I wrote to these parties, and one reply I received was a telegram from a lady, which said 'House available at rent of Rs. 3,000 for ten days, payable in advance.' I sent the telegram to Mr. Muddiman in original ..."

* That in clause 4 (1) for the words from 'but the net amount' to 'under this Act' the following shall be substituted :—

'and shall not be taken into consideration directly or otherwise in determining the rate at which the tax shall be levied on any income chargeable to income-tax under this Act.'

† 'That sub-clause (2) of clause 4 be omitted.'

[Mr. A. P. Muddiman ; Mr. K. K. Chanda ; Sir William Meyer.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman :—" I hope the Hon'ble Member does not suggest that I was a party to that proposal. "

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon ; I did not mean that. Ten days aferwards I received another telegram from the lady saying that she had made a mistake. She thought I was attending the Princes' Conference, and evidently she thought I was a Prince of Assam, the Raja of the Khasia and Jaintia Hills probably. When she discovered her mistake she brought the rent down to Rs. 250. Suppose that I was able to pay the rent she demanded, how would she be taxed ? Not on the amount of rupees three thousand she would get, but what should be the rent according to the assessor which would probably be in the neighbourhood of rupees two hundred and fifty monthly.

" It is obvious that there would be no reason to tax her on, a lesser amount : but that will happen according to the clause as it stands.

" My submission is, my Lord, that the assessment ought to be not on, the annual value of the house to be assessed by the assessor, but on the net rent which I derive from it if that can be found out. Where there is no means of finding that out, of course you may fall back on the definition given of 'annual value' in the clause. In this matter, my Lord, I am fortunate to find that I have the support of the Hon'ble Mr. Hailey. In his minute to the Government of India on this matter he says the same thing. He says :—

'This section introduces a new principle in that it bases the assessment on annual value instead of income. 'Annual value' as experience in Municipal house-tax assessment proves, is a matter of very great difficulty to determine, and the effort of the Municipal Committee to do so leads to constant appeals."

" I submit, my Lord, this amendment to the acceptance of the Council."

6-13 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" The objection to the Hon'ble Member's proposal, which has a certain specious air about it, is that it would enable a house-owner who rents his house at a nominal sum to a relative to evade income-tax. A man may let his house at what we call a peppercorn rent in England to his nephew, his second cousin and all the rest of it, and next to no rent will be shown. The Hon'ble Member says he wants by his amendment to substitute net rent. That apparently would leave all the other clauses in action. The remaining clauses are to temper the full rent in respect of certain matters.

" I think it is absolutely the sound system—the system in England, the system everywhere I know—that in calculating house-rent you disregard these benami transactions, and you take the rent at what it is likely to be on a commercial basis. For these reasons I cannot accept the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

6-16 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" My Lord, the next amendment that I propose also relates to the same clause to which I wish to add the following proviso :—

'Provided that where the property is in the occupation of the owner the amount to be assessed as annual value of such property shall not exceed 10 per cent. of the aggregate income of the owner of the property.'

At this late hour I shall not detain the Council by any lengthy remarks of mine, but I should like to read to the Council the opinion of the Punjab Government on the subject of this amendment which I adopt. They say :—

'In some of the older cities and towns there are descendants of families formerly of good position but now decaying, who live on meagre incomes in capacious dwellings, occupying large and valuable sites and representing the last relics of their former splendour. The annual value of such houses would maintain them in a proper state of repair. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that some special powers should be given for dealing with cases of the nature described. Possibly a rule on the lines of rule 7 of the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, Notification No. 2763, dated 6th June 1890, as subsequently amended, limiting the amount to be assessed on account of the building occupied by the owner to 10 per cent. of the aggregate income of the owner from all sources might meet the case.'

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Mr. K. K. Chanda; Sir William Meyer; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir George Lowndes.]

"There is also the testimony to the same effect in the Census Report of Volume I, Pt. I of 1901, of Sir Edward Gait at page 23 where he speaks of decayed ancient families.

'Struggling to keep up appearances in an ancestral house built in more prosperous times.'

With these words, I submit, my Lord, this amendment to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"As the Hon'ble Member says, this limit that he wants to impose was brought in by the Government of India departmentally in a Notification of 1890. He now wants to stereotype it in the law. Well, having regard to the opinion expressed by the Punjab Government and other authorities that we consulted, that we owe consideration to decayed families living in their old ancestral homes, I accept this amendment. 6-18 P.M.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—"My Lord, I beg to propose that at the end of clause 8, the following words shall be inserted :— 6-20 P.M.

'Where the tenant undertakes to pay the land-revenue, local rates or municipal taxes in respect of the premises.'

With this addition the clause will stand thus :—

'For the purposes of this section and section 9 the expression 'annual value' shall be deemed to mean the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, where the tenant undertake to pay the land-revenue, local rates or municipal taxes in respect of the premises.'

"The position I wish to ha clearly expressed by means of my amendment is this: that you should x the income really at the disposal of the assessee. If a thousand rupees is is income and he pays Rs. 160 in the shape of taxes, the income at his disposal is really Rs. 840. Of course he cannot plead any private expenses in the way of abatement; but I think these are just deductions, and on the faculty theory on which the income-tax is based, I think he ought to be taxed on the amount at his dispcsal. To a certain extent it may be contended that the language of the section as it stands supports that contention, because if the tenant agrees to pay a certain amount of rent after paying the taxes, then certainly under this section, as it stands, the owner of the house will not be liable to taxation except to the extent of the rent that he receives from the tenant. But it might be contended that inasmuch as there is a specific exemption in section 9, and there is no exemption in section 8, that it was not the intention of the legislature to exclude the taxes under section 8. I wanted to make that perfectly clear. There is no real difference in principle between income derived for purposes of section 8 and for purposes of section 9. I therefore hope that the Government will be able to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"My Lord, I am afraid this is an amendment which the Government cannot accept. Personally I find some difficulty in understanding it. So far as it refers to land-revenue, land-revenue is already deducted before income-tax is assessed. So far as local rates and municipal taxes are concerned, it is a thing which is never allowed off house property in England or, I believe, anywhere else. Municipal taxes are a purely personal expense. You may have a house with water laid on, municipal water, and if you pay rates for it, that is paying for something in addition to the house. Supposing you have no water laid on you have to provide it otherwise. The man who gets water from a municipality will be allowed the municipal tax; the other who does not get it will receive no allowance. As far as I can understand it that is what my Hon'ble friend means. It is almost an absurdity. These local rates are just like personal expenses for which we do not allow abatement of income-tax. They are like the expenses for servants, motor cars, clothes, or anything of that sort. Expenditure on such things as municipal scavenging, 6-23 P.M.

[Sir George Lowndes; Mr. K. K. Chanda; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

etc., are treated as purely personal expenses and are not allowed in England. We do not propose to allow it out here."

The motion was put and negatived.

6-27 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"My Lord, this amendment is a small one.

'That in clause 12 (2), after the words 'the life of his wife,' the words, 'or his children or to make provision for their education or marriage expenses,' shall be inserted.

"In clause 12(2) provision is made for excluding from the computation any sum paid by the assessee to effect an insurance on his own life or on the life of his wife or in respect of a contract for a deferred annuity on his own life or on the life of his wife. My amendment seeks to insert after this 'or his children or to make provision for their education or marriage expenses.' We find there is a similar provision in clause 6(1)(ii) in favour of Government servants. I submit, my Lord, that provision should be made with regard to children in the case of the other sections of the community also."

6-30 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, this is a point that was very carefully considered in Select Committee, and the Select Committee were unanimously of opinion that we ought not to make allowance for insuring children. Here, again, we had before us the English practice where provision for the education of children is not allowed. It is quite obvious why. A man can, of course, put aside a considerable portion of his income in this way which escapes taxation. We have followed the English practice; we considered the point and thought it ought not to be allowed."

6-31 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"May I say one word, my Lord, in reply? I find in clause 6 (1) (ii) the following:—

'any sum deducted under the authority of Government from the salary of any individual for the purpose of securing to him a deferred annuity or of making provision for his wife or children provided that the sum so deducted shall not exceed one-sixth of the salary.'

"It does not appear why this has been made in favour of Government servants and not in favour of other people."

6-32 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, I think I may be allowed to tell the Hon'ble Member why. It was because in the one case it is a compulsory deduction; the man does not get it. Government deducts something from his salary, and therefore he does not get it; therefore it is not his income and therefore we have to allow it. When it is a purely voluntary payment as in the case of a provision for children's education, etc., the money is his own property which he can deal with as he likes, and the case is quite different."

The motion was put and negatived.

6-33 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, I beg to propose the amendment which stands against my name, and that is an addition to clause 14. The amendment runs thus:—

'That at the end of clause 14 the following proviso shall be inserted:—

'Provided further that, subject to such rules as may be framed in this behalf as to the return to be made where the assessee is an undivided Hindu family the tax payable by an undivided Hindu family on the aggregate taxable income of that family, shall be the total of the sums which would be payable by the several members of the family entitled to a share of such income if the family became divided on the 1st April of the year of assessment.'

"It might seem formidable when read, but I think the principle underlying it is very simple, and I think there is justice in support of it. I have briefly described in my note of dissent the reasons which urged me to record that note in favour of the amendment which I now propose. It seems to me, my Lord, that we depart widely from the principle on which we have based the whole Act, in treating for all purposes a Hindu family as a unit for purposes of assessment. I say we have departed from the faculty theory or from the ability theory completely thereby doing injustice to Hindus, and I shall explain how it is so. If four brothers constituting a Hindu family have an income of Rs. 1,000 and are treated as a unit, they will be taxed at 4 pies in the rupee. If they are separate each one gets an income of only Rs. 250 and none of the brothers is therefore liable to taxation. If a person gets an income of Rs. 999 he is not liable to taxation whether he be a separated Hindu, Muhammadan or Parsi, but if he happens to be a member of an undivided Hindu family getting Rs. 1,000, when he is less able to pay the tax, his share of the income being only Rs. 250, if he happens to be one of four brothers and when four members have to be supported on that income of Rs. 1,000, he is liable to taxation. As the family will be taxed, I do not think the framers of the Bill ever intended such consequences. Then, again, in the matter of the grade of taxation also the Act works injustice. If a family described above is getting an income of Rs. 3,200 it has to pay at the higher rate, but will escape taxation altogether if it be divided, each getting only Rs. 800. It may be said that for some purposes a Hindu family has got advantages, and consequently it must be reconciled to certain disadvantages also in being treated as a unit. I submit for purposes of taxation there are no advantages whatsoever, and the doctrine of survivorship that is generally invoked in favour of the family being a unit and a corporation, does not apply generally to all Hindu families. In the case of a Bengal Dayabhaga family that doctrine does not apply; its members are tenants in common and each one is entitled to a share; they are tenants in common in the eye of the law and their heirs succeed, there is no survivorship. In the case of others let us see how far they are benefited by this doctrine of survivorship. A death may occur in a generation. In the case of persons who have to pay probate and administration duties that is a ground on which a distinction has been sought to be drawn; the duty is 2½ or 3 per cent. That will have to be paid, say, once in 15, 20 or 30 years. Well, a Hindu family where the doctrine of survivorship applies is supposed to escape that. Not always but apart from that, the family has to pay at the lowest rate 2 per cent. every year and in general it will have to pay without including interest 60 per cent. in 30 years. Consequently, my Lord, the argument that families which are not Hindus are subjected to certain forms of taxation has no force. I submit, therefore, that on grounds of justice, as well as on the principle of income-tax administration, Hindu families ought to be treated exactly on the same footing as Muhammadan families or Parsi families or Christian families. My Lord, it is said that for administrative purposes there might be inconvenience in ascertaining what shares the several members of a Hindu family may be entitled to at any particular moment, that it would necessitate an annual inquiry. In the first place, we have provided in the case of firms an inquiry, of course where the firms are registered. Similarly, there can be no difficulty whatsoever in ascertaining who are the members of a particular Hindu family at the moment you want to tax them. But I would go further and state that the provisions enabling the Government to make rules render the administration of the Income-tax Act perfectly easy. I have provided that Government should take power to compel members of a Hindu family who wish to be treated for the purposes of taxation as a firm to make returns showing the number of shares each person is entitled to, and how many have to sign returns before any benefit can be obtained from the provisions of this clause. If Government should say that where there is a doubt as to what each member is entitled to, where there is any dispute, they would treat the whole family as a unit for the purposes of taxation, there would be perfect justice; and rules can provide as to the signing of returns by adult members showing exactly how the position stands at any particular moment. There is absolutely no administrative reason whatsoever why a Hindu family should be treated on a different footing from a Muhammadan family or a Parsi family. One word more. There are very delicate inquiries that would have to be instituted if a Hindu family is to be treated as a unit for all purposes; there is the question of self-acquisitions in the case of undivided families; there are questions of salaries and professional earnings of individual members. Those would have to be decided if the whole family is to be treated as a unit; whereas under my amendment there would be no such inquiry needed. The law as it stands would lead to the disruption of Hindu families and would penalise the Hindu family system. It may be said that the Act of 1886 has worked without any great hardship for a number of years, and a question may be asked why objection should be raised now. The answer is clear; we have introduced a graduated system of heavy taxation, and therefore several inconveniences which were not so obvious in the earlier state of the law would become accentuated under the law as it is to be enacted. Besides the fact of people bearing an evil for a long time is no justification whatever for injustice being done to them, especially when the injustice is pointed out. I hope the Hon'ble the Finance Member and the Council will be in a position to accept the amendment."

6-42 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, this raises a very debatable question which we have talked about in this Council on the Super-tax Act. It is impossible to accept this amendment, but we are quite willing that the Hon'ble Member's proposal should be circulated to Local Governments, and when we know what their views are, to reconsider the section. We cannot accept the amendment at present; it has never gone to Local Governments in connection with the Income-tax Bill, and it is a point which requires very careful consideration before it can be accepted. This course may very well meet my friend Mr. Sarma's views. Government are quite willing to give a promise that if the clause is carried in its present form, the question will be reconsidered when the next occasion arises. If necessary, an amendment can be made in the Act next Session."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I accept that and beg to withdraw the amendment."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"My Lord, I am sorry to detain the Council at this late hour, but this is the last amendment I shall propose......"

His Excellency the President:—"Is that an undertaking, Mr. Chanda?"

6-44 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—"Yes, my Lord, I propose an amendment—

'That in clause 15 (3) for the words from 'deduct income-tax' to 'specified in Schedule I' the words 'deduct such income-tax, if any, which the owner of the security may be liable to pay and at such rate as the Collector of the place where he resides or has his place of business may have determined' shall be substituted.'

The matter stands thus: any person whoever he may be, no matter what his income may be, who presents a security for getting interest shall be assumed to be the possessor of an income of Rs. 25,000 a year, and income-tax is deducted from that interest. The maximum rate is one anna on the rupee and it is payable on Rs. 25,000 and above. What is the effect of that? I can give one case and could give others. There is a Bengali lady residing in Benares, her whole income is the interest on Government securities of Rs. 500 which her husband left her. That is her income for the whole year. What will be the effect of the clause as it stands at present? She will present this to the Treasury officer at Benares, income-tax will be deducted at one anna in the rupee, assuming that she is worth Rs. 25,000 a year. This is a typical case and I could give others from my experience as other Hon'ble Members could also give. That is enough to show the hardship. No doubt there is a remedy provided for in this Bill. Clause 37 says 'If the owner of a security from the interest on which income-tax has been deducted in accordance with the provisions of section 15 satisfies the Collector that his total income in the previous year was less than any one, as the case may be, of the amounts specified in Schedule II, he shall be entitled to a refund of a sum calculated on such dividend, share of profits or interest at the rates specified in the same Schedule against each such amount.

" Now what does the remedy amount to ? The lady after having had the amount deducted from the interest has to satisfy the Collector, and what does this involve ? She must move the Collector and engage a lawyer, and her lawyer must produce evidence and prove a negative, that is to say, that she is not worth Rs. 25,000. She will have to produce evidence in Benares and also from the district from which she came. The Council can easily imagine what that means. Therefore the remedy provided in the Bill comes to nothing. My submission is that there is great hardship to poor people. Let her be taxed if she is really liable to be taxed, but my amendment proposes the words 'deduct such income-tax, if any, which the owner of the security may be liable to pay and at such rate as the Collector of the place, where he resides or has his place of business, may have determined.' I do not dispute that tax on securities should be deducted at the source that is the place where interest is secured at such rate as the Collector may determine.

" I submit, my Lord, this amendment for acceptance by Council. "

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—" My Lord, I mentioned this matter to the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer and pointed out that it was a real grievance. It is felt very largely by a number of poor Hindu widows who have securities of Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000. Interest is deducted and they have to apply for a refund ; they have not the means of doing so, and that is really hard. I hope the Government will see their way to accept the proposal." 6-47 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I cannot accept the amendment as it stands. It would cause, as far as Government and other securities are concerned, a great amount of trouble and it is quite impracticable. It would prevent the Public Debt Office from paying over any interest due to the individual holder of a security unless and until it was ascertained from the Collector the rate of tax leviable. As a method of facilitating the system of refunds, it is thus impracticable. Its only result would be to hold up the payment of interest on securities for an indefinite time, while throwing upon the Public Debt Office a volume of work which they would rightly refuse to undertake. The Hon'ble Mr. Chanda has also entirely ignored the case of bearer bonds, as regards which no information as to the actual holder would be available to the person paying interest. 6-48 P.M.

" As regards the question of facilitating refunds under our present system, I have interested myself in this matter for a couple of years, and I will read the gist of some of the rules which the Bombay Government framed on the subject, and which we commended to other Local Governments. As we have had no complaints on the subject since, I take it that the system now works smoothly.

" In the case of a promissory note, debenture stock or other security of the Government of India, the owner of a security claiming a refund on the ground that his total income warrants a lesser rate than one anna, must present to the Collector an application showing his income from all sources, and a statement showing the details of the Government of India securities held by him. On receipt of that application and the statement, the Collector, after making such inquiries as he may deem necessary as to the total income of the applicant, can issue a certificate of refund, if he is satisfied that the applicant is liable to tax at less than one anna in the rupee.

" If the applicant hands over the certificate of refund to the person empowered to pay the interest on the security of the Government of India, that is the Public Debt Office, then the Public Debt Office will deduct as income-tax from the interest due on such security, only the amount which follows on what the Collector has adjudged to be the rate of income-tax, the man has to pay, and will refund any previous over-payment.

" If an applicant fails to go to the Collector and get a certificate of refund in this way, then he can get a refund later on, but after some delay which the other system would have obviated. Special rules have also been made in the case of purdanashin ladies.

"As I have said, we have had no complaints of late. There used to be complaints before. So I submit that such valid grievances as there were, have been rectified by these rules, whereas the amendment proposed, of course with very good intentions, by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda would, if I may use a slang expression, put the fat in the fire again."

6-54 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"I should like to assure my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Bannerjea, that I have personally taken great interest in this question in order to devise some means of remedying the hardship to which he referred. I am satisfied, after a good deal of consideration, that the only possible way of dealing with it is the way my Hon'ble friend, the Finance Member, has proposed. If people will not go to the Collector and get a certificate, we cannot help them. They must do that. But I think that any Member interested in this question will see that it is quite impossible to have a sort of preliminary assessment every time when any is to be paid by the Public Debt Office. I can only say that this is not possible."

The motion was put and negatived.

His Excellency the President:—"Does the Hon'ble Member want to move the next amendment?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda:—I do not want to move the next *amendment.

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

6-57 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"My Lord, the next amendment that I wish to move is in clause 18, and it reads thus:—

After clause 18 the following clause shall be inserted :—

'18-A. The Local Government shall from time to time appoint in each district or part of a district two or more persons who are not Government servants, who shall be styled assessors, for the purpose of assisting the Collector in any inquiry under section 18. It shall be optional to any person, who has been served with a notice under section 18, to require that his cause shall be adjudged by the Collector and assessors, and on such application the Collector and two assessors selected in the prescribed manner, where more than two have been appointed, shall, after examining such accounts and documents as the Collector may require and hearing any evidence the assessee may produce and such other evidence as the Collector may require by an order in writing, determine the amount of the assessment. In the case of a difference of opinion the opinion of the majority shall prevail.'

"The object of this amendment is to associate with the Collector two or more assessors for the purpose of determining the amount at which an assessee is to be assessed to income-tax where the assessee requires that such a procedure should be adopted. This procedure is not novel to India and it obtains in several countries including the United Kingdom. The object of it is to interpose an authority between the tax gatherer and the assessee so that a balance may be preserved and nobody's interest may suffer. The criticism that can be levelled against the present administrative methods provided for India is that the representative of the State is also a judge both in the original stages as well as in appeals, and howsoever honestly a person may strive to do his duty, under those circumstances, it cannot always be possible for him to do

* That after clause 16 the following clause shall be inserted :—

'16-A. (1) The person responsible for paying any income chargeable under the head 'Interest on securities' shall within fifteen days from the 31st day of March in each year deliver or cause to be delivered to the Collector of the District a return in the prescribed form showing all persons who are owners of securities earning interest in his district and the amount of interest respectively payable to them.

(2) After receipt of the above return the Collector will proceed to inquire, in accordance with the provisions of clause 17 (2) or clause 17 (3) and clause 18, and determine the total income of the assessee for the previous year and assess the sum payable by the assessee for the year in which the return is made on the basis of such determination and inform the person responsible for paying the interest on the securities the rate at which income-tax, if any, is to be deducted from such interest.'

so, and even if he does so there is some suspicion in the mind of the assessee that the authority has been biased against him and in favour of the tax-receiving authority. There were numerous complaints in the earlier stages of the Income-tax Act administration that there was absolutely no chance of justice being obtained when once the Collector or assessing authority determined as to what the amount of the income was. All sorts of questions were put to the assessee who was asked to prove a negative. Of course, it is impossible for the assessee to do so, and it was felt useless to do so, and that the inquiry was a farce. Of course, complaints were not so numerous when the assessed limit was raised. But we have to foresee, as a legislative assembly, the dangers ahead especially in view of the fact that income-tax is becoming a very important source of revenue and is being more and more largely looked forward to as a source from which the exigencies of the State are to be met.

"It was only a million and odd a few years ago. It is now 6 millions and odd, and in troublous times it may be a source of temptation for getting a large revenue. Officers may not yield to the temptation, but still there would be legitimate suspicion in the minds of the assessees. I said therefore it will be respecting the elementary notions of justice to interpose an authority between the Collector and the assessee. It was by way of a compromise that I have arrived at the scheme which I propose in this clause. I want to follow the analogy of the Land Acquisition Acts, where along with the judge assessors are associated for the purpose of determining the amount of compensation that has to be paid. I will cite a few passages as to the law in other countries to show that what I am seeking here is not an unreasonable proposition, is not a visionary proposition. At page 250, Seligman on Income-tax, the position in the United Kingdom is described as follows:—

'The original assessment of the tax, it will be remembered, is placed in the hands of appointees and the Land Tax Commissioners, and these Land Tax Commissioners are non-salaried representatives of the local gentry, the tax-payers feeling that their interests are looked after by their own representatives and yet the interests of the State are guarded by careful supervision on the part of representatives of the Central Government. On the one hand, too much bureaucracy is eliminated, and on the other the risk of inadequate yield is averted.'

"Then in Germany, a country in quoting from which I shall stand at a disadvantage, the position is very nearly the same:—

'The majority of the Assessment Commission are elected, while the minority, including however the Chairman, are appointed by the Government.'

"And then appeal is permitted to a special Commission, one of which exists in every governmental district. This Appeal Commission is composed of members partly appointed by the Government, partly elected. In the case of the smaller tax-payers, that is up to 3,000 marks, no declaration is required, but an additional administrative body known as the Preliminary Valuation Commission is introduced. This Commission is also composed partly of appointed and partly of elected members, and is presided over by the village head or an appointee of the officials. The Assessment Commission is composed of a President named by the Minister of Finance, and of the members half are elected and half are appointed by the Government. The same thing obtains in Italy and other places, and, in 1860, a provision analogous to this provision was made by the Government of India in this country. I therefore submit, my Lord, that it is in the interests of the Government themselves, in order that they may not be misunderstood, that their motives may not be misconstrued, that they should interpose a body independent of their executive, to inspire confidence in the people that the Act will be administered justly and equitably."

7-4 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"The object the Hon'ble Member has in view recalls to my mind a Resolution moved in the Legislative Council by a Madras representative, my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Rayaningar. Mr. Rayaningar, in January 1914, moved a Resolution recommending that Local Governments should be consulted as to the desirability of establishing Advisory Boards, nominated by the Revenue heads of districts, to assist officials in the work of assessments under the Income-tax Act. At the same time some of the other Indian Members, those engaged in high commerce for instance, were very emphatic in their opposition. I remember Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola opposing the idea very strongly. However, we accepted the Resolution on the ground that it was advisable to consult Local Governments, and through them public opinion, as to the practicability and expediency of adopting this method of assessment. Now I will read parts of the Government of India Resolution issued in August 1915 after the views of all the Local Governments had been received :—

'The Government of India have now received the views of all Local Governments and Administrations on the subject, and it is found that the proposal has been widely canvassed and unhesitatingly condemned by practically all who were consulted. The general conclusion arrived at is that the creation of formal Advisory Boards would not improve the accuracy of assessment and would tend to make the tax more unpopular.'

"The chief objections advanced are summarised below :—

I. 'It is widely felt that business men would have the strongest objection to the disclosure of their accounts, and consequently of information regarding their financial credit and methods of business, to a Board composed of their neighbours and possibly including trade rivals. It is an accepted principle of Income-tax law that information of this kind, while necessary for purposes of assessment, should be regarded as absolutely confidential as between the State and the tax-payer, and the maintenance of this principle would be seriously endangered by the proposed system of assessment.

II. 'The principal utility of the proposed Boards would by hypothesis lie in their local and personal knowledge. It would therefore be necessary to appoint a special Board in each area of assessment.' That is what the Hon'ble Member who moved the present amendment proposed. 'The authorities consulted anticipate the utmost difficulty in obtaining men possessing the requisite standing and sense of public responsibility. This difficulty would be specially great in rural areas. It is also urged that, apart from other considerations, the frequent prevalence of local factions would enhance the difficulty of securing a Board which would command the confidence both of Government and the assessees.

III. 'The proposed Advisory Boards would be exposed to conflicting influences, the sense of their duty to Government on the one hand and, on the other, pressure implied or expressed on the part of the assessees, with many of whom they would necessarily have some personal or business relations. The position would be most difficult to sustain, and it is generally believed that qualified men would be reluctant to undertake the task.

IV. 'It is represented that private individuals are often found by experience to be unwilling to take the responsibility of tendering advice in a formal and public way.

V. 'The introduction of Advisory Boards would tend to weaken the sense of responsibility of the official Income-tax Collector. The duties which he performs are necessarily of an inquisitorial and somewhat distasteful nature, and it would not be an altogether unnatural result if he should display a tendency to throw as much responsibility as possible on the shoulders of the Advisory Boards.

'These opinions,' the Resolution went on to say, 'appear to the Government of India to be conclusive, and they do not therefore propose to take any further steps in the direction of requiring Local Governments to constitute formal Advisory Boards for the assessment of the tax.'

'The Government of India, however, do not desire to interfere with the existing practice by which non-official agency is widely employed in an informal manner in connection with income-tax assessments. It appears from the recent correspondence with Local Governments that in every province the assessing officer is required to seek information from persons likely to be acquainted with the circumstances of those already on the assessment roll, or who might be brought on it. In towns municipal commissioners and leading representatives of the different communities and of commercial and industrial interests are consulted; and in rural areas headmen, zaildars, and village panchayats where these exist. In one or two provinces small committee consisting of influential citizens, representative traders and manufacturers, are informally associated with Government officials in the work of assessment. The information thus collected is recorded confidentially by the Government assessing officer, and a further feature of the arrangements generally obtaining is that in each case efforts are made to obtain information from a number of independent sources with the object of correcting or eliminating as far as possible biased or inaccurate statements. Or, again, where questions of accounts are concerned, the assessee may be permitted, if he so desires, to have his books examined by a non-official commission and care is taken to select for such commissions gentlemen well qualified by their knowledge of business, their familiarity with systems of accounts, and by a reputation for trustworthiness.'

It will be observed that the non-official commission is merely advisory, and the Collector is the final authority subject to such appeals as lie against his decision.

'These expedients,' the Resolution continued, 'are legitimate and suitable, and it is understood that they have proved of material assistance in the work of assessing the tax. The matter, however, is one with which Provincial Governments are competent to deal, and it is unnecessary for the Government of India to do more than indicate their general approval of the methods employed, leaving it to Local Governments to maintain and develop the existing procedure on practical lines suited to the varying circumstances of the communities with whom the assessing officer has to deal.'

"Well, I stood by the policy enunciated in 1915 and I entirely stand by it now. We want, as far as possible, to get non-official association with the Collectors' assessments, but it must be of an informal and elastic character. At the present stage, having regard to the unanimous condemnation expressed of Mr. Rayaningar's proposed Advisory Boards, I cannot be a party to putting any hard and fast instructions into the Bill. Mr. Sarma would say that it is only optional. If the assessee does not like his accounts getting too well known, he need not apply for the services of assessors; he can deal with the Collector only. If he does not mind his circumstances being more widely known, then he can apply for assessors. But the assessors are not to be advisory, as assessors in a Sessions Court are. They are actually a commission of equal rank with the Collector, who would merely be primus inter pares, because I understand if the two assessors outvoted the Collector they would carry the day. Well, we cannot lay down any hard and fast rule of that description in the Bill. I am quite ready, as I said, to stand by the instructions issued in 1915, to emphasize them if need be; but not to have this cut and dried scheme."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—"My Lord, I am able to confirm a good deal of what my Hon'ble friend the Finance Minister has said with reference to the practice which is now followed in some parts of the country. I have some experience in the matter. Well, the Income-tax Deputy Collector comes to the representatives of the village and makes inquiries as to the financial position of those persons in regard to whom there might be some doubts, and the local gentry are always too willing to give the Deputy Collector such assistance as may lie in their power. I am in a position to say that that is done, and I myself have sometimes been asked by the Deputy Collector of the 24-Parganas to give information—not as a spy certainly—with reference to various persons who live in the same place where I live, especially with reference to those who claim exemption. That is the point upon which they especially want information. My suggestion would be, my Lord, to have that principle, which is already in operation, extended and whether it might not be possible in places where there are men capable of giving information to obtain this sort of information upon a more extended and systematic scale than is done at present. It would be quite an informal matter, but still if it is done informally I think the principle would be at work, and eventually it might lead to the creation of the Advisory Boards for which my friend contends. I desire to throw out this suggestion for the consideration of the Hon'ble the Finance Minister." 7-13 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"I just want to be quite sure of the Hon'ble Member's meaning. Do I understand the Hon'ble Member to suggest that we should inquire again of Local Governments, with reference to the part of the Resolution I read out about the informal employment of non-official agency. That, when the new law comes into operation, we should refer to this Resolution and ask them whether they can take any further steps ?" 7-14 P.

[Mr. S. N. Bannerjea ; Sir William Meyer ; His Excellency the President ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Rao Bahadur B. D. Shukul ; Mr. K. K. Chanda ; Mr. Khaparde.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Banerjea :—" That is my suggestion."

Th Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I should be quite ready to meet the Hon'ble Member in that way."

His Excellency the President :—" Does that meet you, Mr. Sarma ?"

7-15 P.M. The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma : —" Well, my Lord, I may say that I have no option but to accept what little concession may be shown. All that I may be permitted to state is, that possibly this Advisory Board system may lead sometimes to abuses and difficulties attendant on espionage, and, consequently, it may not always be possible to form Advisory Boards in the manner that is sometimes advocated. I quite see that. But the proposition that I have suggested is not for the formation of Advisory Boards, whose assistance it is open to the Collector to seek if he pleases, and whose advice it is optional with him to accept or reject. What I wanted was the association of assessors and commissioners in the position of judges, in the manner which obtains in other parts of the world. If the Local Governments were unable to accept the suggestions with regard to Advisory Boards I respectfully submit that the question of my proposition does not fall on the authority of the Local Governments, because they were never consulted on the question as to whether it would be possible to appoint commissioners to perform the functions which are being performed in other parts of the world. It may be that the Governments would say emphatically 'no.' I can quite understand that. The Local Governments may disagree with the suggestion that I have made ; I have not much hope there. Still the opinions that have been quoted do not go to support that.

" Then the Hon'ble the Finance Minister has already noticed the other point, namely, that it is optional with the assessee and so objection might sometimes be taken that commercial men would not care to have their accounts looked into. That objection would not prevail. But having regard to what has been said by the Hon'ble the Finance Member I shall leave it there, in the hope that he will see his way to asking Local Governments whether the suggestion made in this amendment is capable of practical adoption."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

His Excellency the President :—" Do you wish to press your amendment,* Mr. Shukul ? "

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—" No, I do not wish to press it."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" I withdraw the next two amendments† standing in my name."

The motions were, by leave, withdrawn.

7-16 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" This is a very small amendment‡. I believe it is implied in the section and I only want to make it clear."

7-17 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" I am ready to accept that amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

---

* That at the end of clause 18 (3) the following words be added, namely :—
'with the aid of two or more non-official local assessors appointed in accordance with the rules framed under section 43 of this Act.'

† That in clause 22 the word 'enhancement' be omitted, and that the following proviso be added to clause 22 :—
'Provided that where the Commissioner enhances the assessment the assessee will have a right of appeal to the Chief Revenue Authority.'

‡ That at the end of the proviso to clause 23 the following shall be inserted ;—
'either in person or by pleader.'

[14TH MARCH, 1918.] [Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul ; Mr. Khaparde ; Sir William Meyer.]

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—" My Lord, I withdraw my amendment which runs as follows :—

'That in clause 30 (1), for the words 'to the best of his judgment' the words 'with the aid of two or more non-official local assessors appointed in accordance with the rules framed under section 43 of this Act' shall be substituted.' "

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

7-19 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" This also, my Lord, is I submit a very small amendment.* There is in the existing law section 31 which empowers the Collector to compromise any claims for such time as he chooses to, and I think this section is very useful. In working the Act there may be contentious matters ; there may be accounts to be gone into and all that sort of thing, and the Collector, if such questions arose, might reasonably be allowed to settle them provisionally until they are adjudicated upon. That is part of the existing law, and I wish it to be retained as section 30-A. It will facilitate the working of the Act."

7-21 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" Well, we have not wiped out section 31 altogether as my Hon'ble friend appears to think, but we have changed its position in the Bill. After all this composition clause is not part of the primary machinery of the Act. It is merely a convenient method, an expediency method. Instead of making an assessment on A. or B. or C. every year, you say 'If your circumstances do not change very much, as a matter of convenience to you—and incidentally as a matter of convenience to the State—I will compound with you for three years or whatever it may be.' I say that is a relatively minor question of machinery, and so we thought it better to put it in the Miscellaneous Chapter under the rule-making powers. If my Hon'ble friend will turn to clause 43 of the Bill, sub-clause (2), he will find that such rules may provide for a system of composition of assessments and prescribe the conditions under which a Collector may enter into composition with assessees as to their assessment. So that I think the spirit of his amendment is really met."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" I was aware of that. My idea of it is that if the provision was embodied in the Act itself it would work better than if it was left to the rules. As it stands, it may happen that in some parts composition will be put in the rules, while in other parts it may not be put in the rules, and it was to obviate this that I brought forward my amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" Then my answer is that we thought over all that before the Bill was introduced, and we came to the conclusion, as I said, that composition was a matter of pure expediency, and it was desirable to relegate it to a minor place. For instance, when we enhanced the rates of taxation under the existing Act, two years ago we found that a certain number of people had been hurriedly entering into compositions in the sure and certain hope that they would thus be able to escape the effects of the increased assessment that intelligent anticipation showed them might be hanging over them. Well, it was not a sure and certain hope, because we had a special amending section, stating that section 31 should not apply, should be null and void, when there were alterations in the rates of assessment. That showed us among other things the inconvenience of having a purely expediency procedure put on the same level as the principal factors in the Act ; and so I stand by our method of relegating it to the rule-making powers."

The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" Then in that case I withdraw the amendment."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

---

*'That after clause 30 a clause reproducing the provisions of section 31 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1886, shall be inserted as clause 30-A.'

[Mr. K. K. Chanda ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; His Excellency the President ; Sir George Lowndes ; Mr. Khaparde ; Sir William Meyer.] [14TH MARCH, 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. Chanda :—" My Lord, I withdraw my amendments."*

The motions were, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" I withdraw my amendment† as section 4 has been amended and this is a consequential amendment."

His Excellency the President :—" Is that so ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" That is so, my Lord. The Hon'ble Mr. Sarma's last amendment falls under the undivided family head."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

7-24 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde :—" This also is a little verbal amendment. I want to omit in clause 51 (1) the words ' unless it (that is, the Chief Revenue-authority) is satisfied that the application is frivolous or that a reference is unnecessary' which seem to me to be wrong. I submit, my Lord, that if power is given to the Court to assess and fix the costs on a man needlessly insisting on a reference, I believe these words may be omitted. That was my object. Where punishment is to be provided against a person who proposes to make a reference without any cause, the punishment comes naturally by the Court awarding costs against him. With these words I hope my amendment will meet with the approval of the Hon'ble Member."

7-25 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—"We considered this matter very fully in Select Committee, and we came to the conclusion that this condition was a very proper and reasonable one. We do not want to bar any reasonable application to the High Court from the Chief Revenue-authority ; this was an idea which originated really with the Government in the original Bill ; but we do want to save the time of the High Courts from being wasted by frivolous and unnecessary applications. Any lawyer who is in this Council, as well as any person who has had a certain amount of worldly experience, will know that unfortunately there are certain people who are absolutely bent on making frivolous and vexatious applications, who have not the sense of due proportion. I may perhaps tell the Council a little story in this connection which happened many years ago. I was quite a young officer and a military man, a much older man than myself, was in the same station. He asked me to come with him to chota hazri one day and he consulted me about a case in which he had some property at Ootacamund, and in regard to which a suit he had brought had been thrown out by the local Subordinate Judge ; and he said to me ' Can I appeal ?' ' Well,' I said, 'I do not know much about civil matters, but looking at the Civil Procedure Code I do not think you can : the judgment is final.' ' Oh ' he said, ' cannot I appeal to the High Court on the ground that the Subordinate Judge was corrupt ?' I said, ' No doubt the High Court would take a petition into account on those grounds, but it is a very serious charge to make : what evidence have you against the Subordinate-Judge ?' ' Oh,' he said, ' he must be corrupt or he would not have given the case against me !' Well, you have a certain number of men of that class to take into account, and it is not sufficient, as my Hon'ble friend the mover suggests, to have costs given against them. They do not mind costs very often. They enjoy the litigation, and in the meantime the time of the High Court has been wasted. So I must decline to accept this amendment, and I consider that the Bill should remain as it stands, and that the Chief Revenue-authority should have discretionary power to reject frivolous or unnecessary references. By an unnecessary

2. ' That in clause 37, sub-clause (c) and the words " or please see formula interest " shall be omitted.'

† That after sub-clause (f) of clause 43 (2), the following sub-clause shall be inserted :—

' (ff) prescribe the manner in which a return is to be made, and the person by whom it should be signed, where the assessee is an undivided Hindu family.'

reference I mean—to give an obvious instance—a reference in regard to which the matter has already been decided quite clearly, or sufficiently clearly by analogy to render it an absolute waste of time to go up to the High Court again."

The motion was, by leave, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" My Lord, there is a small amendment standing in my name which runs as follows :— 7-27 P.M.

'That in clause 53 after the existing proviso, the following shall be inserted, namely :—

'Provided, further, that such repeal shall not affect the Super-tax Act, 1917, and any provisions of the said enactments which have been applied or incorporated by reference in the said Act shall, for the purposes of that Act, continue to be in force.'

We had hoped to have been able to bring in an amending Super-tax Act this year, but the Income-tax Act has been such a serious labour and we are getting so near the end of the Session that this will not be possible. We are therefore compelled to keep alive the old Income-tax Act, upon which the Super-tax Act is based, for another year. The amendment which I have the honour to move is to prolong the life of this antiquated and hoary Act for one year more for this special purpose only."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, I now move that the Bill as amended be passed. I should like to say how much we are indebted, in regard to the framing of this Bill and the consultations that had previously arisen as to its scope, to Sir George Lowndes and Mr. Muddiman, I cannot exaggerate the assistance, the ready and willing assistance, they have given us. 7-30 P.M.

"I think that, whatever difference of opinion there may have been between individual Members and ourselves as to particular clauses of this Bill, we may take credit to ourselves as a Council that the Bill, with its amendments, which is about to be passed is a great improvement on the existing Act, and that it will be a matter of great comfort to the assessees as well as to those who have to assess them. I move that the Bill be passed."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" My Lord, I join the Hon'ble the Finance Member in what he has said. I think we can take credit that this Bill has been passed in the form in which it has been. There is only one matter to which I should like to draw attention, and it is one which should give special satisfaction to our friend, the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, and that is an analysis of the voting which took place on clause 4 to-day. The result should gratify him, and every one who is interested in the future work of this Council. My Lord, the official Members of this Council were told that they were free to vote on that clause according to their judgment. The result has been that among the 30 Members who voted in favour of the amendment to clause 4, 12 were officials and of the 18 non-officials........." 7-31 P.M.

His Excellency the President :—" I do not wish to stop the Hon'ble Member, but this is hardly germane to the motion that we have before us, moved by the Hon'ble Sir William Meyer."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—" I bow to your Lordship's ruling, but I submit that on a motion that a Bill be passed we are entitled to comment on matters which arise out of the Bill. I will of course bow to your Lordship's ruling, but that has been the practice, my Lord."

His Excellency the President :—" I have expressed my wish to the Hon'ble Member ; the Hon'ble Member can see the clock."

The Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya :—"I bow to your Lordship's wish."

7-33 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah :—"My Lord, I congratulate the Government in consolidating the various Acts on the subject that were separate and scattered till now, because it will be most convenient for the public as well as everybody concerned with it that this law should be consolidated in the form of one Act. My Lord, before this Bill is passed, I should like to say a few words, and I cannot allow the Bill to be passed without saying a few words. The Hon'ble Mr. Sita Nath Ray, said that I played an official rôle, in opposing his amendment and he congratulated me upon it. Well, my Lord, I differ from him in that opinion...... "

The Hon'ble Mr. S. N. Bannerjea :—"I rise to a point of order, your Excellency. The motion is that the Bill be passed. Is it open to any Hon'ble Member to reply to observations which have been made in the course of the debate. I rise to a point of order because my friend, Mr. Sitanath Ray is not here. Is it relevant to the motion that is before the Council that the Bill be passed to refer to a discussion which has already taken place and to recriminations which I think ought to be...... "

His Excellency the President :—"The Hon'ble Member has risen before recriminations had begun. I am sure Mr. Jinnah will refrain from them. "

The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah :—"I was not going to indulge in any recriminations at all. All that I was going to say was this, and I am sure that my friend Mr. Bannerjea will endorse it, that it would be a matter of regret that any representative of the people in this Council should 'play an official role.' It is not a matter for congratulation, but I think that Mr. Sita Nath Ray has judged me, my Lord, by his own standard."

7-35 .M.P The Hon'ble Mr. M. N. Hogg :—"My Lord, owing to the lateness of the hour I will not take up the time of the Council by making any remarks about the changes that have been made in the Bill in Select Committee; but I just wish to take this opportunity of acknowledging the very fair and accommodating spirit in which the views of those whom I represent have been met by Government in Select Committee. "

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Monday, the 18th March, at 11 A. M.

APPENDIX A.

[Referred to in answer to Question No. 7.]

Correspondence with the Secretary of State for India on the subject of the separation of the functions of the Comptroller and Auditor-General.

Copy of despatch to the Secretary of State for India No. 186, dated the 11th July 1912.

As your Lordship is, no doubt, aware we have had under our particular examination for some time various questions relating to the improvement of audit and financial control in this country. The whole subject has for various reasons assumed of late a peculiar importance. The financial powers of the Government of India, for instance, have been defined with a new precision, and the issue of the Audit Resolution has added considerably to the powers and responsibility of our Accounts officers. The amalgamation of the Public Works with the Civil accounts again, by bringing into an immediate comparison two systems which had long developed in practical independence, has introduced new ideas of audit which are certain to have far-reaching consequences. Nor is the interest in the subject which has been aroused in this and in other ways confined to official circles; it has shown itself, as your Lordship will see from the records of the last two sessions, in the debates of our Legislative Council. We are convinced that we are on the threshold of a complete re-organisation of our audit system which, inasmuch as it will not only reinforce financial control in its different stages, but will re-act on every administrative department in India, may be described as perhaps the most important and urgent of the reforms which now press themselves on our attention. To clear the way for this reform and ensure for it a lasting effect the first and essential step is to provide a full-time and highly efficient head of the audit and accounts department. Our present Comptroller and Auditor-General is not only an auditor: he is a financial officer, burdened with many treasury functions of an executive nature. It is high time that these divergent duties should be divided and at the same time that the status of our chief audit officer should be enhanced in full proportion to the importance of his functions, and it is with a view to securing these objects that we have now the honour to address your Lordship.

2. In order to explain the exact position now occupied by the Comptroller and Auditor-General it is desirable, in the first instance, to refer briefly to the previous history of his department. Up to the time of the Mutiny the system of audit and account was wanting in cohesion. Each Presidency had its own system and its own staff, and, in the absence of uniformity of classification in the accounts prepared in each Presidency, there was, apart from other defects, no proper system for compiling the general accounts for India as a whole. The first reform of this system was initiated by a despatch from the Court of Directors in 1856, and consisted in an assimilation of the procedure prevailing in the different Presidencies, the formation of a general department of audit and account, and the creation of a post of "Accountant-General to the Government of India." In 1860 a Board of audit was formed, of which the first Member and President was the Accountant-General to the Government of India, who was to be known as Auditor-General of India. This Board, however, had a short existence. The audit system also continued to be very confused, and in 1865 a fresh inquiry into the whole matter was undertaken. As a result of this inquiry, the respective responsibilities of the administrative and the accounts departments were more clearly defined: accounts work was divided, the primary stage being assigned to treasuries, and the final stage to the Accounts office; and, in short, the department took on very much the shape which it retains to the present day. Its head was then styled Comptroller-General of Accounts, his duties being—

(1) the management of the public debt, pending the transfer of the duty to the Bank of Bengal;

(2) supervision of the accounts of treasuries under officers immediately subordinate to the Government of India; and

(3) administration of the central office of account, this item covering the whole duties of the Auditor-General as exercising the appropriation audit.

3. In 1870 the management of the Paper Currency was transferred from the officers of the Mint Department, to whom it had formerly been entrusted, to the Accounts Department, and it was resolved that the Comptroller-General of Accounts should be Head Commissioner of the Department of Issue of the Government Paper Currency. In 1880, on the introduction of a system of test audit to the offices not only of Civil but also of other accounts, it was arranged that this should be conducted through officers of the Comptroller-General, designated Deputy Auditors-General; the present form of the appropriation report was at that time introduced, and the title of Comptroller-General was changed to Comptroller and Auditor-General. Since then the status and title of the office have remained unaltered, but various changes have taken place in the duties attaching to it. Thus the detailed work of the Public Debt Office has been made over to the Bank of Bengal, though the general supervision and control of this work remain with the Comptroller-General, and new duties have been imposed by the Indian Securities Act, the Administrator-General's Act and the custody of securities lodged with Government officers. Under orders of 1882 he is associated with the Financial Secretary in the work of checking and compiling the budget and Financial Statements. And finally the scope of his duties as an Accounts Officer has been very greatly increased. The main addition to his work and responsibilities has resulted from the amalgamation of the Public Works with the Civil Accounts to which we have already referred; but he has further to audit the books of Government Presses and he is at present in charge of the accounts of the Military Works Services.

4. Apart therefore altogether from audit and accounts the Comptroller-General has at present multifarious duties to perform. They are:—

(1) The administration of the currency department,

(2) The administration of coinage,

(3) Control of Ways and Means including public loans,

(4) Custody of securities and disposal of public debt questions,

(5) Association with the Financial Secretary in the work of estimates, etc.,

(6) Submission to the Finance Department of opinions on questions of exchange, money market, purchase of silver, gold and silver reserve etc.,

(7) Preparation of Financial Statistics, Resource Estimates and other monthly returns, and his audit and account functions are growing in extent, in complexity and importance day by day.

5. The position seems to us to be a very serious one. To take first the financial side of the question, we are impressed with the fact that, in almost every branch of what we may call our treasury business, important problems are awaiting attention and investigation which it is a physical impossibility for the Finance Department and the Comptroller-General, as at present equipped, to afford to them. Thus in the case of our annual loans it is highly probable that a treasury expert in close touch with the chief markets throughout India would enable us to make our flotations in this country more elastic and more profitable, thereby reducing the amount to be borrowed in sterling at tangibly higher rates. The management of our Public Debt again is a matter in which we feel the need of an expert advice. There is every indication that it will soon be necessary for Government to take a much more active part in the direction of the Public Debt offices, unless they are prepared to agree to give to the Presidency Banks a higher remuneration for the work and the accompanying liabilities which are thrown upon them. Further we have not yet been able to take in hand the question of simplifying the form of the Promissory notes which we issue as security for our loans, though this matter is one which vitally effects the popularity of our Government paper. In connection with our Currency notes also there is much to be studied, with special reference to the effect of our new universal notes (and incidentally of our currency transfers) on the mechanism for private trade remittances inside India—a subject of which a more detailed knowledge than we are at present in a position to obtain is essential. Of the problems which may at any one time be indicated, it is true no doubt that some are only of temporary importance. But fresh problems are always coming forward. In matters of currency and finance these are of exceptional complexity. They have to be studied not only theoretically but on the basis of inquiry into actual conditions. For any thoroughgoing investigation of this kind we feel that at present our Finance Department is very inadequately equipped: it is not given the necessary material, and we feel it to be essential to give it further assistance.

6. The audit side of the question is, if possible, of even greater importance. The defects of our present system are obvious. There is a fundamental difference, we may premise, between the organisation in England and in this country. In England control is largely departmental; that is to say, there is in each department an accounting officer with a proper establishment whose duty it is to secure financial regularity and see that the expenditure of the department proceeds in accordance with Parliamentary sanctions, while the Comptroller-General with a comparatively small staff re-checks to an extent which varies in different cases the departmental accounts. In this country, on the other hand, the whole work of accounting and audit may be said to be extra-departmental and is conducted by a separate set of officers, independent of departments and subordinate only to the Government of India in the Finance Department. It is true that treasuries, which are our units of account and are under the revenue authorities, effect a certain classification of receipts and disbursements; but after this rough preliminary sorting the matter is taken in hand by the accounts department. It collects practically all the primary documents; it arranges, classifies and compiles the whole of the Government accounts; it audits at the same time against vouchers and certificates, against sanctions and against budget grants. The bulk of the work is enormous, and it has gone on increasing from year to year. To cope with it our establishments have been enlarged and it is possible that in the process the necessity of preserving a due proportion in the supervising and gazetted ranks has not sufficiently been borne in mind. It is certain at any rate that at the present time the department is overburdened with the mass of men of comparatively small intelligence in the lower grades. At the same time, and perhaps in consequence of this fact, the complexity of our codes has gone on increasing. Every trivial point has to be provided for by a set rule; nothing is left to discretion or judgment. The whole tendency of this evolution is mechanical. Everyone from the low paid auditor to the gazetted officer is swamped with work, and in a system of this kind it is work of a peculiarly uninteresting and deadening description. The auditor so far has undoubtedly paid too much attention to his tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and has neglected the weightier matters of the law. He is regarded therefore at the present time with irritation rather than with respect. The continuance of this state of things cannot be tolerated. Audit must be restored to its proper position; a new spirit must be infused into the department; it must be brought more into touch with realities; it must abandon unnecessary details; and at the same time develop the range of its activities and strengthen its position in various directions in which its work, while of very much greater importance, has been seriously neglected.

7. It will be obvious that for thoroughgoing reform of system which we contemplate it will be necessary to have a full-time officer at the head of the audit department. But the need of such an officer will not disappear when the reform has been accomplished; the need will be permanent. In comparing the position of the Comptroller-General under past conditions and in the future the first point no doubt to be made is the great increase in the volume of his work; the amalgamation of the Public Works with the Civil accounts in itself has raised the number of officers under his orders from 72 to 140. But more important than the increase in the volume of work is the change in its character. Even in the past it is true that the Comptroller-General has been nominally the head of all the accounts, but in reality his supremacy was established only over the Civil side of the department, and his connection with the great spending departments the accounts of which were under independent officers, such as the Accountant-General, Public Works Department, was very slight. All this has been changed by the amalgamation and by the new movement in audit to which it has given rise. Already the Public Works accounts have been added to his charge and this includes the Railway Department, the audit of which presents problems of first-class importance and great complexity. Here we have made a beginning. The Army has still to be dealt with. But, whatever may be the exact form given to the organisation in the different departments, it may be accepted as certain that the Comptroller-General of the future will be the final and effective authority in all matters of accounts and audit. The change in the conception of his position is fundamental.

8. We have no hesitation therefore in saying that for the proper performance of the duties now allotted to the Comptroller-General two experts are required. We require an expert financial adviser to Government and an expert in audit aud accounts. The interests involved are on both sides of the most serious importance, and it is false economy to entrust them all to a single officer, who, it is perfectly certain, will be incapable of covering the whole field with the thoroughness, the grasp of principle and at the same time the detailed knowledge which are essential in matters of this importance. We should like to add as a subsidiary but none the less important point that under present conditions the Comptroller-General is inevitably tied down to his headquarters in Calcutta. Whichever side of his duties is regarded, the result is unfortunate. The financial adviser to Government should move freely about India; he should be known to all the prominent commercial men; he should have every opportunity of making himself familiar with local conditions all through the country. Similarly the chief accounts officer should not depend for his knowledge of local offices, as he must do at present, on the reports of his Deputy Auditor-General. He should himself be in touch with the wishes, the complaints, and the views of his subordinate officers. Much also we are sure would be gained if he were in a position to know and discuss matters with the administrative officers in different provinces. In all questions of this kind, whether of pure finance or of audit and accounting, the advantage to be gained by personal intercourse is none the less substantial if its results do not admit of accurate statement, but under present conditions it is an advantage which is impossible of attainment.

9. It is worth while perhaps to point out that even forty years ago when the administration of the Paper Currency was transferred to the Accounts Department, the arrangement was not regarded as an ideal one. Even then the Government of India recognised that it was desirable to have a separate head of the Currency Department, but the state of their finances at the time was such that they found it impossible to incur the expense of new appointment and it may have been in this view that the appointment of the Comptroller-General as Head Commissioner of Paper Currency was declared to be until further orders. In any case what in 1870 was regarded as desirable has to-day clearly become inevitable, and we think that the whole of the purely financial business which the Comptroller-General transacts at present must be taken over by the Finance Department. This would involve the transfer of the following branches of work, so far as they are conducted in India :—

Mint and Assay;

Paper Currency Department including the Currency offices and the management of the Currency Reserve;

Council Bills and all questions connected with Exchange, including the management of the Gold Standard Reserve;

Rupee Loans;

Public Debt Offices;

Resource (or Ways and Means);

Treasury transfers;

Deposit and custody of securities.

To assist us with this extra work, we propose to appoint a special officer, who will make these subjects his own, who will be in steady touch with the Indian money market and financial opinion, and who will undertake the detailed executive work which is not at present referred to the Finance Department. He would be an officer of that department, either an accounts officer with special aptitude for this class of work, or of the Indian Civil Service, preferably with previous training in our Secretariat acquired in the post of Under or Deputy Secretary; and he would be assisted by a junior officer, either of the Indian Civil Service or of the Accounts Department. He would take over the sections of the Comptroller-General's office which at present deal with the class of work that we have mentioned. We consider that a suitable designation for this officer would be "Comptroller of Currency," though this does not cannote all the functions that he will exercise. Thus it will be necessary to appoint him to be 'Head Commissioner of the Paper Currency' under Act II of 1910, and he will be specially empowered under the Charitable Endowments Act. In regard to pay, it will, we think, suffice, if the incumbents are accounts officers, to give them their grade pay in the Department, with local allowances of Rs. 200 and Rs. 100, respectively; if they are not in the graded list of the Finance Department, we suggest that their emoluments may suitably be fixed at Rs. 2,500—100—3,000 and Rs. 1,000—50—1,250, respectively.

10. If this separation of functions is accepted, it remains to consider the position of the chief audit officer in India when he is left with nothing but the semi-judicial functions of audit and accounting to perform. In the past the Auditor-General and his staff have been under the executive control of the Government of India in the Finance Department, but while that position was intelligible when these were largely financial officers with large and responsible duties in the realm of resource, currency and other branches of pure finance, it will cease to be either intelligible or defensible when those duties fall from the Auditor-General and leave him a pure and simple auditor and account officer. We are prepared also, and indeed we consider it essential, to increase substantially the status of our chief audit officer. We propose therefore—

(1) That the Auditor-General should be appointed by the Governor-General, and that he should be removeable from office only by the Governor-General. This is already the practice, but we think it right that it should be definitely and permanently recognised as one of the conditions of the appointment;

(2) that he should have the right of direct access to the Governor-General; and

(3) that he should draw a consolidated pay of Rs. 5,000 per mensem without Exchange Compensation Allowance.

11. In making these proposals we have not overlooked the fact that we had some difficulty in 1907 in persuading your predecessor to accept a proposal to raise the pay of the Comptroller and Auditor-General from a fixed pay of Rs. 3,500 to a pay of Rs. 3,500—100—4,000. The conditions, however, have been radically changed since that time. We have pointed out that the work of the chief audit officer has been greatly increased, and it is not an answer to this argument to say that he will now be relieved of his treasury duties, for it is plain that this relief will do no more than place him in a position to give to his audit work the attention which its high importance demands but which in the past has been impossible. We have noted also the change in the quality of his work; but we should like to supplement what we have already said on this point by a reference to the character of the Appropriation Report. In the past this report has been confined practically to a laborious comparison of figures, and though this comparison secured one of the principal requirements of audit by checking expenditure against budget grants, it is admitted that the report has not been of much authority and has received little attention. Our intention is that in future it should deal in a much more direct manner with audit objections of all kinds which seem to the Comptroller-General to be of sufficient importance to be brought prominently to the notice of superior authority, and we think that it should be addressed to the Secretary of State, being forwarded through the Government of India for the record of any observations which they may desire to make. The writing of the report under these new conditions will be a difficult and delicate task. But the broadest and most general ground on which we base our proposals is the high importance of improving and strengthening audit in India, and the first and essential step is to confer on the head of the department, from whom it cannot fail to take its general tone, a status commensurate with the important and difficult duties which he will have to perform. In England we understand that the post of Comptroller and Auditor-General is one of the most highly paid and most esteemed in the Civil Service, and in this country where the position of our Finance Department is by no means so strong as that of the Treasury at Home, while the extra-departmental influences, the force of public opinion and the strict examination of accounts by a Parliamentary Committee which re-enforce the efforts of the auditor in securing financial regularity are absent, the case for strengthening the position of the chief auditor is even more conclusive. Yet at present our Comptroller and Auditor-General draws a pay which is less than the pay of the Secretaries to the Government of India; he ranks as a matter of precedence only just above Commissioners of divisions (in their respective charges) and Chief Secretaries to Local Governments, and he is in fact a subordinate of the Finance Department. The position thus assigned to him appears to be in a high degree inadequate. We have proposed therefore to make it plain that in future the Comptroller-General is to be subordinate only to the Governor-General, and to give him the right of direct access to His Excellency. It is necessary also to enhance his pay, and, as we consider that he should be recognised as one of the highest officials in India, we cannot recommend any pay of less than Rs. 5,000 a month as sufficient. We should like to add, as we have pointed out in the first paragraph of this despatch, that the subject which we have been discussing is one which engages much public attention; and as it has been raised already in resolutions and questions in the Legislative Council, it is almost certain that it will again be pressed on us in the coming cold weather. We mention this, however, merely as an additional argument for deciding the matter without delay. Our proposals are in no way a concession to pressure from without. They have been gradually evolved after a searching examination of the merits of the case. They are essential in our judgment for the reform and proper maintenance of our audit system, and we sincerely trust that they will commend themselves to your Lordship.

12. Two minor points remain for consideration. The first is what title should be given to the new chief audit officer. He might be called simply "Auditor-General," and it is true that there is not in this country the same historical justification or meaning in the term Comptroller-General which exists in England. On the other hand, it is not the case as might be supposed that in India the double title refers to the combination in the same appointment of executive or financial and of audit functions. There is no special reason therefore for making a change, and on the whole we should prefer that the chief audit officer should continue to be known as Comptroller and Auditor-General. The second point is concerned with the sources of recruitment for the post. At present the appointment is generally restricted to members of the Indian Civil Service employed in the accounts department; but it may be given to a non-civilian officer of that department, in which case the approval of the Secretary of State is necessary, or occasionally to an Indian Civil Service officer outside it. No change in the field of recruitment is therefore necessary, but we think it must be recognised that if the status of the post is raised, as we propose, the chances of an accounts officer being selected may be considerably reduced. The result is one which we regret. It will be noted however that the department will gain whenever one of its members is appointed. It will gain further by the new appointment of Comptroller of Currency for which its members will be eligible. It is doubtful therefore whether on the whole its prospect will be unfavourably affected, and, as the prizes of the service will be increased, recruitment should be aided rather than embarrassed. In any case we cannot undertake even ordinarily to make our selections within the department; indeed it may be suggested that there would be a distinct danger of the work again becoming stereotyped unless fresh blood were occasionally brought into it. But apart from this the whole of our case rests on the conviction that the work is of first-rate importance and responsibility. Our proposals will, we believe, enable us to obtain the services of a first-class officer,
